"Fiat Money," Cry Republican Foes

Morgenthau Assailed in Senate for Sending Expert to China.

The House yesterday, within four hours, passed three major pieces of legislation, setting a speed record for this session:

The Dies silver purchase-farm relief bill was passed by a vote of 257 to 112 after two hours of debate, authorizing the Treasury to issue certificates against foreign silver received in payment for agricultural surpluses.

The Bankhead cotton control bill, limiting output to 10,000,000 bales this year and levying a 50 per cent tax on cotton ginned over that limit, passed by a vote of 251 to 114.

By a voice vote, the chamber approved the Administration's new Philippine independence bill, granting freedom to the islands in ten years, and authorizing the Philippine legislature to draft its own constitution.

By Robert C. Albright.

In the face of Republican cries of "dumping" and "fiat money," the House yesterday suspended its rules and swept to passage the Dies silver bill, sanctioning foreign silver payments for American farm surpluses.

Despite Administration silence, the remonetization measure received an 11-vote margin over and above the two-thirds majority required to suspend the rules. The vote was 257 to 112. Only 18 Republicans joined 234 Democrats in the drive for passage, as farm relief, inflation and silver blocs combined forces.

White House silverites hailed the victory as the opening wedge for new monetary legislation. Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., ordered a silver survey in China by Prof. James Harvey Rogers, a White House adviser on money matters.

Borah Hits Morgenthau.

The move was assailed at once in the Senate by Senator Borah, insurgent Republican, and Wheeler and King, silver Democrats. Senator King charged Morgenthau with "dragging a red herring" to divert Congressional silver action, and denounced the assignment as a direct afront to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

In the 15 minutes of floor debate,

Americans Quizzed in Spy Case

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Switz, long imprisoned in Paris in connection with an alleged spy syndicate, were questioned for hours yesterday by French officials. The nature of the grilling was kept secret, but it was announced afterward that more arrests would be made. The Switzes formerly lived in East Orange, N. J., and New York.

Credit Banks Sought to Aid 'Little Fellow'

Charters for 12 Sought by Roosevelt to Lend Capital.

Purchase of Obligations Set Forth in House, Senate Bills.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

On word from the White House, Administration bills to set up under the Federal Reserve Board a system of credit banks with authority to divert millions into working capital for private industry were introduced in both Houses yesterday.

President Roosevelt launched this newest attack against one of the most laggard sectors of the New Deal campaign for recovery in letters to Senator Duncan U. Fletcher and Representative Henry B. Steagall, chairman of the Senate and House Banking and Currency Committees.

Expressing himself "deeply concerned" with the plight of small industry, whose working capital in many instances "has been lost or seriously depleted," he proposed immediate relief in the form of 12 credit banks, with one to each Federal Reserve district.

Two Bills Introduced.

Bills to accomplish this end, providing for the purchase of such obligations from other banks and financial agencies and "in exceptional circumstances," for direct loans to industry, were immediately brought forth by the two committee chairmen.

Declaring that "our improved condition nationally furnishes full justification" for recovery efforts in behalf of agriculture, commerce, the larger industries and financial institutions, President Roosevelt said a Nation-wide survey had convinced him of the need of such help for smaller enterprises.

Estimates based on reports from 4,958 banks and 1,066 chambers of commerce, he said, showed that about $700,000,000 of such capital is now required; that this would continue 346,000 in employment and provide new work for some 378,000 additional men and women.

This method of pumping credit into a business class sorely hit, in some instances, by provisions of NRA, gradually evolved during the winter. As finally crystallized, it bears the approval of the Federal Reserve Board, whose governor, Eugene R. Black, has been one of the chief conferees on the plan.

The President made no mention, it was noted, of the RFC proposal set out by Chairman Jesse H. Jones to enlarge this agency's powers to embrace direct lending to individuals. This gave support to the opinion this alternate, or supplemental, plan to aid small industry is not backed by the White House, even if not specifically opposed.

12 Chartered Banks.

Twelve credit banks recommended by Mr. Roosevelt would be chartered by the Federal Reserve Board in Reserve bank cities, with virtually

Decision on Auto Strike Due In 24 Hours; Roosevelt Keeps Watch as Plant Heads Meet

Air Subsidy Hit by New Senate Bill

O'Mahoney Opposed to White House Draft for Mail Hauls.

Indicating Democratic dissatisfaction with the Administration air-mail bill, Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, and three of his party colleagues introduced a bill to divorce the transportation of air mail from subsidies for aviation.

The bill would require and pay for the transportation of air mail on the same basis as the carriage of mail is now handled by the railroads. In a statement Senator O'Mahoney explained that if aviation needed a subsidy, it should be provided through the Commerce or some other department and not be charged to the cost of handling air mail.

Meanwhile Posmaster General James A. Farley revealed that virtually all the airlines whose mail contracts were canceled more than a month ago had asked for a hearing. He said he would reply to these requests some time this week, but he did not disclose what his answer would be.

Eight Routes Resume.

For the first time in a week air-mail planes were again in operation wnen the Army Air Corps resumed flights on eight routes. No accidents were reported, but the Associated Press reported that late in the day bad flying weather caused postponement of the 1:30 p. m. run from Atlanta to Washington.

With "safety first" the motto of the day, the Army service was on schedule in other parts of the country, dispatches indicated. Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the Air Corps, was in the Middle West checking operations of his men. All air-mail planes were grounded Sunday a week ago after ten fatalities. An eleventh Army flier was killed Saturday during a practice run on a mail route in the West.

The Senate Postoffice and Post Roads Committee continued hearings on the McKellar-Black or Administration bill to revise the air-mail laws. This bill provides for awarding air-mail contracts to private companies on a revised basis, including lower rates and barring from the bidding those contractors pressing claims under old contracts.

Three Criticize Air Bill.

The committee heard Crail Hunter, vice president of Northwest Airways; Harlan Hull, president of the TWA Pilots Association, and C. B. Munro, president of the Pennsylvania Airways. The three witnesses criticized the bill as "unfair" and urged returning the air mail immediately to private airlines. Munro denied the Mellon family dominated his company, as has been charged. He said the Mellon family owned only 2,400 of 26,312 shares of the airway stock.

Whatever plans the Administration decided on Sunday in the way of revising this air-mail bill were not revealed, but it was believed

Insull's Life in Peril As Ship Fights Gale

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Athens, March 19.—A raging storm on the Mediterranean endangered the life of Samuel Insull tonight as the world speculated on his ultimate destination.

Huge waves pummeled and tossed his expensively chartered little tramp steamer Maiotis, which creaked and groaned in the terrific wind, and it was feared the most famous of all present-day fugitives from justice might collapse with another heart attack.

Insull, a poor sailor on a fair day, was believed facing grave danger. On his first flight from Greece last week, the 74-year-old former utilities magnate suffered a heart attack in good weather, was seasick and could not eat, requiring medical attention.

The freighter was believed well off the coast, cruising in a zigzag course, awaiting final instructions from the shore as to the possible places Insull might use as a haven from arrest by American authorities.

Syria, Persia or Abyssinia were given in various quarters as possible destinations.

Others advanced a theory that he might change ships at sea and head in a different direction.

In Paris, it was reported he could go to Syria without danger of detention by the French Government because Syria is only a mandated country. In Washington, the State Department prepared to take "appropriate action" to bring Insull back to Chicago. London officials said they would do anything in their power to meet any American request in case Insull tries to land in British territory.

There is considerable gossip about the price Insull paid to charter the ship and his heavy expenses since he fled from the jurisdiction of American courts.

His present search for a refuge has cost more than $20,000, it was estimated.

Staying in Athens for a year and a half cost him between $60,000 and $80,000, reports said.

Reconciliation Sought By Insull, Is Report

Athens, March 19 (U.P.).—Samuel Insull today was reported seeking a "reconciliation" through President Roosevelt which would permit him to repair the damage done during the collapse of his far-flung public utilities empire in America.

The Chicago fugitive was credited in these latest rumors with having instructed "influential friends" in the United States to arrange a reconciliation.

Intervention In Prospect

Let Workers Decide on Union; Green Replies to Attack.

Walkout Is Set For Tomorrow

Manufacturers Assail A. F. L. in Final Plea to Employes.

Whether the country is to be plunged into the most serious labor strike in years, a strike that would seriously threaten the National Recovery program, will be determined in the next 24 hours.

In New York yesterday the leading figures in the automobile industry were meeting in a last effort to keep the wheels of their industry going.

Shortly after 8 o'clock last night the Associated Press reported that with the terse statement "progress is being made," the directors of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce recessed until today.

In Washington, President Roosevelt kept a close watch on developments with the prospect that he would personally step in to bring about a solution if employers and employes fail to get together. During the afternoon he conferred with Attorney General Cummings on the legal aspects of the situation, indicating the possibility that court action might be resorted to in an effort to enforce NRA labor provisions.

A. F. of L. Under Attack.

In Detroit, automobile manufacturers issued a new statement to their employes, declaring the American Federation of Labor is "trying to destroy the present satisfactory arrangement between you and the management under which your rights to collective bargaining are fully recognized."

In answer to the statement of the automobile employers, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, declared last night that there is no question of the labor organization running the automobile industry, but merely the question of the right to organize "without coercion and intimidation from the automobile manufacturers."

"Let the automobile workers decide for themselves whether they want a company union, an independent union, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, or no union at all," Green said.

Let Workers Decide.

"Under the National Recovery act, the workers have a legal right to make such a decision. I challenge the automobile manufacturers to meet this issue and let the workers decide for themselves. The Ameri-

Stock Control Bill Redraft Given House

Modified Measure Today Gets Committee Hearing.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Substituting flexible and discretionary provisions for the rigid requirements of the original Fletcher-Rayburn securities exchange bill, Representative Sam Rayburn late yesterday introduced in the House a redrafted compromise stock market regulation bill.

The measure was the work of the committee of Treasury, Federal Reserve, RFC and Congressional experts which has been working for more than a week to alter the stock market bill in order to meet the more substantial objections raised by Wall street spokesmen and others to the original bill.

This bill, containing many of the changes forecast in The Washington Post on March 12, was referred to the House Interstate Commerce Committee, which will hear representatives of the Treasury and Federal Reserve Board on it beginning today. Rayburn is chairman of the committee.

The attitude of Senator Duncan U. Fletcher and members of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, of which he is chairman, to the new measure have not been disclosed. Fletcher called a meeting

U.S. 'Obligated' To Depositors, Kean Declares

McLeod Bill Asks Assets of Closed Reserve Banks Be Liquidated.

The "moral obligation" of the Government toward depositors in closed Federal Reserve Banks was stressed by witnesses before the RFC sub-committee of the House Banking and Currency Committee at a hearing yesterday on the McLeod bill.

The measure, of which Representative McLeod (Republican), Michigan, is author, authorizes the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to purchase the remaining assets of all member banks of the Federal Reserve System, pay off depositors in full, and liquidate the assets over a 10-year period.

In addition to presenting petitions from a dozen States, one bearing 94,382 signatures, Representative McLeod told Chairman Prall (Democrat), New York, that more than a score of Representatives have asked to appear on behalf of the bill.

The first day's witnesses, including Senator Kean (Republican), New Jersey, insisted that under the Federal Reserve system, there was an implied promise to the people that their money was safe.

Senator Kean also criticized the Administration to date of provisions of the Glass-Steagall act, intended to relieve depositors in closed banks. While the intent of the measure was good, he said, the Comptroller of the Currency and others charged

Big Navy Bill Is Approved In Conference

Passage in Both Houses Seen; 102 Ships and 1,184 Planes Voted.

An agreement on the Vinson-Trammell bill authorizing construction of the American fleet to treaty strength within five years was reached last night by House and Senate conferees.

The measure provides for the construction of 102 ships of all categories at an estimated cost of $400,000,000 to $900,000,000 and 1,184 airplanes at a cost of $96,000,000.

The conferees agreed that alternate ships in each category must continue to be built in Government Navy yards as at present.

A maximum of 10 per cent profit to bidders on the new ships or aircraft is specified.

The Senate conferees compromised with the House and reduced from 25 to 10 per cent the number of airplanes required to be constructed in Government plants if this is held feasible by the President.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, of the House Naval Affairs Committee, said he would offer his report to the House some time this week. Chairman Trammell (Democrat), Florida, of the Senate Naval Committee, plans to do likewise.

The measure has the support of the Administration and quick approval is expected in both Houses.

Daniels Leaves Border.

El Paso, Tex., March 19 (AP). Ambassador Daniels departed for Mexico City today after addressing several thousand El Paso and Jaurez school children at a meeting here. He stressed the necessity for friendship and good-will between the United States and Mexico.

Barnard Calls Reformatory "Powder Keg"

Committee Rejects Charge of Graft; Shoemaker Promises Fight.

Lorton Reformatory is a "powder keg" which needs only the spark of leadership to explode into the worst prison rioting in the Nation's history, M. M. Barnard, superintendent of District penal institutions, yesterday told the investigating committee which exonerated him and other officials of graft and corruption charges.

Stating that the prisoners already are uneasy and aroused, and speaking of Representative Shoemaker's announced intention to continue attacks against the institution, the aged prison head told the committee that if Shoemaker keeps on with his charges serious results may follow.

Shoemaker termed the committee's report "a whitewash by a self-admiration society," adding that "I haven't even started to fight. If necessary I will lay this little baby on the White House steps. I know the President won't tolerate such conditions. The only ones at Lorton on a keg of powder are Barnard and his officials."

Probe Bill Pigeonholed.

Representative Shoemaker's resolution authorizing a Congressional inquiry of Lorton and all Federal penitentiaries has struck a snag. It was learned from an authoritative source that the bill has been pigeonholed and will not be reported this session.

Stressing the fact that Lorton—without walls, crowded and without sufficient guards—would be helpless if prisoners decided to

Dillinger's Pal Pulls Surprise

Asks End of Murder Trial Because He Opposes Death Penalty.

Lima, Ohio, March 19 (AP).—Two surprise legal maneuvers, one each by the State and the defense, took the trial of the Dillinger gangster, Russell Clark, out of the doldrums of jury picking today.

First Clark's attorney, Clarence C. Miller, objected to the whole proceedings on the ground that Clark does not believe in capital punishment.

After the objection had been overruled, the State disclosed a plan to call Louis P. Piquett, Chicago criminal attorney, who came to Lima to represent Clark and now faces a charge of attempted bribery and disorderly conduct.

County Prosecutor Ernest M. Botkin said he intended to subpena Piquett as a rebuttal witness. Piquett was an attorney for John Dillinger, at Crown Point.

Clark is the third Dillinger gangster to go on trial here in as many weeks. Harry Pierpont and Charles Makley already have been found guilty and sentenced to death in the electric chair for killing Sheriff Jess Sarber when Dillinger was liberated from jail here October 12. Clark is charged with being a member of the raiding party.

In arguing his objection, Miller pointed out that Judge E. E. Everett had excused 37 prospective jurors because they did not believe in capital punishment.

Auto Thieves Miss $3,000.

Buffalo, March 19 (U.P.).—Thieves stole Alfred Thatcher's automobile at Erie, Pa., and abandoned it here without noticing a bag containing $3,000 worth of jewelry on the floor.

Orientals Hail Ruler's Bride, Happy at Pope's Dispensation

Hue, Annam, French Indo-China, March 19 (U.P.).—The hearts of the populace of the capital were warmed today by the arrival of the young woman, a commoner, who is to wed their ruler this week and become Empress of this tiny tropical realm.

The fiancee of Emperor Bao Dai, French-educated and westernized monarch of Annam, is a pretty 19-year-old girl namen Marie N'Guyen Huu-Hao. Like her royal suitor, she was educated in France and is a Roman Catholic.

Pleas to the Vatican gained special dispensation from Pope Pius XI, it was announced by the authorities in the capital here, and national rejoicing followed. The 21-year-old ruler is highly popular with his subjects, and his gesture in raising a commoner to the throne with him has endeared him to his people.

The four-day ancient wedding ceremonies will start tomorrow. The rites conclude with the traditional Asiatic wine-drinking ceremony.

At dawn the ceremonies begin with the old Chinese custom of informing the departed ancestors of the impending marriage. The young emperor's father is dead, but a court dignitary in the robes once worn by the former emperor will take his place, burning a paper altar on which are written the name and age of the bride.

The bride and bridegroom, despite their preference for occidental methods, must be married in richly brocaded gowns studded with jewels. The bride is a naturalized French citizen, and the oriental ceremony must include the French civil marriage form.

The young emperor, who likes dancing, tennis and ping pong, announced he would raise his bride to imperial rank. She is the daughter of a wealthy Cochin-China family.

Ohio Attorney Kills Wife, Self

R. B. Newcomb, Cleveland, Hacks Mate With Ax, Then Cuts Throat.

Cleveland, March 19 (AP).—As a climax to a nervous breakdown, one of Cleveland's most prominent attorneys, Robert B. Newcomb, 61, hacked his wife to death with an ax while she slept early today, and then committed suicide by slashing his throat with a razor.

Coroner A. J. Pearse asserted two other persons in the Newcomb home, who were asleep at the time, were lucky to have escaped. They were Millard, 35, one of the couple's two sons, and Mrs. Mabel Warner, aged mother of Mrs. Newcomb.

A maid discovered the tragedy in the home in fashionable suburban Cleveland Heights. As Coroner Pearse reconstructed it, Newcomb went to the basement about daybreak to get the ax.

Returning to Mrs. Newcomb's bedroom, he struck her on the head with the blunt end several times. Placing the ax beneath the bed, the lawyer then went back to the basement and cut his throat.

Millard said his parents retired late last night, apparently in harmony.

300 Mexicans to Leave Ohio for Native Country

Death of Weirton Child Laid to Sleep Sickness

Weirton, W. Va., March 19 (Spl.).—Hancock County health authorities today began investigating the death of Paul Wolfe, jr., 4, from what the attending physician declared was sleeping sickness. The child had been in a coma for four weeks.

France Calls For Soldiers

Hitler Demand to Re-arm Brings Campaign to Swell Army.

Paris, March 19 (AP).—Apprehensive over the demands of Chancellor Adolf Hitler that Germany be allowed to re-arm, the government today announced a plan to swell the army's ranks by inducing young conscripts to reenlist "in order to avoid the hazards of job-hunting now."

The army also invited all unemployed young men in France who have left the ranks in the last five years, to enlist for new short terms.

The announced purpose is to reinforce the army with short-term recruits because the regular conscript classes are beginning to slack off in numbers, due to the low war-time birthrate.

Special recruiting will begin in April, an official communique said. Certain "specialists" will be offered 18-month terms and others may enlist for six months. All enlistment requirements will be lowered.

One of the reasons ascribed to the government's action today is the desire of the armed forces to police all defenses along the Rhineland. The border bristles with camouflaged underground fortifications.

Kentucky Law Decrees No Nudist Knotholes

Frankfort, Ky., March 19 (AP). Nudist colonies may settle in Kentucky, in accordance with a bill that became a law today, but they must build 20-foot walls of brick, stone or concrete around their premises and pay the State an annual license fee of $1,000.

Gov. Ruby Laffoon permitted the measure to become a law without his approval or disapproval. A nudist colony would be required to keep a register of its inhabitants which would be open to the inspection of State officials.

Hotel Man Robbed At Fredericksburg

Fredericksburg, Va., March 19 (Spl.).—Hit on the head with a revolver and robbed of almost $300 in cash and jewels, Karl Herr, proprietor of the Mary Washington Hotel, saved a platinum ring with two diamonds, which he values at $1,500, by throwing it on the floor of a dimly lighted hall here this afternoon.

After rifling his cash register of $30, two young bandits forced the proprietor to walk upstairs when a party of people entered the lobby. On his way, Kerr dropped the ring on a soft carpet.

Drink-Crazed Man Kills Wife and Self

Norfolk Couple Survived by Four Children.

Norfolk, Va., March 19 (Spl.).—Said to have been crazed by drink, Clarence C. Wagner, 45, today, shot his wife to death, then cut his throat before turning the gun on himself.

The tragedy was discovered by Mrs. Mary Nelson, a neighbor.

Wagner was not dead when the police arrived and he endeavored to make a statement. He died before he could speak. Neighbors declared the Wagners had been quarreling recently. The couple are survived by two sons and two daughters.

Farley Intimates Democrats May Turn Back on La Follette

Postmaster General James A. Farley seized one horn of a political dilemma yesterday by intimating the Democratic party would support Charles Broughton for United States Senator from Wisconsin against Robert M. La Follette.

Senator La Follette is a leader among the Senate Progressives who left their party to support Roosevelt in 1932. He is reported to have turned down a place in the Cabinet, but has been, nevertheless, on extremely good terms with the White House.

However, the long-inert Democracy of Wisconsin has shown signs of coming to life and asking support from Washington. This is believed to be the reason for Farley's decision to back Broughton in the primaries on September 18.

The Postmaster General also declared yesterday that all collectors of internal revenue and of customs should resign from the Democratic National committee, of which he is chairman. He pointed out that because such individuals have charge of collecting large sums of money for the Government, they should be above suspicion politically.

Three National committeemen, Hector H. Perry, North Dakota; Horatio J. Abbot, Michigan, and Joseph Wolf, Minnesota, are listed as internal revenue collectors for their States.

Farley was asked if he thought Mrs. Carrol Miller, of Pennsylvania, should give up her post. Mrs. Miller is a sister of Joseph Guffey, Democratic leader of Pennsylvania. The Postmaster General said he didn't think so.

Guffey is a candidate for the Senate.

The intimation that "Young Bob" La Follette would have to shift for himself in the primaries next September came when Farley stated at his press conference, "It looks to me as if the Democrats wanted Charlie Broughton."

Without Democratic help, La Fol-

New U.S. Crime LawCurbAsked By Cummings

(Associated Press.)

The Government through Attorney General Cummings yesterday asked new legislative weapons to crush an organized underworld, "that has more people under arms than in the Army and Navy of the United States."

Illustrating his testimony by reference to the Dillingers, Touhys and Capones, Cummings requested the Senate Judiciary Committee to approve six measures which would give Federal authorities power as formidable in its field as the machine guns and sawed-off shot guns of the criminals.

The Attorney General said the Government did not wish to usurp State power and that it was not the duty of the "Government generally to preserve peace and order in the various communities of our Nation."

"I am convinced, however," he said, "that we need expansion of the Federal penal statutes to include control over the unlawful activities of those who deliberately take advantage of the protection afforded them by State lines in perpetrating their crimes.

Crime Called Business.

"Those who use the fast means of travel, the swift methods of communication to escape from the scene of their crimes—those classes of criminals who seek to earn their living by threats and violence, moving about from one State to another to avoid detection, require the attention, in my opinion, of the Federal authorities. It is to curb their depredations that these bills are directed. To them crime has become a business—a cold, hard, calculating enterprise."

Indications are the measures asked by the Attorney General would be acted on in both Houses at this session. Apparently there is little opposition.

The committee listened attentively while Cummings told of some of the gangs with which the Government is at war. He said the Touhy band in the Midwest was "notorious for torture," but that the Capone organization, headed by Murray Humphrey since Al Capone went to Atlanta, was of a "much higher type."

Gang Profits Large.

"It is not so brutal as the Touhys," he said, "and not so likely to take off a man's ear or gouge out his eye."

One of the bills proposed, a consolidation of several bearing on the subject, is aimed directly at racketeering whose returns, Cummings said, ran into "millions upon millions." It would define such offenses as violations of the Constitution's interstate commerce clause and would make them felonies where they are "accompanied by extortion, violence, coercion or intimidation."

The Attorney General said heretofore "the nearest approach to Federal prosecution of racketeers as such has been under the Sherman antitrust act" and that it was ineffective.

Dillinger Curb Sought.

This measure also would extend the provisions of the Federal law against transporting stolen automobiles across State lines and would make it a Federal offense to transport virtually anything of value.

Senator Robinson (Republican), Indiana, asked Cummings whether the proposed legislation would give the power necessary to "stop John Dillinger who has ignored State boundaries and who is now reported to have flouted an international boundary by going to Canada."

"Yes," Cummings replied. "We have a bill now before the committee which makes it a criminal offense for lawbreakers to pass from one State to another to avoid prosecution."

Board Grants 10 Days to Bar Liquor Permits

Virginia Group Will Hear Objections to Beer, Wine Licenses.

Richmond, March 19 (AP).—The alcoholic beverages control board today announced that it would grant no wine or beer licenses until ten days after March 22 and, in that time, will permit objections to be filed to the requests. On the advice of Maj. Edwin H. Gibson, assistant attorney general, the board also ruled that notices of intentions to seek licenses, already published, fulfill requirements of the law and need not be reposted.

The rulings were made after an all-day session, the first formal meeting of the new liquor commission. Gov. Peery attended and said afterwards, "On close range, this looks to me like a very fine board."

The board, in a formal statement issued from the offices of T. McCall Frazier in the division of motor vehicles, said that application forms are being printed and will be forwarded as soon as possible to those who have requested them.

Du Pont Heir, Bride Fly on Honeymoon

They flew on their honeymoon trip to the Bahamian isle in the same small monoplane in which the 23-year-old Du Pont and his sister, Alice, recently returned from South America and Caribbean islands.

Politics and People

By Elliott Thurston

Politically, as well as in the immediate consequences to economic recovery, the battles now being fought on the labor front are vital to the Roosevelt Administration. Aside from the obvious fact that a major strike would seriously cripple industry, the Administration is face to face with a fundamental issue upon which either the industrialists or the leaders of organized labor must surrender. For the Administration to take either side would alienate powerful political support.

The issue as it seen in Washington, has been inherent in the much debated Section 7a of NRA from the beginning. Until the present it has bene compromised or postponed, but now it is definitely out in the open and destined for a final settlement unless one side or the other backs down. It is not a question simply of collective bargaining or of unionization. It boils down to a contest between nationally organized labor and company unions. It is the American Federation of Labor against the company union.

* * * *

The automobile industry has been chosen by the leaders of organized labor for the battleground because the industry is one of the largest. It is leading the recovery parade. It has been NRA's star performer. Many of its leaders have been foremost in supporting the principles of NRA and the Administration's policies of shorter hours and higher wages. A victory in this field, paving the way for organized labor to supplant the company union, would give organized labor one of the greatest triumphs in its history.

The Federation of Lebor has lost paying members since the depression. Its total membership in 1933, according to its last report, was 2,126,796. In the boom period the membership was close to 3,000,000. Company unions sprang up rapidly under NRA's Section 7A requiring in every code an agreement guaranteeing "that employes shall have the right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing . . ." and stipulating that no employe shall be coerced "to join any company union . . ."

Organized labor read this as an edict against the company union, and has fought ever since to have it so construed, or to write it clearly into law either by amendment of Section 7A or in the pending Wagner bill, which has precipitated the determined resistance of industry. In every conspicuous case in which company unions have been formed, organized labor has protested and appealed to the National authorities, charging coercion, company interference and demanding Government-supervised elections. So far as a legal test is concerned, it was raised in the case of the Weirton Steel Co., when its founder, Ernest T. Weir, refused to let the Labor Board conduct an election, refused to recognize officials of the A. F. of L., and now stands cited to the Attorney General.

* * * *

In the meantime, the automobile industry offered to organized labor an ideal battleground to force and fight the issue out as a practical and political contest. The issue can be deferred again, or one side or the other can give in, but the principle at stake, as it is seen in the Capital, is whether industry is to be compelled to submit to nationally organized labor. Opposing industry seems determined to stand out to the bitter end against surrender on this fundamental. The federation seems equally resolved to go through with the battle to a finish.

To leaders on both sides, the principle rises above the immediate effects upon recovery. Industry's spokesmen fear a dictatorship by unions which will be even more powerful than Government itself, and unlike Government exist beyond the reach of the public. Union leaders fear that if they fail to win this great advantage now, National unions are doomed.

For Mr. Roosevelt or his Administration to support the Federation would antagonize some of the most powerful business interests in the Nation. To support industry wold be to risk losing organized labor. Organized labor was a large factor in Mr. Roosevelt's nomination and election. Unquestionably, the New Deal's inclination is to back the worker rather than the employer.

Faced by one of the most difficult of choices, involving great political consequences, can the Administration find a way out? That depends upon how resolute the contentants are, whether they can be put off by supplication, or whether public opinion can be mobilized to swing the balance. Since the issue involves a vital principle it hardly lends itself to compromise.

The struggle of the Railway Brotherhoods for higher wages is wholly different; there the unions already possess the field. Machinery exists for adjudication so that a strike tying up transportation, is not imminent. The issue in the automobile industry not only deeply affects recovery, including the fate of NRA, but it presents a challenge of the utmost importance to the political future of the Administration.

NRA 'Spending Orgy' Attacked By Rep. Taber

Lays More Acute Distress to Measures of Administration.

A "terrific orgy of extravagance" likely to result in an $8,000,000,000 deficit, July 1, was charged to the Roosevelt Administration last night by Representative John Taber (Republican), New York, in a radio talk.

He declared NRA caused "greater and more acute distress."

"The so-called NRA," Taber added, "started around July 1 at a time when business was improving; when employment was increasing. It required employers to raise the hourly rate of wages and reduce the number of hours. It raised prices.

"The raising of prices stopped buying. As a result, the farmer was paying more than he could pay and business did not move; employment was reduced, and while there were more people on the pay roll, the pay roll was smaller."

Taber contended the Democrats were preventing recovery by flying in the face of economic laws.

"Thousands upon thousands of small businesses have been ruined. Small manufacturers and merchants have suffered tremendously as a result of these operations. Many of them who otherwise could have ridden through the storm and continued in business will be ruined. Every move that has been made by the NRA and the AAA has been to tie and fetter them," he continued.

Taber argued devaluation of the dollar "has completely demoralized industry and where it has raised prices it has clogged channels of trade."

Heavy public works expenditures were discredited by Taber as productive of few jobs. He said more money was spent on American relief in one month by $60,000,000 than England spent in one year on the dole. He added:

"It is the announced policy of leaders of that group which seems to have control of the Administration to have a planned state where the professors tell manufacturers and farmers what they must do and what wages they must pay. "These things can result in but one thing. A completely planned state where there is no liberty of action on the part of any man. Outright Communism!"

Cudahy Declares Wife Melancholy

Packer Says She Often Planned Suicide.

Milwaukee, March 19 (AP).—Testimony that his wife was often intent on suicide by poisoning, razor slashing and strangulation was given today by Michael F. Cudahy, millionaire packer. As the trial began in his divorce suit against Mrs. Alice Dickson Pinto Cudahy.

Cudahy testified he once found an old fashioned straight edged razor under his wife's pillow. "Then it occurred to me," he said. "For the first time that she might take her life."

James Shaw, Cudahy's attorney, read into the record a letter written by Mrs. Cudahy to her husband in 1928, while she was at a sanatorium in Massachusetts. The letter was signed, "Your Insane Wife."

Rainey Tallies "Good" G. O. P. Votes in House

(Associated Press.)

The Administration's willingness to be nice to helpful Republicans was reflected yesterday in the disclosure by Speaker Rainey that he is having a record kept of Republican votes.

Rainey was asked about the tabulation he ordered of House Democrats' votes on 21 Administration proposals. When he told reporters about the Republican list, one asked.

"Does that mean you're going to trade bad Democrats for good Republicans?," but he denied anything like that was in mind.

Just Want to Know.

"We want to know what Republicans are for us," he said. "There's a possibility that we might not fight some of them so hard for reelection if their record is good, as we would if it were bad."

It was made clear in other Congressional circles that whatever decision was made, there would be no Administration support for a Republican who is running against a Democrat. Should, however, a "good" Republican have no opposition save by another Republican, or an independent, it was indicated that the one who had voted right would get at least tacit support.

No Attack on Strays.

It was emphasized, likewise, that the Democratic Congressional Committee had no intention of seeking to defeat in primaries the Democrats who had strayed off the reservation.

Representative Byrns, of Tennessee, party floor leader who also is chairman of the Democratic Congressional Committee, said that committee would support Democrats "as it always has."

Byrns said he had no intention to use Rainey's list of Democratic votes, while Rainey declined to say what use, if any, he would make of it.

But it was remarked that newspaper publication of the fact that the tabulation was being made apparently assured passage yesterday of the Bankhead compulsory cotton control bill.

Princeton, N. J., March 19 (U.P.).—The grave of former President Grover Cleveland in Princeton Cemetery was decorated with two wreaths today, one the gift of President Roosevelt, the other sent by the Federal Government.

John Roosevelt Is Now Minus One Recalcitrant Appendix

First Lady Stands By; "Everything Fine," Says Doctor.

The patient's condition was pronounced as "fine" by Dr. Ross T. McIntyre, White House physician. Earlier in the day, Mrs. Roosevelt waited nearby while the operation was performed.

The appendix had been troubling young John, who was 18 last Tuesday, off and on for sometime, and when he complained of pains in his side again Sunday, an operation was determined upon.

A senior at Groton, where he is active in athletics, John was visiting the White House over the week-end. It was in the nature of a family reunion in observance of President and Mrs. Roosevelt's twenty-ninth wedding anniversary and their son's recent birthday.

After a word with his father, John Roosevelt went to Naval Hospital in the morning and was followed a short time later by Mrs. Roosevelt, who remained in another room while the operation was in progress. The appendix was removed by Capt. Ralph W. McDowell, chief surgeon, assisted by Commander J. W. Allen and Lieut. Comdr. William Small.

Pennsylvania Youth, 19, Dies After Car Crash

Chambersburg, Pa., March 19 (Spl.).—Glenn Wingert, 19, of near Shippensburg, died today in a hospital here of a fractured skull received when a car in which he was riding struck a pole between Greenvillage and Scotland.

The driver, Guy W. Koser, and Miss Helen Dern, both of near Shippensburg, escaped injury. Coroner A. W. Through, of Franklin County, is investigating.

Norfolk Airport Use Denied Firm

Richmond, March 19 (AP).—Permission for temporary use of the Norfolk airport by the Witch Duck Aeroplane Corporation was revoked by order of the corporation commission here today pending a formal hearing April 2.

Permission was granted by the commission on March 7 to John W. Gurkin for the firm to use the Norfolk Airport while Hudgins Field on Virginia Beach boulevard, was being conditioned. The authorization was dependent on no complaint being made to the original order.

Roanoke to Hear Speaker.

Roanoke, Va., March 19 (Spl.). Dr. Ralph Van Deman Magoffin, head of the New York University classics department, will speak Wednesday night at Roanoke College in Salem, and Thursday night at the Jefferson High School here.

Moron Is Sought In Boy's Slaying

Ohio Police Probe Mystery Death of Child, 13.

Tiffin, Ohio, March 19 (AP).—Investigations of the mysterious death of 13-year-old John Summers continued today with police injecting a theory he may have been slain by a moron. Abrasions were found on the boy's neck.

Mrs. Ralph Summers, mother of the boy, found his body Saturday in the woodshed behind his home here, beneath a rope that for several months had been hanging from a rafter.

At first it was believed the lad had fallen while climbing in the shed and that the rope had tangled around his neck, untangling after he died. Officers said they found no motive to support a theory of suicide.

*Cold Zone can spoil even the warmest of Hospitality

*COLD ZONES . . . . those drafty, chilly spots that caused so much discomfort in your home this winter.

IT always seemed to happen just when the game got most exciting . . . guests lost interest . . . there was an unmistakable shiver . . . then came the inevitable request for a wrap. Somehow, apologies never covered your embarrassment when the cold zones in your home made your guests uncomfortable.

Your home has its individual charm, you want your guests to be comfortable, and yet, certain spots in your home never seemed comfortable. It was not only embarrassing, but decidedly unpleasant for your family on those cold, biting days when the temperature dropped to or below zero, and the wind whistled a challenge to your cozy comfort.

Right now — before another winter sends its bitter, chilly blasts, like it has this winter, to threaten your comfort, even endanger your health — find out how little it will cost to enjoy the cozy, healthful warmth of American Radiator Heating. CONVENIENT TIME PAYMENTS make it so easy to be prepared against even the coldest weather. Just use the coupon!

F. J. Braendle, 89, Art Expert, Linguist, Dies

Pension Office Translator 37 Years; Funeral Set Tomorrow.

Fred Joseph Braendle, internationally known art authority and a translator of foreign languages at the Pension Office for 37 years, died Sunday at his home at 911 Monroe street northwest. He was 89 years old and a native of the Canton of St. Gall, Switzerland.

Mr. Braendle, recognized as an authority on the old masters and who sold W. W. Corcoran several fine statues now in the Corcoran Gallery of Art, came to the United States in 1875 to take charge of the art exhibit of the Italian Government at the Philadelphia centennial.

At the Centennial Mr. Braendle met Mrs. Rose Anne O'Beirne, widow of Felix G. O'Beirne, and their wedding followed. Mr. Braendle retired in 1920.

Mr. Braendle was the author of "Word English. A New World Language. Together with a Simple Phonetic World Alphabet." During his retirement he maintained a large herb garden at Marist Seminary.

After completing his education in Switzerland, Mr. Braendle entered the art business at Florence, Italy. He also was a zouave in the Papal guards at Rome. In 1873 he was in charge of the Italian Government's art exhibit at the Vienna Exposition.

Survivors are his widow and his daughter, Josephine, the wife of William A. Miller, of Washington. The funeral will be tomorrow at 8:30 a. m. from the Hines Funeral Home with requiem mass at the Church of the Sacred Heart at 9 a. m. Burial will be in St. John's Cemetery, Forest Glen, Md.

Harry O'Donnell Services Today

Funeral services for Harry O'Donnell, 68, of Vienna, Va., a retired employe of the Government Printing Office, who died Sunday at Sibley Hospital of heart disease, will be held at 2 p. m. today at the Nevius undertaking establishment. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. O'Donnell, a native of Mound City, Ill., came to Washington in 1889. He moved to Vienna in 1930. He was a member of Federal City Lodge, I. O. O. F., and of the Lebanon Lodge of Masons.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Mary O'Donnell; four daughters, Mrs. Helen Marini and Mrs. Milton Broome, of Washington; Mrs. William McCoy, of New Mexico, and Mrs. Rexford Swartz, of Vienna, Va., and a son, Charles W. O'Donnell.

Mrs. McConville Is Buried Here

Charity Worker Is Buried at Rock Creek.

Last rites for Mrs. Katherine Flather McConville, 56, of 1868 Columbia road, who died Saturday after an illness of eight months, were held at the residence yesterday at 2 p. m. Burial was in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mrs. McConville is survived by her husband, Arthur H. McConville; a sister, Mrs. George Felt, and five brothers, former Police Capt. Colin E. E. Flather, William J., Edwin D., John A., and Henry H. Flather.

John Calvert, Kin Of Notables, Dies

Heart Attack Here Fatal to Philadelphian.

Heart disease caused the death of John Calvert, 79, of Philadelphia, Sunday in Raleigh Hotel.

He was a descendant of Lord Baltimore, colonizer of Maryland, and of Dr. Benjamin Rush and Richard Stockton, signers of the Declaration of Independence. He also was related to John Parke Custis, stepson of George Washington.

Mr. Calvert was in Washington on business when he became ill. He is survived by his wife and a son, Cecil Baltimore Calvert, New York. The body was sent to Philadelphia for burial.

Son of Jersey City Mayor Is Injured

Lexington, Va., March 19 (AP).—Frank Hague, 27, Washington and Lee University Law School sophomore, was in a critical condition in a Lexington hospital as a result of an automobile accident.

Hague, the son of the mayor of Jersey City, N. J., was returning from Lynchburg last night when the accident occurred between Buena Vista and Lexington.

Pinned beneath the car, he suffered a fractured pelvis and internal injuries. Hague's companion suffered leg injuries.

Miss Margaret Deane Will Be Buried Today

Miss Margaret Deane, proprietor of the dress shop of Howard & Deane, at 1017 Connecticut avenue, died Sunday at her home in Chevy Chase of heart disease. For many years she had been in business here and formerly was associated with Mrs. M. J. Hunt.

Surviving Miss Deane is a niece, Mrs. Archie L. Straub. Miss Deane was the daughter of the late James and Margaret Taylor Deane. Funeral services will be held today at 2 p. m. at her home at 3816 Gramercy street northwest. Burial will be in Alexandria.

Fish Eggs Hatched While You Wait

Post Staff Photos.

The wiggly objects in the top picture are embryonic white fish just hatched from 400,000 eggs brought to the Bureau of Fisheries from Put-In-Bay Station on Lake Erie. The hatched fish will be taken to lakes in Western Maryland, where they will grow to an average of three pounds. In the lower picture, eggs in jars are kept in continuous motion through constant circulation of water.

House Passes Silver Bill And Acts to Free Philippines

Senator Borah called on Secretary Morgenthau to produce the data on which he based charges that advocates of silver legislation are "not entirely disinterested."

Secretary Morgenthau told newspapermen Prof. Rogers will sail in a day or two to determine how higher silver prices might affect trade with the Orient.

"There seems to be two schools of thought on that question," he said. "The first holds increased prices will mean greater exports from the United States to China. The other believes if silver prices are increased, China will have to curtail imports. Rogers will find out which is right."

Fiesinger to Press Bill.

Elated over House passage of the Dies bill, Representative William L. Fiesinger (Democrat), Ohio, announced he will press at once for a vote on his bill for purchase of 1,500,000,000 ounces of silver "to restore 1926 commodity prices."

Under a last-minute change in strategy, the Fiesinger bill was not put to a House vote yesterday, proponents preferring to have it called up under the general rules of the House, when a bare majority might pass it.

Quoting Democratic authorities in an appeal for sound money, Representative Robert Luce, Massachusetts, ranking minority member of the House Banking Committee, led yesterday's fruitless assault on the Dies bill.

"The purpose of this bill is to sell surplus agricultural products below cost to foreign countries," he said. "That is 'dumping,' and Congress has repeatedly set its face against it. Inevitably it will lead to retaliatory action from abroad."

Fears "Fiat Money."

He charged the United States already is using "fiat" money and the Dies bill would widen the breach with "sound money."

Representative Eltse (Republican), California, charged the bill benefits speculators by fixing a 25 per cent premium on silver, establishes a farm subsidy, and paves the way for "a silver racket."

Defending the measure as providing a "stabilizing" influence for silver, and offering early relief for the farmer by improving his foreign market, Representative Morton Dies (Democrat), of Texas, author of the bill, led the push for passage.

"It has been intimated in some quarters that the Administration is opposed to the bill," he said. "That is not so. I have written letters to the President asking his opinion of this measure. He could have stopped it before it got out of committee had he wanted to."

Seis Up New Board.

He said he also had invited Secretary Morgenthau and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to state their opposition, and they had not done so.

The bill would set up an "agricultural surplus exchange board," comprising the President and the Secretaries of Treasury, Commerce and Interior. They could negotiate with foreign countries to sell American agricultural surpluses, and accept silver bullion in payment, at a value not in excess of 25 per cent of the world market price.

The bullion would be deposited in the Treasury, and silver certificates, negotiable as legal money, issued against it. Farmers' cooperative market associations could sell farm surpluses abroad on the same basis.

"The President has the power now to do what's in this bill," Representative Fitzpatrick (Republican), New York, insisted.

Wheeler Raps Treasury.

The assault of Senate silver Senators on the Treasury's white metal policy was opened by Senator Wheeler, who outspokenly disapproved of Prof. Rogers' trip to China.

Senator Borah took up the discussion, with a suggestion that Secretary Morgenthau make public the names of silver advocates the Treasury intimated last week are interested in silver speculation.

"I suppose there are some," said the Idaho Senator, "just as there were some advocates of the gold bill who profited from it."

When Wheeler remarked Morgenthau had informed him he was not referring to Congressmen, Borah replied:

"I am not just interested in members of Congress."

"It was a very unfair statement the Secretary gave out and reflected on every member," Senator Wheeler said.

Referring to the Rogers assignment, Senator Borah declared "some program is always being proposed to delay decisive action on silver."

"Stupid Move," Says King.

"Let us now have a definite and specific program and action on the part of the legislative branch," he said.

Senator King insisted the Senate Foreign Relations Committee should have been consulted before Prof. Rogers was designated to make the China survey, pointing out that Chairman Key Pittman of the Senate committee had made a special trip to the Orient to study the situation.

Labeling the proposal "the most inept, not to say stupid, move," Senator King declared it would "not put the silver question to sleep."

He predicted the Fiesinger silver purchase bill, already favorably reported by the House Coinage Committee, will reach a vote in both Houses.

500 Delegates Attend Dental Clinic Session

Five - State Organization Opens Meet at Shoreham.

Opening session of the Five-State Post-Graduate Dental Clinic yesterday drew more than 500 delegates to the Shoreham Hotel. The gathering concludes tomorrow with a discussion by Dr. Russell W. Bunting.

Dr. Frank M. Casto, of Cleveland, president-elect of the American Dental Association, was guest speaker last night at a banquet. Dr. W. W. Wyman, president of the District Dental Society, presided.

Guests of honor were Senators Shipshead and Copeland, Commander Harvey, vice president of the American Dental Association; Commissioner Allen, Dr. Hugh S. Cumming, Public Health Service; Dr. Robert U. Patterson, U. S. Army; Dr. P. S. Rossiter, U. S. Navy; Dr. Harry Bear and Dr. Willard Camilier, trustees of the association; Dr. W. Coleman Nevils, president of Georgetown University, and Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University.

Fraternity groups will meet at a luncheon at the Shoreham tomorrow. Dr. Clyde Schuyler, of New York University, will address the group today. Dr. F. Blaine Rhobotham will be another speaker.

Air Subsidy Hit In New Senate Mail Measure

O'Mahoney Would Divorce Companies From All But Earned Profit.

certain that the clause which would require bidders for new contracts to waive all claims under canceled contracts would be stricken from the measure.

The group headed by Senator O'Mahoney, including Senators John E. Erickson, of Montana; M. M. Logan, of Kentucky, and George McGill, of Kansas—all Democrats—however, apparently believed this would not be sufficient but that the basic system of paying for air-mail transportation should be changed.

Former Postal Official.

The quartet are members of the Postoffice and Post Roads committee and have attended the hearings of the last week on the Administration bill. In addition their action was significant because Senator O'Mahoney until his appointment to the Senate was First Assistant Postmaster General in charge of air mail.

The bill sponsored by the group would require the Postmaster General to file with Interstate Commerce Commission a plan for transporting air mail and a schedule of rates required by him as reasonable. All airlines would be required to carry mail under the rates and terms prescribed by the Commerce Commission.

The Interstate Commerce Commission would be authorized under the bill to determine reasonable rates. Pending determination of that question the rates suggested by the Postmaster General would prevail and should higher rates be decided on by the commission, the compensation of the airlines would be subject to adjustment.

New Lines into Canada.

The bill also authorizes establishment of air mail lines to Canada, terminating at points not more than 150 miles beyond the international boundary line.

In order to prevent monopolies and to oust from the airlines those officials who participated in the alleged fraud and collusion surrounding the canceled contracts, the bill contains the following restrictive provision:

"No air carrier shall be eligible to carry the mails pursuant to the provisions of this act, (1) which controls or is controlled by, through ownership of 20 per centum or more of stock, or otherwise, any person engaged directly or indirectly in any phase of the aviation industry, whether such other person be a holding company, or a company transporting mail or engaged in the manufacture or sale of airplanes, airplane parts or other materials or accessories generally used in air transportation; or (2) which has as an officer or director any officer or director in any holding company holding stock, directly or indirectly, in any company engaged in any phase of the aviation industry, or in any other company engaged in the manufacture and sale of airplanes, airplane parts or other materials or accessories generally used in air transportation; or (3) which has as any officer or director any person who has heretofore entered into any combination to prevent the making of any bids for carrying the mails."

Monopoly Charged.

Senator O'Mahoney contended that the primary factors in the air-mail situation were that the Government had been paying certain aviation companies subsidies in the guise of compensation to carry air mail and that these companies have used their subsidies to establish a "practical monopoly of all branches of aviation."

The "vice" of that system, he argued, was that the Postoffice Department paid the subsidy to one company and refused it to another, opening the door to "gross favoritism and made possible the monopolistic control."

He argued that there was "a complete conflict both in practice and theory between competitive bidding and the payment of a subsidy." The former, he said, was designed to obtain the lowest possible price for the service rendered, while the purpose of a subsidy was to pay more than "reasonable compensation for the service rendered."

Urges Reasonable Rate.

Senator O'Mahoney contended that the Postoffice Department was entitled to have air mail carried at a reasonable rate and that if aviation needed a subsidy it "should be paid on a different basis through the Department of Commerce or some other agency and it should be paid in accordance with a definite principle of law and not according to the discretion of any executive officer."

"In other words," he continued, "no favoritism should be possible in the distribution of the subsidy. It should go to all alike. It could be paid as a reward for excellence or it could be paid to persons or companies meeting certain requirements."

He said his program was not "in any sense a condonation of fraud in the past," but proposed a new system, designed "to preserve to the American people the aviation system they have bought and paid for."

Revised Stock Control Bill Given House of the committee for this morning to consider the changes. The Senate group, however, has favored in general more drastic stock market legislation than the House committee.

Changes Listed.

1—Regulatory power over stock exchanges is left in the Federal Trade Commission, but two new members will be added to that agency and provision is made for creating a special division to handle duties prescribed by the bill.

2—Control over credit aspects of trading in securities is put under the Federal Reserve Board, which would have authority to raise and lower marginal requirements and prescribe methods for closing out accounts.

3—A distinction is made between the requirements limiting the initial extension of credit for purchase of stocks and the maintenance of credit for carrying stocks.

4—The limit for extension of credit is whichever is the higher of 40 per cent of the market price or 100 per cent of the lowest price at which the security has sold within three years, but not more than 75 per cent of the current price.

5—Credit may be maintained so long as it does not exceed whichever is the higher of 60 per cent of the current market price or 100 per cent of the lowest within three years, but not more than 85 per cent of the current market price.

6—To avoid sudden liquidation of trading accounts, these limitations would not apply to accounts now in existence until January 31, 1939.

7—Liability for disseminating misleading information regarding securities is confined to dealers and brokers or persons offering securities for sale, but makes it unlawful for anyone to disseminate such information for a consideration from a broker or dealer unless published as an advertisement.

8—Power is given the trade commission to permit trading in options where it is deemed expedient.

9—Actual damages would be allowed persons injured by manipulative practices prohibited by the bill, instead of the difference between the price at which the plaintiff bought or sold and the highest or lowest price within three months.

10—Brokers may also be dealers, provided they refrain from doing a margin business in new securities and observe certain conditions; members may continue to do an odd-lot business.

11—Specialists, instead of being confined to the brokerage business, may be either brokers or dealers but they can not effect discretionary orders.

12—Only annual reports of issues of stocks must be audited independently, instead of both annual and quarterly reports, and the trade commission is given power to vary the requirements.

Many Critics.

Virtually all the provisions in the Fletcher-Rayburn bill modified by the revised measure were criticized by Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock Exchange, and other witnesses. The original bill prohibited brokers from acting as dealers or vice versa. Representatives of a dozen small stock exchanges protested such a provision would work a great hardship on security dealers in cities outside of New York. It was argued such dealers could not exist unless they also could do a brokerage business.

Collins Denny, Jr., Resigns State Post

Aid to Attorney General Will Practice Law.

Richmond, March 19 (AP).—Collins Denny, jr., announced today that he would resign as assistant attorney general to devote his time to private law practice. His resignation, effective April 1, was placed in the hands of the late John R. Saunders February 5.

Mr. Denny said, however, that should there be need of his services pending the appointmetn of a new attorney general, he would remain active temporarily with the State's legal department.

In his letter of resignation, Denny assured the late attorney general of his "deep appreciation of the courtesy, thoughtfulness and kindness which you have never failed to show me."

Officers Awaiting Navy Rum Ruling

Beer Only Permitted at Academy Club.

Annapolis, Md., March 19 (Spl.). Whether sale of spirits will be resumed at the Officers Club at the Naval Academy will be determined in an order to be issued by Secretary of the Navy Swanson in a few days, it was learned today.

Sale of beer is now permitted at the club, but until National repeal, the club had been "bone dry" for nearly 17 years. Former Secretary Daniels banned liquor of all descriptions from naval posts, ships and reservations.

The forthcoming Swanson mandate will affect naval posts in all wet States, it is said.

Mrs. Harman's Body Taken to Maysville

Clarksburg, W. Va., March 19 (Spl.).—The body of Mrs. Emma Harman, 68, wife of George Harman, sr., former State senator and former member of the House of Delegates from Grant County, was taken tonight to Maysville for burial. She died last night after a short illness.

One son, George, jr., a druggist here, and two sisters also survive. The family moved here a year ago.

Five Virginia Lawyers Seek Saunders' Post

Peery Is Expected to Fill Attorney General's Chair This Week.

Richmond, March 19 (Spl.).—Five prominent Virginia lawyers are being considered for appointment as attorney general of Virginia to succeed the late John R. Saunders, who died Saturday.

Gov. Peery is expected to make an appointment this week, it was reported here today. Senator Byrd, it was said, has decided to refrain from making any recommendation.

Those considered are:

Wilbur C. Hall, of Loudoun County, member of the House of Delegates for 16 years, chairman of the finance committee and a member of the Eggleston commission, which recommended the new liquor-control system.

Maj. Edwin Gibson, assistant attorney general.

Collins, Denny, jr., assistant attorney general the last four years and a son of Bishop Denny, of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

Leon M. Bazile, former assistant attorney general, now in private practice in Richmond.

Charles W. Crush, Christiansburg, who was mentioned as a candidate to oppose Col. Saunders in last year's primary.

Richmond, March 19 (AP). — Gov. Peery said last night on his return from Saluda, where he attended the funeral of the late attorney general, John R. Saunders, that he had no announcement to make on a successor to Col. Saunders.

U. S. Witnesses Assail Goodyear on Prices

St. Paul, March 19 (AP).—Government witnesses assailed the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., at a Federal Trade Commission hearing today for what independent dealers claimed was discrimination in wholesale prices favorable to Sears Roebuck & Co.

Four dealers testified the Goodyear company supplied the Sears company with a tire comparable with the first line tire given independents, but priced so the mail order house could undersell them.

French Storm Levels Cemetery Headstones

Paris, March 19 (AP).—Residents of Jonzac awoke today to find every headstone in the local cemetery flat on the ground. They were blown down in a hop-skip storm which struck along the western coast last night after giving most of France wind, rain or hail.

Hundreds of roofs were lifted in villages between Lorient and Biarritz; fishing smacks were shoved high and dry, walls were leveled and canals flooded.

'Reich Above Religion,' Clergyman Tells Nazis

Berlin, March 19 (AP).—Germans are to consider their nation above Christianity, the Rev. Dr. Reinhold Krause told a radical Nazi church audience Sunday.

Dr. Krause, elevated to the Brandenburg synod council of the German Protestant Church last week, declared the "idea of acknowledging the third Reich but obeying God more than man is impossible. Dr. Krause last autumn advocated abolition of the crucifix.

Strike of Loggers Grows; 2,200 Quit

Vancouver, B. C., March 19 (AP).—The ranks of British Columbia's striking loggers were swelled today to an estimated 2,200.

Three more camps, employing 400 men, closed when workers walked out over the week-end, joining loggers from six other camps in a general demand for increased wages and better camp conditions.

Fire-Swept Gunboat Probably to Be Sold

Hongkong, China, March 19 (AP).—It was said unofficially today that the United States gunboat Fulton, damaged by fire, is not considered worth repairing and may be sold here.

There was no official comment. A naval court of inquiry is still in session, but its finding probably will be cabled to Washington and not related here.

Farley Hints Party War on La Follette

lette is left in a dangerous spot. For years the Wisconsin Democrats have supported the La Follettes, father and son, while what fighting there was took place between Progressives and stalwarts on the Republican side.

Third Party Looms.

Walter Kohler, a bathtub manufacturer and former Governor, is making the race for the nomination of the Republican regulars. There have been moves on the part of the La Follette group to initiate a third party, in order to give their candidate some place to go.

It is expected that the attitude expressed by Farley yesterday will have serious repercussions among the State Progressives, with consequent unfriendliness to the White House. Senator La Follette, besides being a leader of the group, is the protege of Senator Norris, of Nebraska, who has been a close ally of the President in much New Deal legislation.

Another Progressive, Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, will receive the backing of the Democrats when he runs for re-nomination. The Administration has not openly indicated its plans in New Mexico, where Senator Bronson Cutting, Republican Independent, who supported Roosevelt in 1932, is up for reelection this year.

Congressman Hissed for Dig At 'Old Maids' in Film Fight

Connery Interrupted as He Attacks Bill for Censorship.

(Associated Press.)

Representative Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, was hissed yesterday at an Interstate Commerce Committee hearing on the Patman movie regulation bill when he said he saw no reason why what Shakespeare wrote in a play should be cut out of a picture "because some old maid out in Oshkosh doesn't like it."

The hissing came from far back among the spectators.

A second disruption of the testimony came when Representative Chapman (Democrat), Kentucky, asked Abraham F. Meyers, counsel for the Allied State Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, if he did not arrange to take that job during a hearing in New York in 1927 in which he was sitting for the Trade Commission.

Meyers branded "that insinuation some one from among the producers has whispered to you" as an "utter lie," and retorted that "if you are a fair duck, and obviously you are not or you wouldn't have brought that up this way, you'll give me a chance for a hearing."

Opposition to the bill was advanaced by the Civil Liberties Union on the ground that "experience has shown that the best control of obscene matter lies in the hands of juries under criminal law."

REPRESENTATIVE CONNERY.

A memorial signed, among others, by Elmer Rice was presented by the National Council on Freedom From Censorship, a unit of the union, to Chairman Rayburn.

Declaring opposition to "bureaucratic censorship in any form," the statement added:

"Juries reflect public standards on morals far better than professional censors. Prosecutions are now sufficient control of obscene and indecent matter in print, paintings, or on the stage. Motion pictures should be no exception."

Roosevelt's Credit Letter

President Roosevelt's letter to Chairman Duncan U. Fletcher and Henry B. Steagall, of the Senate and House Banking and Currency Committees, proposing the establishment of 12 intermediate credit banks to aid small industry, follows:

May I suggest to your committee legislation to create 12 credit banks for industry.

I have been deeply concerned with the situation in our small industries. In numberless cases, their working capital has been lost or seriously depleted. This condition should be remedied.

We have afforded much aid in the recovery of agriculture, commerce, our larger industries and our financial institutions, and our improved condition nationally furnishes full justification for these efforts. We must continue in behalf of the medium-sized man in industry and commerce.

With this purpose in mind, I have discussed with the Treasury, the Federal Reserve Board, and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation a comprehensive study of the situation in the smaller industries and the presentation of a plan which would show their condition and furnish relief for it.

A nation-wide survey has been made by them. Information has been obtained from 4,958 banks and 1,066 chambers of commerce covering three points: First, the probable amount of working capital required now by smaller industries; second, the number of employes who would be retained by these industries if working capital is afforded them; and third, the number of new employes that can be taken on by them through such supply of working capital.

Estimates based on this survey indicate that approximately $700,000,000 of such working capital is required; that such working capital may continue in employment some 346,000 employes, and may furnish new employment to some 378,000 men and women.

While these estimates in their nature can not be definite and must be considered as estimates only, they indicate the urgent ned of these small industries for working capital.

The Administration will be glad to furnish you such information and assistance as you may desire in order to set up the machinery to supply this need.

The details will be presented to you, but I desire to call attention to two prominent features: First, the matter of caring for the small or medium size industrialist; second the control of the proposed banks by directorates a majority of which will themselves be industrialists.

I will appreciate early consideration by your committee and by the Congress, as I feel that the situation disclosed calls for immediate relief and that such situations as can be relieved through the medium of working capital should have our earnest support.

Very sincerely yours,
FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

12 Credit Banks Sought to Aid Small Industry

all of their functions subject to approval of the board. They would be empowered to operate branch offices and carry on, in general, a banking business, which would be terminated whenever the Reserve Board deemed their purpose had been served.

Machinery of the Federal Reserve system would be utilized, with officers and employes of the Reserve banks authorized to serve with the credit banks. Directors would be chosen in accordance with regulations of the Reserve Board, but a majority must be actively engaged in some industrial pursuit in each of the 12 districts.

The new banks would obtain approximately $140,000,000 capital by Treasury purchase from the Federal Reserve banks of all stock of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, to which each reserve bank subscribed. With the Reserve banks relieved of any further payment for deposit insurance stock, the Treasury thus would assume this burden.

In addition to this sum, the new system—which would be known as the Credit Banks for Industry—would be empowered to obtain an amount not to exceed five times the aggregate capital and surplus of the banks by the issue of debentures or other obligations, for which all of the banks would be jointly liable.

The Government itself would assume no liability—as belatedly by its guarantee of Farm Credit bonds and the current measure to underwrite bonds of the Home Owners Loan Corporation—and this fact would be advertised on all obligations. The Treasury outlay of the capital itself would come from profits resulting from gold devaluation of the dollar.

Direct Loan Provision.

Each credit bank would have power to discount, or purchase, from any financing institution in its district, paper maturing in not longer than five years, "entered into for the purpose of obtaining working capital for any established industrial or commercial business." It could also make direct loans to such institutions on this security, and could even make commitments "in advance of the actual undertaking of such obligations."

A share-loss provision is included, requiring financial institutions to obligate themselves for at least 20 per cent of any loss which might be sustained by the credit bank. Concerning direct loans to corporations, the bill then reads:

"In exceptional circumstances, when it appears to the satisfaction of a credit bank that an established industrial or commercial business located in its district is unable to obtain requisite financial assistance on a reasonable basis from the usual sources, the credit bank may make advances to, or purchase obligations of, such business, or may make commitments with respect thereto, for the purpose of providing it with working capital."

Stipulating that no obligation shall exceed a five-year maturity, the bill goes on:

"Any credit bank, subject to regulations prescribed by the Federal Reserve Board, may assist in developing and effectuating plans for the reorganization or refinancing of any such business, and in connection therewith, may act under proper appointment as receiver thereof or in any capacity thereto, when it appears that the services of the credit bank would be helpful in order to place the operation of such business on a sound and economical basis."

Penalties Are Provided.

Under the plan, each credit bank would have for capital the amount the Federal Reserve bank of its district subscribed to the deposit insurance corporation. Provision is made, however, for free flow of this credit by enabling each of the banks to rediscount paper acquired by any of the others in the system.

Stiff provisions are attached specifying heavy fines and imprisonment for false statements, willful overvaluation of security, or other fraudulent practices in connection with the new banks.

Each of the banks would be operated so long as considered useful by the Federal Reserve and, "when, in the judgment of the Federal Reserve Board, its operation will no longer be in the public interest, its assets shall be liquidated and its corporate existence shall be terminated solely under the control and supervision of the Federal Reserve Board."

Waiter's Trial In Capitol Cafe Fight Delayed

Hitt Grants Continuance at Request of Federal Prosecutor.

Assault and disorderly conduct charges against Harold Covington, discharged Capitol restaurant waiter, were continued until March 30 in Police Court yesterday.

The continuance was granted by Judge Isaac Hitt after Assistant United States Attorney David A. Hart requested additional time to study the case. Nearly a score of witnesses, including Howard University students and Capitol police, appeared in court and waited throughout the day for a hearing.

Covington is charged with striking Harry Parker, elderly doorkeeper of the House Ways and Means Committee, during a demonstration in protest against a ban on Negroes in the House restaurant. Covington was discharged after he served a colored man.

He allegedly went to the Capitol with a group of Howard University students. As the delegation, accompanied by Capitol police, passed Parker he stepped forward and said:

Dillinger Deputy Felony Charge Seen

Sheriff Holley Recalled to Fix Prisoner's Status.

Crown Point, Ind., March 19 (AP).—Sheriff Lillian Holley, mistress of Lake County Jail, was called back today for her second appearance before the special grand jury investigating the escape of John Dillinger.

It was reported the jury was investigating the question of exactly whose prisoner Dillinger was, during his stay in the Crown Point Jail. By an Indiana statute, it was said, more serious charges can be brought if he escaped from men who did not have him technically in custody.

Deputy Ernest Blunk, already charged with "aiding and assisting" Dillinger, said he expected the new and heavier charge would be placed against him. Aid by an "outsider" is a felony, it was explained.

Geologists Are Added To Oil Concern Staffs

Dallas, Tex., March 19 (AP).—J. P. D. Hull, business manager for the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, said today that for the first time in more than three years oil companies were recruiting their geological staffs.

He said the increased demand for such men resulted from a desire to locate new reserves, from the improved financial condition of the oil concerns, and from steps to place production and marketing of crude oil on a sounder basis.

The Suicide Squeeze.

As Mr. Wilfred Bland, of Minneapolis, Minn., points out, the play of inducing one of the opponents of the Declarer to squeeze his partner's hand, which unfortunately occurs very rarely, is one of the most interesting types of squeeze play.

In proof of this statement, Mr. Bland sent me the hand below, in which the other players, all well-known in Minneapolis, are among the Northwest's finest players. In addition to being a splendid example of the suicide squeeze, it also presents the rare spectacle of the Declarer winning the only two tricks in a suit with the Ace and deuce.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♣	Pass	2♣	Pass
2NT	Pass	3NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

The Opening lead was the diamond 5, on which East played the Ten, and which South took with the King.

A glance at the two hands shows eight tricks, with a laydown for game if the spade finesse is good; and in the event that West has led a four-card suit, the double finesse could be tried, or the spades finessed twice if the first one missed. Unfortunately, however, unless the spade play is tried immediately (or at least after four club leads) the Ace of hearts must be sacrificed for entry purposes, and in that event, if the finesse misses, and the diamonds prove to be a five-card suit, the hand will be set two tricks.

South decided to await developments, and proceeded to take five leads of clubs. On the second club lead East played the heart seven, followed by two small hearts and the diamond Knave. South discarded a spade, and West discarded two small spades. The natural inference from the discards is that East is holding one small diamond to lead to his partner, has the King and Knave of hearts, and is protecting the King of spades.

A squeeze play seemed to be indicated, and as South was not in a position to make this himself, he led a diamond from Dummy, so that West might do the squeezing. East's hand proved to be correctly diagnosed (his original holding was King and one Spade, seven hearts to the King-Knave, three diamonds and one club), and when West took four diamond tricks, East was hopelessly squeezed, finally discarding to the lone King of hearts and the King and one spade. When a heart was finally led, the Queen of hearts fell in the Dummy, two hearts having been discarded, but the Ace took the trick. Since all the other hearts had been played, the heart deuce was good for the next trick and the Ace of spades made game.

It is interesting to note that West is entirely helpless in the matter, even though she senses the situation, for if she does not lead her diamonds, either a heart or spade lead will enable South to snow in the East hand and get an end-play for the deciding trick. South originally had some hope that this play would develop, but the heart discards enabled him to place West with a singleton, so he could count on his deuce of hearts for a trick, although the capture of two tricks in a suit by a duobleton Ace-deuce is, to say the least, a little out of the ordinary.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Opium Preparations.

For the relief of certain symptoms of disease opium and various drugs derived from it are easily in a class apart. Nothing taken internally approximates the opium family in the relief of pain. For the shock of profound fear the opium group is without equal. Surgeons know that a patient approaching an operation in a state of apprehension will pass calmly under the general anesthetic if given a preliminary opiate. A moderate dose of this drug will prevent the mental shock of operations done under local anesthesia, during which the patient's consciousness remains clear.

The fact that the mental and physical comfort it brings is so very evident to the patient makes the drug a dangerous one. So pleasing, as well as so satisfactory otherwise, are the effects of the opium family that a great many people have not the hold on themselves necessary for safety in its use. If used often, the drug creates a cell hunger, in addition to its effects on morale. So well known are these dangers that legal restrictions are placed around the drug, its growth, fabrication, sale, and use. As compelling as these are, however, they need to be further strengthened.

Meanwhile, chemists have been working to discover preparations made from opium that would be free from the shortcomings of the original extract of the poppy. Codeine is one of the products of this investigation. There is said to be no cell hunger induced by using codeine. It is thought that it does not break down resistance. Stated more simply, there is said to be no danger of the codeine habit. The drug is used in cough mixtures where the use of morphine or the older opiates would not be allowed. It can not be stated definitely that the use of codeine is as safe as these claims state, but it can not be denied that it is a far safer drug than morphine, heroin, or opium.

Another of these derivatives is papaverine. It, too, is far safer than opium, laudanum, paregoric, morphine, and heroin. Still another is diluadid. It ranks near papaverine and not far from codeine, but well above the old group in safety as regards the danger of the habit.

An extensive use of preparations made from opium, reported by Dr. H. S. Diehl, indicates that aside from cell hunger and habit formation the use of any opium derivative, in even one or two small doses, is apt to have some unpleasant effects. Among these are nausea, dizziness, dopy feelings, fainting, constipation, diarrhea, itching nose, and headache.

After allowing for symptoms caused by the disease for which the drug was given, Dr. Diehl concludes that even the least objectionable of the opium derivatives have some unpleasant effects in an occasional case.

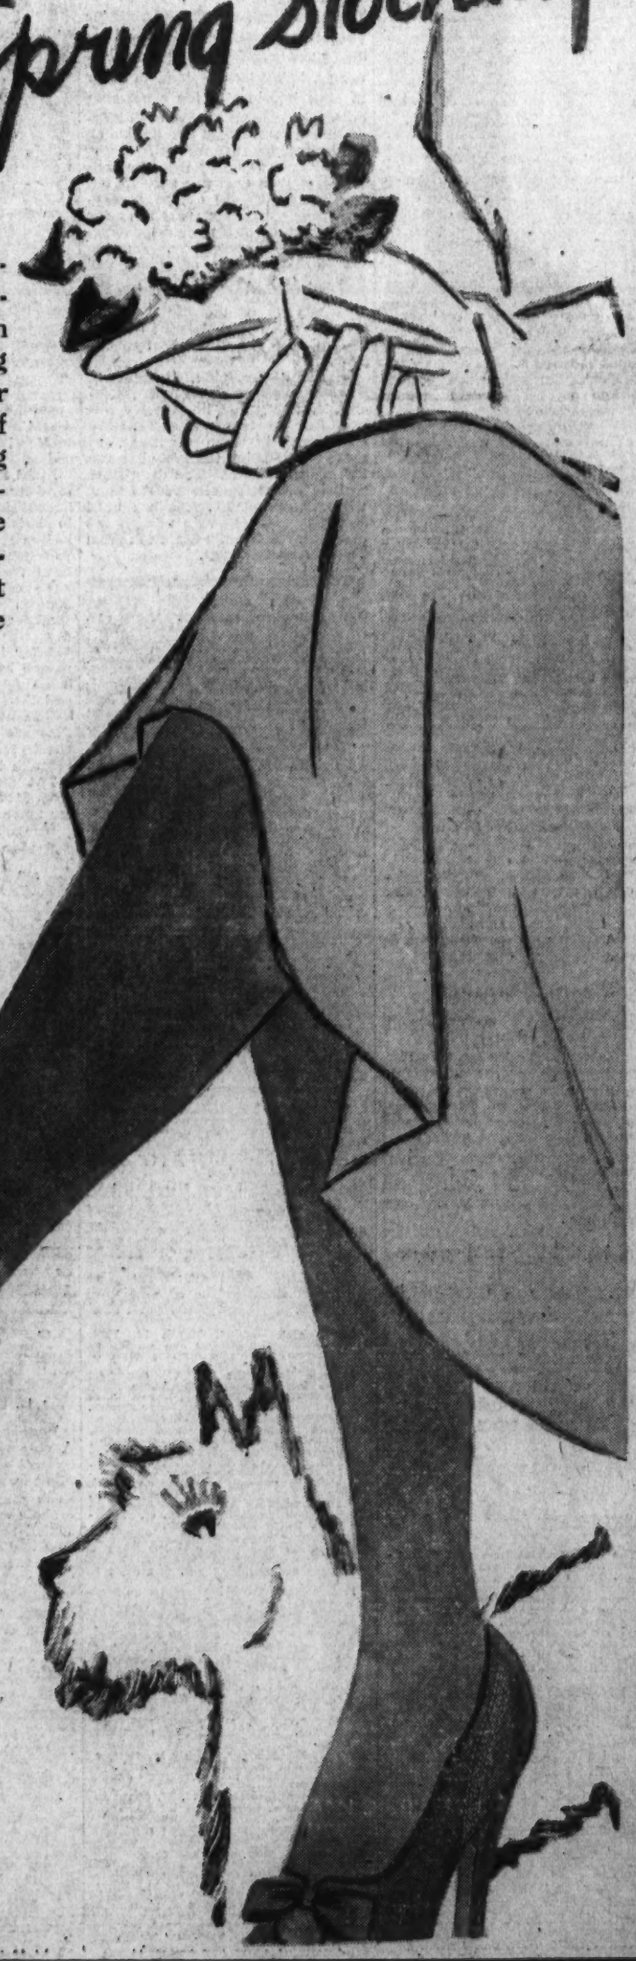
Feet First— or the story of smart Spring stockings



As Vogue says, "At the moment, your stockings are supposed to melt right into the general scheme of your costume—melt—not match." They are talking about "Skin Tones," but it develops that they mean colors for Spring that are lighter in tone than the "fur tones" of this Winter—but that should have the warmth of skin values. All of which does lead us to an increasing subtlety in stocking colors—an increasing sheerness—an increasing dullness—an increasing clearness—in stockings themselves. There is also the departure from the usual heel—to the new contrasting heel—to the new V-line heel—and most important to you—every smart stocking-fashion is ready for you here—many of them EXCLUSIVELY here.

From the varied collection we especially recommend

"Whiff," Artcraft's Magic-Twist Chiffon Silk Stockings $1.95
Rograin De Luxe, the original of the dull sheer Stockings $1.65
Granite "Krinkle-Knit," the sheer stocking with "lots of give" $1.35
Contrasting Heels—"Piccardy" for beige and gray—"Alababa," for taupe $1.95
Jane Wandl Sheer All Silk Chiffon, our exclusive stocking $1
Jane Wandl "88's," our sheer or semi-sheer stocking—2 pairs $1.75
McCallum's "Sunny," "Peter Pan," "Cuban"—for Spring's new colors $1.35
Meshes — from the fine "needlepoint" to the larger pattern "aristocrat," $1.35 to $1.95
For sports clothes — sheer chiffon lisle, a mere gauze, $1.50

Virginia D.A.R. Tonight Begins Annual Session

3-Day Roanoke Conference Includes Teas and Reception.

Roanoke, Va., March 19 (Spl.).—The three-day State conference of Daughters of the American Revolution opens here tomorrow night. An address by Representative Clifton A. Woodrum on "National Defense" is a feature of the first program.

Joseph H. Turner, business manager of Hollins College, will present a history of Roanoke Valley. Following the meeting a reception will be given by the American Legion Auxiliary, of which Mrs. Ernest B. Fishburn is president, and the William Watts Chaper, U. D. C., of which Mrs. E. C. Whitehurst is president.

Committee reports and a musical program are features Wednesday, also a tea at Fort Lewis given by the Fort Lewis chapter.

Mrs. William H. Pouch, vice president general from New York, will speak Thursday also. A memorial service will be conducted by Mrs. Harry R. Greene, assisted by Bishop Robert C. Jett, D. D., and Mrs. Walter B. Ellett, Mrs. W. M. Smith, Mrs. R. H. Pretlow, Mrs. C. G. Burton and Mrs. M. M. Caldwell.

Thursday afternoon Mrs. C. A. S. Sinclair, National president of the Children of the American Revolution, will speak. A scenic drive and tea at Hollins College also are scheduled.

Mrs. Felix K. Parker, of Roanoke, is chairman of the general conference committee.

They Excel in Scholastic Activities

Alpha Psi Omega, dramatic fraternity at Shepherd State Teachers College, Shepherdstown, W. Va., has announced its awards for the four outstanding students of 1933-34. They are (left to right) Miss Gladys Tennant, of Shepherdstown, "most beautiful girl;" Miss Minnie Crites, of Hardy County, "best girl citizen;" James Heflin, of Martinsburg, "outstanding athlete," and Kenneth Waldeck, "best boy citizen." Miss Tennant will be guest of honor and crowned queen of the ball at a dance to be given by the fraternity soon after Easter, when the others also will be feted. She also will be designated the college's "princess" to the apple-blossom festival at Winchester, Va., early in May. Miss Crites walked seven miles from her home at Durgan to Moorefield and returned daily, in order to attend an accredited high school. A sophomore, she is now working her way through college, being employed in a Shepherdstown home. She is a member of the basket ball team and, according to W. M. H. White, college president, an outstanding scholar.

Open Hearing On W. Virginia Finance Urged

Senator Opposes Plan; Fears Lobbyists Would Rule.

Charleston, W. Va., March 19 (Spl.).—Delegate A. J. Lublinger (Democrat), Mercer, chairman of the House taxation and finance committee, today took a stand in favor of open hearings of the conference committee named to iron out differences between House and Senate on the emergency revenue bill.

Lublinger assigned three seasons for his move. One was that the bill involves $15,000,000 of the taxpayers' money and taxpayers have the right to know how their representatives vote in conference. Another was that admission of public and press would allay distrust. The other was that star chamber sittings "are a relic of the old order of things which has been so overwhelmingly repudiated by the people."

Opposing the plan, Senator E. Bunker Reynolds (Democrat), Mineral, said it would be "utterly impossible" to reach a satisfactory agreement in open meetings, as these would bring the lobbyists and the obstructionists. The drug store whisky bill was delivered to Gov. H. G. Kump today. He has until Saturday night to veto or sign the measure. It cuts the State tax from 50 to 20 cents a pint.

Parsons, W. Va., March 19 (Spl.). J. Frank Robinson, who had served several terms as mayor, was nominated for mayor at the Democratic convention over Prof. C. O. Headlee of the high school, who later was nominated for recorder over Richard Evans, leader of the Parsons Boy Scouts.

Nominated for councilmen were Leman Auvil, James Simmons, Calvin Vannoy. Committeemen nominated are Joseph Phillips, Darl Stalnaker, James T. Schoonover.

Interest Lower On Farm Loans

Frederick Federal Office Expects First Cash This Week.

Frederick, Md., March 19 (Spl.).—The first loans through the new Production Credit Association, embracing Frederick, Washington, Carroll and Montgomery Counties, are expected to be available this week, Thomas S. Anderson, secretary-treasurer, said today. The loans will carry an interest rate of 5½ per cent instead of 6 per cent, the reduction having been announced Saturday.

Eight applications have been approved and papers for six have been executed and made ready to return to Baltimore for final inspection before the loan is forwarded. Approximately 85 applications have been received, about 65 of which have come from farmers of this county. Carroll, Montgomery and Washington Counties follow in order.

After the applications have been passed by the local office, they are forwarded to Baltimore for approval, and then they are returned here to be executed by the applicants. Then they are sent to the borrowers through the Frederick office.

The applications thus far range from $100 to $15,000, two for the latter amount having been made.

State Librarian To Be Appointed

Wilmer L. Hall Mentioned to Succeed McIlwaine.

Richmond, March 19 (AP).—The office of State librarian left vacant by the death of Dr. Henry R. McIlwaine will be filled by appointment by the State Library Board, whose members are appointed by the State Board of Education.

Among those mentioned for the post is Wilmer L. Hall, who has served as assistant to Dr. McIlwaine.

Decreased Rum Cases Lighten Court Docket

Harrisonburg Judge Gives Sentence to Two Mail Thieves.

Harrisonburg, Va., March 19 (Spl.). United States District Court, convening here in spring term today, had the lightest criminal docket in years. This was attributed to the absence of prohibition cases.

There was only one prohibition case pending on the docket from last fall. It was ordered dismissed by Judge John Paul.

Williams Roberts, colored, of Alabama, was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary for passing counterfeit quarters.

Cecil E. Long, of Charlottesville, and Edward A. Peer, of Winchester, both city mail carriers, were sentenced to 18 months at the Fort Eustis Federal Prison camp for removing currency from letters.

The court tomorrow will hear the $10,000 damage suit of H. Eugene McCormick, of Inwood, W. Va., against the estate of Henry Bell, of Winchester, for injuries in an automobile crash near Winchester last October. Bell was killed.

Wholesalers' Law Faces Court Test

Westminster Case Being Watched by Towns.

Westminster, Md., March 19 (Spl.). An appeal case which will test the validity of a Westminster ordinance requiring wholsesalers to take out a delivery license will be tried before the May term of the Carroll County Circuit Court.

Walter Bidle, jr., an employe of the Sun Oil Co., was charged with violating this ordinance, and Police Magistrate George E. Benson found Bidle guilty. He appealed.

The outcome of the appeal will determine whether the town will press similar charges pending against other wholesalers. The case has aroused interest in other towns, several of which will adopt similar ordinances if the court sustains the ruling.

West Virginian Dies Of Stabbing in Fight

Morgantown W. Va., March 19 (Spl.).—A murder charge faces Joe Hesky, 42, following the death of John Berokol, 40. Both are of Osage.

Berokol died of a stab wound, alleged by officers to have been inflicted by Hesky in a fight in a coal mine shanty.

Quieting Fighting Dogs May Cost Man His Eye

Westernport, Md., March 19 (Spl.). Edward Whisner, of Beryl, near here, is in the hospital at Keyser, where removal of his left eye may be necessary.

He was using a stick to separate two fighting dogs when the end flew up and struck him in the eye.

Work Started On New Bridge In Waynesboro

$48,000 Span Is Already Using 20 Employes; Charges Probed.

Waynesboro, Va., March 19 (Spl.). Construction began today on the new concrete bridge spanning the South River on Main street. The project will cost $48,000, and will furnish employment for many workmen released from the CWA pay rolls. The new structure is expected to be completed in June.

Workmen today were engaged in moving the present bridge from the site of the new span so that traffic will not be interrupted. This bridge carries the heavy traffic of the Jefferson highway, in addition to being the principal link between the business section of the city and DuPont and other local industrial plants.

The 20 men at work today will be augmented within two weeks; in addition, the city council has appropriated funds to widen approaches to the bridge and also to change water mains.

Political Charges Probed.

Roanoke, Va., March 19 (Spl.). A committee composed of V. A. Leighton, W. C. Mutter and M. J. Williams has been appointed to investigate wages on CWA and PWA projects in Roanoke County, and alleged cases of political preference, dismissals and transfers of employes.

George D. Brewer, president of the Roanoke Federation of Labor, and S. M. Price, a representative of the Virginia Federation, claim that labor was not properly represented at a meeting recently in Salem, at which the present wage scale for CWA workers was established. A schedule more recently approved and put into effect further reduces the pay, which had been 40 cents per hour for common labor and $1.10 for skilled labor. The new limits are 35 and 90 cents.

Loan Plan Waits.

Danville, Va., March 19 (Spl.). The city school board is contemplating abandoning its application to the Public Works Administration for a loan and grant of $300,000 to finance Danville's school-building program because of the uncertainty of approval of the application until Congress makes more money available.

Bristol Figure Still High.

Bristol, Va., March 19 (Spl.). Civil Works pay roll figures for Bristol held to the high total of $2,928 for the week ended Saturday, but decreasing quotas promise to shave the figures smaller each week. Checks in Saturday's pay-off went to 248 persons. Good progress was made on the airport project started last week.

Lynchburg Awaits 1,000 Virginia Odd Fellows

Lynchburg, Va., March 19 (Spl.). Fully 1,000 Virginia Odd Fellows will attend the annual convention of the grand lodge here May 21-23. The Rebekahs, the woman's organization, the grand encampment and Patriarchs Militant will meet here at the same time.

The grand lodge meets here every other year, because the order's orphanage is here.

Steel Pierces Lung In Fatal Accident

M. M. Wilt, Martinsburg Youth, Gas Victim.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 19 (Spl.).—Millard M. Wilt, 24, died in a local hospital last night of injuries received when his automobile left the road two miles east of here and plunged against a concrete culvert. His lung was punctured by a piece of steel.

William Whittington, also of this city, a companion, was slightly injured. Whittington told investigating officers Wilt lost control of the automobile descending a long hill and it plowed along in a roadside ravine.

Wilt was married and has one child. Services will be held here Wednesday.

Colored Cast Will Give Randolph-Macon Play

Ashland, Va., March 19 (Spl.). An all-colored cast will produce "Heaven Bound," a twentieth century morality play by an Atlanta Negro, at Randolph-Macon College Friday.

Proceeds will go to the Hanover Training School and the county public health service.

CMTC Aid Appointed.

Hanover Courthouse, Va., March 19 (Spl.).—Capt. Floyd W. Tucker, of Ashland, has been appointed to aid Hanover County boys in filing applications for Citizens Military Training Camps in 1934.

Richmond Workmen Endanger $4,000,000 Washington Statue

Richmond, March 19 (AP).—Virginia's $4,000,000 Houdon statue of George Washington, in the rotunda of the State Capitol here, has been covered with wood and canvas because painting, now under way inside the building, endangered the statue.

The statue has long been the State's most carefully guarded treasure and has drawn many visitors. The Federal Government several times has offered the State $4,000,000 for it, but the offer always has been refused.

Tradition says the statue was damaged during a pistol fight in the rotunda after a heated debate on the House floor. Acording to the legend, a member of the House and a newspaper writer who he fancied had insulted him, "shot it out" and one bullet shattered the cane on which the hand of Washington rests. The cane was repaired, and today only dim cracks show.

Fredericksburg to Hear Burleigh Jubilee Chorus

Fredericksburg, Va., March 19 (Spl.).—The Harry T. Burleigh Chorus of Jubilee Singers will appear at the Fredericksburg Baptist Church March 30, at 8 p. m., the Rev. Robert F. Caverlee announces.

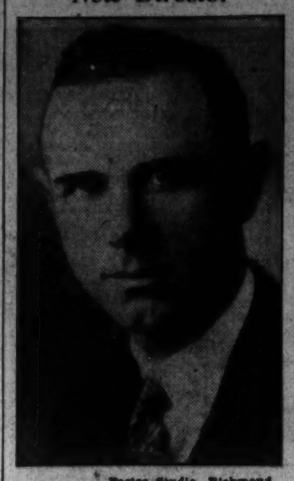
New Director



Foster Studio, Richmond.

JOHN Q. RHODES, member of the House of Delegates from Louisa County, who has been named by Gov. Peery to succeed T. McCall Frazier as director of the State Division of Motor Vehicles. Frazier was appointed to the Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

City to Retain Old Memorial Park Entrance

New Kilmarnock Water System Will Give Work to 60.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 19 (Spl.).—Preservation of the old memorial entrance to the city park, erected half a century ago by the late John G. Hurkamp, was agreed upon by members of the Chamber of Commerce civic committee and CWA park improvement officials.

The arch was erected when the park was surrounded by a massive brick wall, with the stipulation that the park be named Hurkamp Park. The wall was removed more than 15 years ago.

Sixty Will Get Work.

Kilmarnock, Va., March 19 (Spl.). Sixty men will be employed for four months on a water system to be constructed through a $50,000 PWA loan. L. A. Bodine, of Bowling Green, has been appointed supervising engineer.

The Town Council has called an election on the question of issuing revenue bonds against the water company as security for the loan.

Miss Ott Resigns Relief Job.

Miss Bess McClung Ott has resigned as director of emergency relief in Northumberland County to accept a position with the tuberculosis department of the State Board of Health. Her successor has not been appointed.

Resident Engineer Named.

Hanover Courthouse, Va., March 19 (Spl.).—Charles E. Dexter, of Richmond, has been appointed resident engineer inspector for the Hanover County PWA school project.

Mr. Dexter, now supervising construction of the Ashland Elementary School, was formerly with Doyle & Russell, Richmond contractors.

20 Men on Airport Work.

Colonial Beach, Va., March 19 (Spl.).—More than 20 men have begun work on the 75-acre airport here on which the Federal Government will spend more than $7,000

The town council hopes to receive Government aid for a public pier to replace the Colonial Packing Co. pier which was swept away by the hurricane last August.

Roanoke Clubs Will Hear Editor

John Temple Graves 2d to Speak Thursday.

Roanoke, Va., March 19 (Spl.).—Roanoke civic clubs will meet jointly Thursday with John Temple Graves 2d, lecturer of Birmingham, Ala., as the principal speaker.

Mr. Graves' subject will be "Southern Cards in the New Deal." His experience covers a wide range of poetry, novel writing, journalism and military affairs.

At present he is editor of the Birmingham Age-Herald.

Wily Police Chief Disables Man's Car Then Arrests Him

Clarksburg, W. Va., March 19 (Spl.).—Police Chief E. O. Alkire, of Lumberport, uses his head instead of his legs when he pursues fugitives.

Alkire arested A. P. Griffith, CWA foreman in Eagle district, on a warrant charging nonsupport. Suddenly Griffith broke away and fled to a coal mine near his home. Alkire made no attempt to pursue. He simply walked over to the garage and removed the distributor cap from Griffith's car.

The canny chief later appeared at the garage, where, as he had expected, Griffith was trying to get his car started. The officer then took him to jail.

Pulaski County Exchange Aids Many Farmers

Business Up to $100,000 Annually Done on Barter Basis.

Pulaski, Va., March 19 (Spl.). A real farmers' exchange, operating on a cooperative basis, is the Pulaski Cooperative Exchange, Inc., with headquarters here and a branch in Dublin. The exchange originally was organized as the Pulaski Farmers Exchange, but was incorporated in 1924 as the Pulaski Cooperative Exchange. The exchange markets almost every kind of farm product grown in the county except milk, and purchases whatever farm supplies the patrons request. The farmers bring into the exchange whatever they have to sell and their cooperative exchanges what they bring in for feed for cows, chickens or pigs, or fencing or whatever the farmers need. If the value of what is brought in is greater than what the farmer buys, he receives the balance in cash.

The volume of business has varied from $50,000 to $100,000, depending upon the volume of products grown and the prices. Nearly a half of this volume has been made up of products marketed for the farmers. In 1933, the volume amounted to $79,000, of which 40 per cent was farm products.

Pulaski is a railroad town and country produce is in considerable demand. The exchange purchases for the farmers feed, seed, fertilizer, fencing and miscellaneous supplies. The exchange cooperates with the Tazewell Farm Bureau in the joint purchase of car loads of such items as fencing and farm machinery.

The exchange was incorporated with 150 farmers as stockholders paying in $7,500 for capital stock. The earnings through 1928 were sufficient to permit the exchange to issue stock dividends to the farmers to the amount of $7,500. The active patrons now number nearly 300 farmers. Plans are being considered whereby those patrons who are not now stockholders can become active members of the exchange and acquire stock of low par value. The exchange is now on a cash basis and making progress.

Conley Committee Will Meet Today

Dance Is Planned to Aid Maryland Campaign.

Frederick, Md., March 19 (Spl.). A committee comprising Alban M. Wood, chairman; Thomas N. Mohler, Daniel E. Wight, Lawrence A. Sigafoose, George A. Holland, L. L. Carpenter and Walter England, representing the Conley-for-Governor Club, will meet tomorrow to plan establishment of a headquarters.

A committee comprised of Edward M. Akers, chairman; James H. Grove, jr., Mrs. Samuel H. Rosenstock, Mrs. Lloyd C. Culler, Miss Victoire Conley, Miss Antoinette G. Brosius, Mrs. H. J. Orth, Mrs. Daniel E. Wight, James Alvie, Harry G. Allgire, Ralph H. Kline and Miss Mary Louise Grove is planning a benefit dance.

Former State Senator Jacob Rohrback, at a meeting of the club, Saturday, said "we have just begun to fight for the nomination of Dr. Conley." Other speakers were William J. Grove, president; D. Princeton Buckey and Albert N. McCardell. The club has a membership of 1,143, it was announced.

Publishers Laud Stand of Editor

West Virginians Commend Keeping of Confidence.

Charleston, W. Va., March 19 (Spl.).—W. Guy Tetrick, general manager of a Clarksburg publishing concern, will continue for another year as president of the West Virginia Publishers and Employing Printers' Association, having been reelected at the annual meeting here.

J. Harvey Long, of Huntington, is vice president and treasurer; Herman P. Dean, of Wayne, vice president, and James W. Weir, of Elkins, secretary.

The association passed a resolution lauding Vance Armentrout, associate editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, for his recent refusal to disclose the source of a news article in his newspaper. It wished him success "in his defense of the traditional confidence reposed in respectable newspapers by contributors," and criticized the Kentucky Legislature for "attempting to force a violation of that confidence."

Fire Losses at Bristol Off 39 Per Cent in 1933

Bristol, Va., March 19 (Spl.).—The fire loss of Bristol, Va., decreased 39 per cent during 1933. Total losses were $68,468.01 for 1933, as compared with $112,897.61 for 1932.

Damage was reported in 48 of the 65 fires last year. Only 12 within the city limits caused damage of $1,000 or more.

Bovine Tuberculosis Figures Found Low

Colonial Beach, Va., March 19 (Spl.).—Bovine tuberculosis in the eight Northern Neck counties is comparatively rare, Dr. E. E. Musselman, State veterinarian, announced after an inspection tour.

He found seven cases in King and Queen County, 25 in Essex, 3 in Middlesex, 9 each in Lancaster and Westmoreland, 27 in Northumberland, 33 in Richmond, and 6 in King George counties.

Fear of A. F. L. Rule Underlies Labor Crisis

Employers Struggle for Right to Deal With Own Workers.

By Raymond Clapper.

At the bottom of the threatened strike in the automobile industry is the dispute as to whether, when an employer is to discuss wages and hours, he will do it with one of his employes or with a representative of the American Federation of Labor.

The strike threat provides a showdown test as to whether under NRA the American Federation of Labor will become the recognized spokesman for labor in dealing with employers. It is a test also as to whether the company union can survive under the regime of collective bargaining established by law in the National recovery act.

Both of these questions are of utmost long range importance to the future of industrial relations and are of vital concern to both employers and workmen. Although stoppage of the automobile industry at the moment when it is the spearhead of recovery progress is regarded as a matter of grave importance, the outcome of this controversy may shape the method by which wages and hours are agreed upon in most industry.

Auto Men Want Showdown.

Some employers have had a feeling that NRA has put the American Federation of Labor in the saddle. Whether this feeling is justified or not, the automobile industry has decided to determine definitely whether it must deal with its men through the federation. Directors of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce stated yesterday that the issue was "whether the automobile industry is to be run by the American Federation of Labor." Labor spokesmen said the issue was whether the Government would enforce the collective bargaining section of the Recovery Act.

"There is no law prohibiting a company union as such if there is no interposition whatever by employers and if the men freely choose it," Gen. Johnson said. "But 99 times out of 100 you and I know that this is not the case. Play the game. Submit to the law and get it over quickly. I want to tell you this for your comfort. I know your problems. I would rather deal with Bill Green, John Lewis, Ed McGrady, Mike MacDonough, George Berry and a host of others I could name than with any Frenkenstein that you may build up under the guise of a company union."

They're A. F. of L. Men.

Green, Lewis, McGrady and Berry are A. F. of L. men who also have NRA or National Labor Board tie-ups.

All are bitterly opposed to company unions on the ground that they are employer dominated. Their influence in NRA counsels has caused some employers to charge that labor policies of the recovery administration are inclined in favor of the federation.

It is fundamental in the Administration policy that labor shall have the right to choose its own representatives in bargaining over wages and hours, and industry's challenge that this is not inconsistent with existence of company unions provides kindling for one of the most bitter political controversies.

Labor feels it has the Administration and the law behind it and is strongly inclined to assert itself at this time when rising prices and the prospect of recovery combine to stimulate the appetite for a larger pay envelope. Business, which during its paralysis a year ago was willing to take anything in order to get help, is likewise becoming more assertive at the prospect of profits and feels more able to resist than it did while it was crying for oxygen.

Newcomer Leads Fight.

Labor's fight in the automobile dispute is in the hands of a man new in the National news, William F. Collins, former Yonkers, N. Y., street car employe, a veteran of many rough-handed street car strikes, and an organizer for the A. F. of L. for a quarter of a century. He looks like a middle-aged Sunday School teacher and when told recently by a member of the Administration that he couldn't win an automobile strike at this time, replied quietly but firmly, "that's my problem."

Some months ago President Green of the federation sent him out on the Detroit automobile assignment. It is the biggest job he ever tackled. He is up against a group of motor executives who have throughout the history of the industry fended off all efforts of outside labor unions to organize. During the peak of the boom the federation went in but was unable to make headway. The automobile industry, with its thousands of workmen, mostly skilled and normally well paid, was an alluring field for A. F. of L. extension. But, throughout, Henry Ford, the lone wolf of the business, fought them off with his own high wage policies as did the other key men—Sloan, the lean-faced, high-collared driving chief of General Motors; Roy Chapin, the short, mild-mannered head of Hudson, and Alvan MacCauley, former Washington lawyer and veteran of Packard.

Labor in the past has fought stubborn old-timers like Gary in steel. This time it has challenged a group of modern-day, fast-moving executives who are fighting by use of company union strategy rather than the old-time straight out antiunion doggedness. But never before has labor had both an Administration and a law, which, in its own opinion, are behind it.

Bank Bill Sponsor Offers 97,000 Reasons

can Federation of Labor will abide by the decision."

In Pittsburgh, officials of 50 steel manufacturing concerns declared, according to the Associated Press, that labor leaders through the Wagner bill are seeking "to drive our Government into the business of organizing all labor into a monopoly for them to manage."

Meanwhile, in Washington, railway managers renewed their demand for a 15 per cent reduction in basic wages to become effective July 1. This followed refusal of employes to accede to the request that the present 10 per cent cut in basic pay be continued to April 30, 1935. The conference between employers and employes adjourned abruptly, but it was reported the employes' representatives were preparing a new reply.

Tomorrow Deadline.

Unless a compromise is reached over the question of recognition of the American Federation of Labor unions in the automobile industry, the strike in Detroit and other automobile centers is expected to occur tomorrow morning. The strike may involve as many as 100,000 workers, with the possibility that all of the 250,000 persons employed in connection with automobile manufacturing plants, as well as hundreds of thousands of workers in steel and other industries contributing to automobile manufacturing, may be affected.

The point at issue in the automobile controversy as stated by labor leaders is "the attempt of the automobile manufacturers to impose company unions upon their workers."

As stated by the manufacturers, it is "whether the automobile industry is to be run by the American Federation of Labor."

Gen. Hugh. S. Johnson, NRA director, was in New York ready to go into conference with representatives of automobile manufacturers, who represented every concern in the business except the Ford Motor Co. According to the Associated Press, Johnson already had held a short conference with the manufacturers and planned to meet with them again. The meeting was guarded closely to prevent any news leaks. It was presumed that Johnson had offered his services as a mediator.

Seek Delay to Pass Peak.

It was stated unofficially that the manufacturers were seeking to delay any strike until after the end of peak production in the industry, which will continue for only a few more weeks.

Included in the New York meeting were members of the executive committee of the Automobile Code Authority, including Walter Chrysler, head of the Chrysler company; Alfred Sloan, jr., head of General Motors, and Alvan MacCauley, president of the Packard compnay. John P. Smith, general counsel of General Motors, was present as legal adviser. Johnson was accompanied by Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor and Labor assistant to NRA.

In Detroit the manufacturers, the Associated Press reported, told employes "it is up to you to say whether you want to surrender to professional labor leaders your right to deal with the management of your companies."

"Ads" Carry Appeal.

"To the employes of the automobile industry:

"The American Federation of Labor and other outside unions are trying to force you to join their union and to pay dues to support professional labor leaders.

"They are trying to destroy the present satisfactory agreement between you and the management under which your right to collective bargaining is fully recognized.

"These employe representation plans which the labor leaders call company unions have been set up by more than 80 per cent of the employes themselves. They are working satisfactorily. Any one of you can see his supervisory officer at any reasonable time and settle any questions that may arise. Most of the questions that have come up have been peacefully settled.

None Forced to Join.

"No one has to join a union. Your employment does not depend on your membership or nonmembership in any organization. It depends on merit alone.

"The outside labor leaders are trying by force, by coercion, by intimidation of you and your families, and threat of strike, to make you join their union.

"Regardless of what you want, the labor leaders want the right to speak for all of you. They want dues-paying members.

"But the NRA does not say that the American Federation of Labor or any union shall speak for you.

"It is up to each one of you to decide for yourself whether these outside unions can secure any rights that you can not secure for yourself."

That labor trouble may spread to the steel industry was indicated further by action of steel executives meeting in two groups, one at Pittsburgh, representing 50 concerns, and one at Cleveland, representing 24. Both groups sent similar telegrams to Gen. Johnson and to members of Congress, declaring passage of the Wagner bill against company unions would give labor control and indicating they are vigorously opposed to any such move.

Telegram Quoted.

"Operating executives of 24 iron and steel companies employing approximately 100,000 workers in Ohio, northern Kentucky and West Virginia and northwestern Pennsylvania, meeting in Cleveland today to discuss the Wagner bill, expressed the conviction this bill is a serious threat to the recovery program.

"Orders for steel have already fallen off as a result of the uncertainty and hesitancy engendered throughout all industry by the threat of passage of the Wagner bill and strike pressure being brought by organized minorities.

"If passed, the bill would force the closed shop upon industry and subject workers to arbitrary control of leaders of National trade unions. The National Industrial Conference Board states that fewer than 10 per cent of workers now belong to National trade unions, and the Wagner bill therefore would be discriminatory legislation, forcing workers to accept domination they do not desire.

"The fact that the great majority of workers in this country have not chosen to join National trade unions either before or since the passage of NRA is proof that the rank and file of the workers have never subscribed to the principles of these organizations.

Fear Labor Monopoly.

"Employes would be required to give up existing employe representation plans providing for amicable adjustment of all labor difficulties and permitting employes to select representatives of their own choosing, free from exploitation by professional agents and organizers. The bill would turn control of American industry over to a National labor union monopoly and would create a permanent National Labor Board with more power than any Governmental agency has ever had.

"We believe industry could not function under such a law and that passage of the Wagner bill would disrupt the industrial welfare of the Nation. Urge you to bend every effort to bring about the defeat of this bill."

The rail controversy was expected to be drawn out with both sides jockeying for an advantage. Unlike the automobile situation, the rail situation does not carry immediate danger of serious consequences.

President Roosevelt last month asked for continuation of the present 10 per cent reduction, which has been in effect since 1932. The managers, concurring with the President, asked that the cut be continued until April 30, 1935. This the employes have refused. The managers countered with their proposal that the cut be made 15 per cent and be made effective July 1.

Hit Peak Pay Demand.

"As we understand the philosophy of your position," the managers told union representatives, "it is that the interest of the bondholders of these railroads must be subordinated to the demands of those whom you represent so that the peak wage rates of 1929 may be restored on July 1, 1934. You speak of the bondholders being the owners of the railroads. This they are, only to the extent that the holder of a mortgage on a farm or a home is the owner if he may be compelled to foreclose the mortgage.

"In prior wage negotiations, you used to contend that the stockholders, who are the real owners of the railroads, must forego their dividends in the interests of the demands of railroad labor. Now that the equity of stockholders has been virtually destroyed so far as dividends on their stock holdings in many railroads are concerned, you argue that those who have invested in the bonds of railroad companies must likewise subordinate their contract right to interest on their investments and the repayment of their principal to the demands of railroad labor.

"We can not subscribe to the proposition that the National welfare will be promoted or the best interest of railway workers served by any deliberate policy of forcing into bankruptcy those railroads which thus far have avoided calamity."

Rumblings Grow.

While the automobile, rail and steel situations held the center of the stage, rumblings of labor difficulties came from every section of the country.

Labor troubles spread rapidly in the industrial centers of northeastern Ohio, the Associated Press reported, as several hundred men went on strike in Cleveland and as thousands of others threatened similar action there and in Akron and Barberton, Ohio.

James P. McWeeny, special organizer of the American Federation of Labor, was quoted as saying the situation is "like a charge of dynamite with the fuse already sputtering."

Seeking wage increases, 400 men went on strike at the Sherwin-Williams Co. in Cleveland, and a vote favoring a walkout of several thousand employes was announced in behalf of workers at the Fisher Body Co., a General Motors subsidiary. The Fisher Body strike vote was said to have been 3,065 in favor of a strike and 56 against. The controversy is over recognition of the union. The strike is expected to be simultaneous with the automobile strike, if one is called.

In Akron, 1,100 union men were reported ready to vote on a strike in an attempt to win recognition for their organization from the General Rubber Co. Other companies in Cleveland where strike votes are threatened include the Addressograph-Multigraph Co., the Cleveland Twist Drill Co., the Winton Engine Co., the Cleveland Welding Co., the Apex Electric Co., and the Chicago Pneumatic Tool Co. These employ more than 2,000 workers.

Match Workers Plan Strike.

More than 800 of the 1,000 employes of the Diamond Match Co. at Barberton are planning to walk out Thursday, seeking an increase of 5 cents an hour. Employes of the Columbia Chemical Co. and the Babcock & Wilcox Co., at Barberton have taken strike votes. They employ 1,300 persons.

Manufacturers in Final Appeal to Employes Assail A. F. L.

U. S. Obligated To Depositors, Witnesses Say

with administering the provisions had failed to carry them out to the depositors' best interests.

"Since the present legislation has failed to give depositors the relief they deserve," said the New Jersey Senator, "I feel the McLeod bill should be enacted.

"The Federal Government is under moral obligation to depositors in closed Federal Reserve member banks. And if the Government will aid the Federal Reserve banks, the States will do something for the State banks."

The hearing was attended by representatives of organized labor, the Committee of the Nation and 20 Congressmen, in addition to deputations favoring the measure.

Representative Fiesinger (Democrat), Ohio, gave notice he will propose an amendment today, so that the provisions of the bill will cover State banks as well as members of the Federal Reserve system.

The hearing was opened with the testimony of Representative Bacharach (Republican), New Jersey, who said Atlantic City was "in a turmoil" over the failure of the closed National banks to release their frozen assets, and that he thought the Government would be justified in taking over the responsibility of paying depositors. He protested against the losses now resulting to depositors through forced liquidation of assets in closed banks, and told how the assets of the closed Chelsea-Second National Bank and Trust Co., which he said were worth $1,115,657, sold for only $62,964. The assets, he said, were stocks and bonds, notes and mortgages.

Should Justify Confidence.

"I think the depositors in closed banks are entitled to consideration," Bacharach said. "These folks had confidence in our Federal Reserve banks. Many of them thought the banks were backed by the Government."

Bacharach estimated the cost to the Government of carrying out the provisions of the McLeod bill as "only a trifle over a billion dollars."

"Won't it actually be three billions?" asked Chairman Prall.

"I expect to show definitely it will not exceed a billion and a half," interposed McLeod.

Representative Luce (Republican), Massichusetts, said he was "in hearty sympathy with the purports of the bill, but there are serious difficulties."

"What are you going to say to depositors in State banks?" Luce asked.

"That's up to the States," said Bacharach.

"I agree it should be the States' function, but most of the States do nothing," replied Luce. "I call your attention to the dissatisfaction that will develop in State banks."

McLeod said 500 small State banks in Michigan would reopen, or at least pay off depositors, if the large Federal Reserve banks in which they in turn had made deposits received the proposed aid from the Government.

Restored Value Seen.

Bacharach replied that the assets will "have their value restored" if the securities are held for some time, instead of being sold immediately.

Luce added that a large part of depositors, losses are due to forced sales by receivers.

Representative Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, chairman of the House Labor Committee, said the McLeod bill "will do more to bring back confidence in the American banking system than anything else that could be done."

"It would place a premium, once again upon thrift and saving by the American people," he asserted. "We all know there now exists a deplorable lack of confidence in the banks of the country.

"If we can restore this, we will be doing a great deal toward National recovery."

The people of the United States have felt generally, Connery added, that the Federal Government, through its supervision of the Federal Reserve banks, would prevent any substantial losses.

"There certainly was an implied obligation on the part of the Government," he insisted.

While a majority of the closed banks in Massachusetts are State banks, Connery said, enactment of the McLeod bill would be of great benefit to them. A majority have large deposits in the Federal National Bank of Boston. If the Federal National paid off, these State banks, in turn, could pay off.

Representative Lehlbach (Republican), New Jersey, favored the bill, and Representative Young (Democrat), Ohio, declared it would be a "godsend to the people of the country."

Large depositors who will be helped are mostly employers, he said, and the pay-off will stimulate employment.

Unfair, Says Sweeney.

Representative Sweeney (Democrat), Ohio, said "thousands and thousands" regarded the sign "Member of the Federal Reserve System" as the Government's indorsement of a bank. He declared it "magnificently unfair" to discriminate against those who kept their money in banks as a "patriotic duty" instead of hiding it under a mattress.

The Government may lose something, Sweeney admitted, "but it will lose on the RFC and other ventures."

Most of the depositors in the closed banks are small depositors, he declared, "and if you pay off, you take them off the CWA relief lists, and the Government will gain in that way."

The hearing will be resumed this morning.

Russians in Alaska On Way to Rescue

Will Attempt to Save 89 on Ice With Planes.

Ketchikan, Alaska, March 19 (AP). En route to Nome in an attempt to effect an aerial rescue of 89 men marooned on ice floes in Bering Sea, two Russian aviators and a professor were on the steamer Alaska when it reached here today.

The Russians, Prof. George Yushakoff and F. A. Levanesvky and M. T. Sletneff, said they would leave the boat at Skagway, taking the train over the White Pass Railroad to White Horse, Y. T., where Pilot Joe Crosson will fly them to Fairbanks and thence to Nome, their base of operations.

Home Built in 1784 Is Swept by Blaze

Antique Furnishings Lost in West Virginia.

Shepherdstown, W. Va., March 19 (Spl.).—Fire of undetermined origin swept the century and a half old home of Mrs. C. J. Miller this morning.

The house was built in 1784. Many valuable pieces of antique furniture were destroyed, and the loss was estimated at $4,000. The blaze demolished the upper story of the house, the remainder being practically ruined by water and chemicals.

Club to Hear Mrs. Blair.

Mrs. Emily Newell Blair will speak on "Women of the New Deal" at a luncheon of the Soroptomist Club today, at the Hotel Willard.

Capt. Barnard Terms Lorton A "Power Keg"

take matters in their own hands. Capt. Barnard pleaded with the committee to seek Congressional legislation to make it possible to ship hardened prisoners to Federal penitentiaries.

Already the length of the investigation has created an extremely dangerous condition at Lorton, Capt. Barnard said. This will be heightened if Shoemaker successfully carries out his threat for a Congressional investigation, Barnard said, adding that all the convicts need is a leader to turn Lorton upside down over night.

Pities Next Warden.

"If some legislation is not put through at this term of Congress, I pity the man who has to run that institution during the next Congress. Now is the time to act to send those long-term bad actors away," Barnard said.

"There are 15 of these men held at the District Jail now because I am afraid to take them to Lorton. There is more at stake than any of you people realize."

As soon as the taking of testimony was finished yesterday, Committee Chairman W. W. Millan announced that not one of the charges against the institution has been sustained during the Board of Public Welfare's investigation.

The statement, which came after a short consultation of committee members, said: "Although the taking of testimony has just been concluded, the committee has been in constant consultation throughout the course of the investigation and is now prepared to announce that none of the charges brought against these institutions and their management has been sustained."

Formal Report Soon.

Chairman Millan went on to say that the formal report of the committee would be in the hands of the Commissioners today or tomorrow. Although completely exonerating officials, this report may make recommendations to the Commissioners in regard to Capt. Barnard's pleas.

Yesterday's closing session was held chiefly to seek proof of the charges of brutality brought Saturday by Shoemaker. Capt. Barnard said that it would be utterly impossible to hold the 2,000 men at the reformatory and the workhouse if brutality was prevalent.

Employes at the reformatory testified that the statements of Erasmus C. Jenkins made in a letter to Shoemaker were false. The letter had indicted them as beating him to insensibility and chaining him by the neck to the wall of a cell.

Was Never Beaten.

Those who testified were Paul F. Pegelow, J. William Devers, Charles W. Woodruff, Lester E. McMenimin and Hoke S. Henson. They all said that Jenkins had never been beaten, adding that he twice had been placed in confinement on bread and water for fighting.

Charles Sawyer, head of the shipyard at Occoquan, denied Shoemaker's allegations that he built a house with prison-made bricks and prison labor. He said he had constructed the house of cement blocks with the voluntary aid of one prisoner whom he had befriended.

Col. W. L. Peak, superintendent at Lorton and former head of the District Jail, refuted Shoemaker's charges that torture at the jail had driven Carl Panzram insane. Panzram later murdered a guard at Leavenworth Penitentiary. Peak said that he had been examined twice and pronounced sane.

Other witnesses were J. E. C. Bischoff, reformatory business manager, and Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, who told of the methods used in handling prison supply contracts.

Woman Is Recovering, Husband Still Sought

Recovering from injuries following a two-story fall early Sunday, Mrs. Louise Lucas, 27, was at Emergency Hospital last night while police sought her husband, James Lucas. The woman was found in an areaway at the rear of a rooming house in the 1100 block of Massachusetts avenue northwest.

SKYSCRAPER STEEL

would not be strong enough

THE shimmering, iridescent spray that plays above the melody in a Chopin nocturne requires the utmost delicacy of touch . . . but the Steinway strings which produce that ethereal beauty are made of steel six times as strong as the steel of a skyscraper beam.

It was Theodore Steinway who discovered that if he could double the strength of his strings, he would obtain a tone correspondingly purer and more brilliant. And characteristically, he redesigned his whole piano. Today Steinway strings, made from the finest carbon steel, are drawn to a tensile strength of 375,000 pounds to the square inch!

The price of a Steinway just now is very low and the terms are very convenient.

Not Even By Harvard.

We arise in wrath today, and Harvard once again is the cause. Before us lies a list of grants to faculty members there, including one to Kenneth B. Conant, associate professor of architecture. He will be given funds—and we quote exactly—"to complete construction of a replica of the Apse Arcade."

Now we have no quarrel with Mr. Conant's ambition, although assiduous research has failed to reveal what is the Apse Arcade. We know a lot about apses, and much about arcades, but the significance of the conjunction escapes us. It is a pretty safe bet, however, that Prof. Conant did not build the original. Therefore, we contend, he can not construct a replica.

He can make a reproduction, perfect to the nth degree, with every arch the same size and placed upon the same level, ornate as the Doge's Palace at Venice, simple as the entrance to the Hotel Shelton in New York. He may do the same with his apse, making it circular or polygonal to his heart's content, as lovely as Sonk's modern church at Helsingfors, as classic as the Temple of Venus at Rome. But he can't make a replica! Not unless it was he who built the Apse Arcade!

For a replica is a duplicate, perfect in all details, made by the original artist. We stand by that definition, regardless of the hedging dictionaries which allow that sometimes it may also mean a facsimile, an exact copy. Why should it mean that? Here is a word that signifies only one thing, a word that alone expresses one thought. When we have a word that stands by itself so perfectly, why spoil it by loose employment.

Replica should never be allowed to become one of the "old, old words worn thin by years of careless usage." Replica a synonym for facsimile? Never! We haven't enough good words like that to allow it to be tossed around like a ping pong ball—not even by Harvard.

One Admirable Choice.

Richmond B. Keech is admirably qualified by training and ability for his new post as a member of the Public Utilities Commission of the District. No element of politics enters into his career as a public servant. He has been appointed to important positions by both Republican and Democratic Presidents. As assistant corporation counsel and especially as people's counsel for the last four years, Mr. Keech has manifested a broad understanding of utility problems and an aggressive policy in bringing about rate adjustments and settling disputes. He will have a larger opportunity to serve the public interest in his new office.

It will not be easy to find a successor to Mr. Keech as people's counsel. No doubt there are numerous applicants for the job, many of them basing their claims on politics. The importance of this post makes it highly desirable that only the experience and ability of the candidates be considered in making the selection.

Satisfaction over Mr. Keech's appointment is offset to some extent by the selection of a Missouri politician to be recorder of deeds in the District. Why does the President appoint a Kansas City man to a position in the municipal government of Washington? Disfranchised residents of the Capital naturally resent intrusion of national politics into the District government. In the interests of efficient administration as well as justice entirely local offices should be reserved for local residents.

Britain's Budgetary Problem.

The British are struggling with a problem not likely to worry the American people for a long time to come. They are wondering how to dispose of an anticipated budgetary surplus of possibly £40,000,000 for the present fiscal year, ending March 31. They are also debating the question of what to do with the still larger surplus expected next year.

The idea that a government should endeavor to spend its way back to prosperity has never been well received in British governmental circles. The present happy situation of the Treasury has been brought about by reliance upon orthodox budget balancing methods, which combine rigid economies in expenditures with high taxation. According to those who would "prime the motor" by lavish governmental spending, such deflationary practices should have plunged the British deeper into depression. Instead, they are enjoying a marked industrial improvement, inaugurated without any effort to lower the domestic purchasing power of the pound or to push government funds into general circulation.

Of course their budgetary troubles are not settled, since the utilization of the surplus, achieved and in prospect, is a vexatious problem. Pressure to restore unemployment benefits which have been sharply cut is great and a wish to reduce intolerably heavy incomes taxes is equally strong. Restoration of cuts made in government salaries also demands attention. In an endeavor to propitiate all these claimants, there is danger that everybody will be treated too generously, and the hardly won gains dissipated, without offsetting benefits. Budgeting for a surplus is a pleasanter duty than trying to meet a deficit, but it calls for an equal amount of official courage and resolution.

A New Deal For Air Mail.

President Roosevelt's changing attitude toward the air-mail situation revives hope that the air transport system may soon be placed on a sound footing. As yet the President seems to be committed to no definite plan. But last week he recognized the unusual hazards encountered by Army pilots flying the mail, and now he has tacitly agreed that the McKellar bill is not a satisfactory solution of the tangle into which Postmaster General Farley has precipitated the air-mail system.

Recent conferences at the White House do not show that the President is ready to turn the air mail back to private contractors. But he is known to be much concerned over the demoralization of the air-mail system resulting from the cancellations. Mr. Roosevelt would greatly enhance his prestige if he would disregard the suggestions of some advisers that the Army be given another chance, and go forward with a reasonable plan holding more promise for the future of commercial aviation.

A prerequisite to any reasonable plan of action is to lift the whole controversy out of the political atmosphere in which it originated. Mr. Farley's failure to substantiate charges that all the domestic air-mail contracts were rendered illegal by fraud and collusion tends to encourage political recriminations and to disqualify the present Postmaster General from further administration of the air-mail system. Some step of this kind is clearly essential to reestablish confidence in the air-mail system, and to make certain that justice is done to the companies whose contracts were abrogated.

The President's hesitation in taking such a step may be easily understood. Yet he is committed to a policy of candid recognition of mistakes and prompt action to remedy them. Under present conditions the air-mail system built up at great cost and effort over the last ten years is rapidly disintegrating. For a week all mail planes were grounded. Flying has been resumed over only a few routes. Mail planes are covering about one-fourth of the distance formerly traversed by the private carriers. The volume of air mail has drastically shrunk, and Army planes afford no passenger service. The public can no longer depend upon air transportation. Of course, this means irreparable damage to the aviation industry and the air transport business. Under these conditions there appears to be no reasonable alternative to early restoration of the air mail to private carriers, with oversight by some nonpartisan and unprejudiced agency.

In taking a step of this kind charges of collusion need not and should not be forgotten. If the Government has been defrauded, every guilty individual should be punished in accordance with the law. But let the charges first be proved in keeping with American tradition. The Administration has been careful to provide hearings in the establishment of codes for industry. It is incredible that the major part of the air transport business should continue to be condemned without trial.

Bluestockings In Politics.

A resurgence of interest in politics is at hand. Two dispatches from New York City are evidence of this. More interesting of the two, perhaps, is the one which recounts the rallying to the Little Flower's standard of several rich and socially prominent New Yorkers, as the Associated Press characterizes them. Alexander Hamilton, descendant of the first Secretary of the Treasury, is working as secretary to the commissioner of markets. A grandson of Thomas Fortune Ryan, millionaire copper magnate, is one of Mr. LaGuardia's secretaries. Alan Stuyvesant, a member of one of the oldest of the old New York families, is helping the police commissioner in his duties. Winston Guest, ranking polo player and so-called social registerite, is drawing a salary of $1 a year as a legal adviser to the board of aldermen.

The second dispatch tells of the young Republicans who are organizing to revive the National Republican Club and, as the phrase goes, infuse it with new blood. A laudable and necessary endeavor, but the names mentioned in the list of those active, are names that have long been associated with politics. The first dispatch is more significant. It recalls the period when Theodore Roosevelt was helping reform New York. As Lincoln Steffens has told us, blue stocking reformers come out of hiding as a natural aftermath when predatory political institutions are thrown out because of their overreaching greed.

Both items are interesting and show a healthy trend. The presence of gilded youth in politics is a rare sight in this country. In England it is otherwise. Young Americans of means have shunned the hustings as something degrading. Tammany's defeat by Mayor LaGuardia and his continuing fight against graft and crime was so sensational that it at last has attracted a type long absent from New York's city hall. What strikes us most, however, is that it took a son of immigrants to oust Tammany and make it possible for the bluestockings to join the battle on the political sidewalks of New York.

A Chinese Puzzle.

The Chinese seem an ungrateful people. Certain members of Congress and their supporters are imploring our Government to assist trade recovery in the Far East by raising the price of silver. And simultaneously a report from Shanghai states that the Chinese government will not permit any such rise to injure China's international trade. An official of the foreign office explains that any sudden rise in silver prices would be inimical to China's interests, and it is his hope that our silver boosting plans will end in talk.

This attitude may be puzzling, but is not as bewildering as the spectacle of advocates of dollar depreciation posing as philanthropists by trying to raise the purchasing power of the money of another country. If devaluation of the currency is good for our business, as alleged, why should the Chinese embrace a policy which is directly opposed to our practices? Those of them who profit by meeting wages and other costs in low-priced silver will devoutly hope, with the government official, that our alleged charitable intentions are only empty talk.

The Case Of Willard Thorp.

It is no longer a secret that the position of Dr. Willard T. Thorp, director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, is seriously menaced by political influences within the Administration. The attack upon him has been skillfully handled and absence of any publicity is what is sought. His nomination, submitted to the Senate by the President long since, is simply being withheld by the Committee on Commerce, of which Senator Stephens, of Mississippi, is chairman. Failure to report Dr. Thorp's name would result in the appointment of another ad interim director, of course more amenable to the rules of the patronage game.

The issue is important, for all who wish to see this Administration measure up to its responsibilities, precisely because Dr. Thorp is himself no politician. He is a former professor of economics at Amherst and member of the research staff of the National Bureau of Economic Research, who was called to Washington almost as a spokesman for the economists and statisticians of the country. Secretary Roper took months to fill the position, conducting with Assistant Secretary Dickinson a most careful survey of the men suitable. The choice of Willard Thorp, youthful, dynamic and well-trained, met universal approval in the professional world. It has not pleased the politicians.

It is said that Dr. Thorp has not shown himself a good administrator, that he has taken the professions of the New Deal too seriously and concerned himself more with attempting to forward the general program than in avoiding the internal pitfalls which beset Washington's bureau chiefs. Certainly he has expended himself in official activities outside the immediate program of his bureau.

But over and above such charges there is the fact that his office has been viewed as a key position by economists and statisticians throughout the country, and that his handling of it has given universal satisfaction to those who would see the Government run on lines of economic rather than political thinking. Failure to confirm Dr. Thorp's nomination would go far to serve notice that what the trained experts think is of small concern to the Administration.

Bonds Of Understanding.

With bland disregard of current nationalistic tendencies, the United States and other countries are continuously sending official delegations to numerous international gatherings which seek solution of mutual problems. Most of these conventions assemble quietly. Sometimes they are entirely neglected by the press because of the technical nature of their work. Yet they are slowly and surely extending the technique of cooperation among nations.

Three recent bulletins issued by the State Department call attention to these international activities. Twelve American experts have been selected to represent this country at the ninth International Congress of Pure and Applied Chemistry at Madrid. A representative of the United States Public Health Service has been designated to attend the forty-fifth Congress of the Royal Sanitary Institute at Bristol. On invitation from the French government six delegates, five of them from Washington, will attend the third International Congress of Technicians and Chemists in the Agricultural Industries which convenes at Paris this month.

An essential function of the League of Nations is to foster and assist conferences of this sort. While the Geneva organization has not been able to bring about disarmament, nor to end war as an instrument of international policy, it has greatly promoted the establishment of useful contacts between governments and peoples. As an organizer of conferences and a promoter of international conclaves of many kinds the League performs a modest but indispensable function in the modern world. In ultimate appraisals of the League this service will doubtless appear far more significant than the extravagant encomiums and equally extravagant attacks resulting from its political successes and failures.

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

THE PROPOSED constitutional amendment for woman's suffrage was defeated in the Senate by a vote of 35 for the amendment and 34 against. It would have required the votes of 64 Senators in order to have been adopted.

PROPOSALS for the exemption of labor unions from the new anti-trust legislation were discussed by President Gompers and Secretary Morrison, of the American Federation of Labor, and Speaker Clark. No conclusions were announced.

TEN YEARS AGO TODAY.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE announced he was still opposed to the bonus bill. He said, "It is of utmost importance, in order to meet a fast approaching foreign competition, that to keep business good and prevent depression we reduce our debt and keep our expenditures as low as possible. These are the economic reasons why the granting of a bonus would jeopardize the welfare of the whole country."

IT WAS REVEALED that in the past three years 796 employes of the internal revenue bureau had been dismissed from the service on charges of graft and collusion with persons outside the office.

Munitions Investigation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On behalf of the Friends' Peace Committee, representing the three local meetings of the Society of Friends, I desire to state that your paper deserves to be commended for the recent editorial relating to the proposed investigation of the munitions industry.

In expressing our appreciation we feel that a thorough investigation should be had at an early date, to enlighten the general public, and the efforts of your paper in this connection will undoubtedly be widely appreciated.

A Philosophical Subject.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I may briefly state that the keynote to the present economic situation may be found in the industrial changes of the immediate past, whereby certain industries like those included in the sartorial and the allied arts were made obsolete. The difference between the former state of things and the present on this score can be measured by the difference of millions of workers. Aside from this, there is also the question of culture, which was a creation of the general sartorial arts or handicraft industries which primarily constitute the basis of prosperity. The whole economic question may be resolved to a subject which must be dealt with by philosophy in order to reduce it to a science, and then to a practical solution or demonstration—the results to be evidenced in the ultimate recreation of small industries, doing work in ways that would necessitate the employment of millions more, and consequently, the reward, in the form of money, would not revert itself to only a few centralized headquarters of wealth.

"Over-Persistence."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The writer has been annoyed many times when entering a store to try on a dress or hat to have an "over-persistent' sales person urge me to purchase even when articles are unbecoming or undesired. Such people seldom make a sale as they antagonize customers and cause them to go elsewhere to buy. I find it is the small stores, and very seldom large ones, which are most guilty of "high pressure" salesmanship. When I hear stores claim they have a struggle to succeed I know it is generally due to poor salesmanship in dealing with the public.

People go where no efforts are made to "browbeat" them into buying. When enough people walk out of stores where such tactics are used, clerks will know they use a wrong method in trying to sell articles. DOT.

Horrid Cities.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read where many of our people are fearful that any attempt to get people back to the farm will increase the crop surplus. The exact opposite is correct. Those small farmers create a market for the real farmers who grow the surplus in any State. They grow very little if any wheat and use more corn than they grow, thereby making a market for their neighbor. They buy on an average two pigs, some poultry to sell and to eat, and a vegetable garden and cut their firewood on the place if in timberland country.

I have been in many States, spent 30 years in the Far West and believe that to get farm-raised people who are not gainfully employed in cities, is the one best bet, for the city is a poor place in which to live today. Too much noise, too much dirt and too many crooks and thugs.

JOHN WINSTON MEADE.

Traffic Law for Pedestrians.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is there a traffic law in the District, to regulate pedestrians at street crossings? If not, there should be, and it should be strictly enforced, particularly in the downtown section. Pedestrians should be obliged to obey the light signals or traffic officers. However, unless there can be some rule as to which has the right to move first—pedestrians or cars making a right-hand turn—pedestrians seem justified in standing just off the curb when waiting to cross, or they will have to wait two or three rounds of light changes. It would be helpful if right-hand turns could be eliminated down town, during rush periods.

Meddling Neighbors.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We hear so much of unhappiness in many homes today and we often wonder what can be the cause of it.

Well, there would be more peace and contentment in many homes if neighbors only attended to their own business. For example, show me a husband who is neglected and consequently stays away from his home a good deal and I'll show you a man who is the victim of a home that is completely under the evil influence of meddling neighbors and so-called friends.

Home preservation is a field for useful work. Why don't more of our churches and social welfare organizations get busy along these lines?

PHILIP EBERT.

Where There Is No Vision.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When President Roosevelt, in one of his early radio addresses, made a quotation from the Bible ("where there is no vision the people perish"), evidently this made a definite impression on the listeners. By a little reflection upon the meaning of that word "vision," we understand it to imply "intuition," which is the direct revealer of facts and principles, and without which we can not reason. Now, it is a question if any or some of the plans and projects in an effort to improve economic conditions, are worked out on the basis of facts gleaned through intuition (or vision,) or just merely upon circumstances and conditions presented to the senses. C. PHILIPS.

Is Congress Sincere?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is Congress sincere about restoring the pay of Federal employes, or is it just playing politics?

Had the members of Congress been sincere and in earnest they would have put the matter in a separate bill amending or repealing the provision of the economy act carrying the cut, and the matter would then have stood upon its own merits. Instead they have it in the independent offices bill tied up with restoration of veterans' benefits, when they know the President will veto the bill. Under the Constitution he must veto the entire bill to get rid of objectionable items, as he can not veto particular items of a bill. A. S. L.

DR. S. P. KNIGHT.

The Vinson Navy Bill.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the midst of the general attitude of supine helplessness exhibited in the House of Representatives when the Vinson big Navy bill was speeded through, there were a few courageous Congressmen who stood out in bold relief against their weaker and less fearless associates.

Organized labor which has nothing to gain and all to lose by another war, should remember these men. And organized labor should never allow itself to be fooled by specious claims that a jingoistic Navy policy is a real help toward eliminating unemployment. There is plenty of other work that the Government can furnish for jobless men besides building battleships—and work that will contribute toward life and happiness instead of death and misery.

The Eyes Don't Have It.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Elderman's cartoon in The Post of March 14, depicting Speaker Garner leading the Democratic donkey to the watering trough, is not altogether flattering to the Speaker. A leader for that sort of job must have considerable foresight, but on close examination, I find that Mr. Garner is sightless (!) while the old donkey appears to have a clear vision ahead of him.

Your cartoonist seems to have a habit of omitting the seeing organs of many of his subjects. In the same cartoon, the other donkey by the fence (Canadian Parliament) is looking very hard at his Democratic donkey friend, but he has nothing in the way of eyes to look with.

The next picture he makes of Speaker Garner, I hope he will give him a good pair of "lamps" for what the Senate most needs is a good seer. H. BRADFORD,

The St. Lawrence Waterway.

To The Editor of The Post—Sir: All taxpayers, investors and the hundreds of thousands with jobs on the railways, and in all industries in the Atlantic and Gulf of Mexico States should have particular cause for rejoicing in the St. Lawrence waterways treaty defeat.

Why should this Government which with pretended economy in refusing to give our postmen, Sailors, soldiers, veterans and others who have efficiently served their country, what is their just due, hand over to bureaucrats probably half a billion dollars of taxpapers' money to be spent chiefly on labor outside of this country, for a vast project to dislocate the trade of Eastern and Southern States, throw our railway men out of employment, bring despair to many millions of railway and private utility investors and damage insurance companies and endowment funds with heavy investments in such industries? HENRY D. BAKER.
Durham, N. C., March 15.

"After Me, the Deluge."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt, like Brutus, is an honorable man. He means well, and he puts his good intentions into deeds. But are his policies sound? He tries to please the people. He has few enemies. But great men have always had many and powerful enemies.

On the eve of Rome's downfall the emperors tried to allay the people's discontent by giving them bread and circuses. Is not the President doing the same thing in another form by doling out public funds? Is his motto that of Louis XV, who said, "After me, the deluge?" Doles will quiet the people for a time. But doles will not last forever, nor are they suited to a race of freemen.

Democracy's Cradle

Postoffice, Tuesday.

The New England town meeting, which John Fiske considered the first forefather of American self-government, still functions. It functioned in Phippsburg, Maine, the other day in spite of the hard winter.

Rather, it functioned because of the winter. The "Town" of Phippsburg, once famous for the Yankee clippers and the dories that it built, of course isn't a town in the more southern sense. It is several barren points that, like spread fingers of a hand, jut into Casco Bay, 40-odd miles north of Portland. "Summer Folk" own some property there, for it is lovely in the summer, but the natives' political wisdom directs them to direct themselves and their local government when these summer folk are hugging New York and Philadelphia radiators.

This column's Sagadahoc County correspondent writes of the Phippsburg town meeting. The voters were mostly fishermen. The chief fight was over the choice of selectmen (you accent the last syllable), the north end of town having too long dominated their board.

* * * *

Now, then:

"People began getting there, over roads ruined by melted snow and refrozen mud, at 6 a. m., coming from every beach and cove, every hill and valley, of the town's 10,000 acres. Here at Sebasco Estates, we are 6 miles from the Center, with its white town-hall, and many of our neighbors walked. Their passage didn't greatly reduce the snowdrifts for the contingents following in borrowed trucks or such swagger licensed-for-carrying-paying-passengers cars as that which bore me. It was a six-passenger automobile, and it somehow rocked to its destination with every one of its nine passengers intact.

* * * *

"The meeting room is an affair of pale blue and white walls, plank floors, a logwood stove and a few rows of benches. In the center was a one-step platform, where sat the town clerk, tax collector, three vote-tellers and, after his election, the moderator.

"The crowd kept on increasing, not noisily, for Maine is low voiced, but interested and determined. Over the platform edge a few children dangled their thin legs, a couple of voters beside them. Below were those benches, which would seat 50 persons; the rest of the 100 women and 200 men stood up, a crowd swaying shoulder to shoulder, most of the women having brought their 'work'—their sewing or knitting—with them.

"The voters were people of every garb except the garb of luxury: fishermen with wristlets, sweater-sleeves cut at the elbow, overalls, hip-boots, hard-bitten faces; sawmill men neatly shaved and a bit of the lather still in evidence; women in men's overcoats; one or two younger ones, who had worked in Bath or Portland, plying lipsticks and puffs. Everybody with a legal residence in town could have his word if he wished to say it, and everyone was conscious of his voting right. I have never seen anything so democratic, nor have I ever before felt how little the summer folk count.

"The town clerk opened the meeting by hammering with his gavel and reading a quantity of formal 'literature,' not very audibly. A moderator was chosen and sworn. Slips of paper bearing the names of candidates were distributed.

"Should the three selectmen that must be elected be voted for en bloc or one at a time? The north end was for the bloc method, but the south end won.

"O. K., then—after a lengthy discussion—vote for the First Selectmen first!

"We all rushed to the desk on the platform, in helter-skelter manner, and deposited the expressions of our civic will in the ballot box. The tellers counted these before our eyes, a couple of suspicious fishermen and as many curious children hanging over the functionaries' shoulders. Fifteen candidates had presented themselves: a clear majority of the total votes was necessary for election, and that initial ballot was a failure.

"'Have to try again.'"

"So we tried again. It was mildly suggested that if everybody came to the ballot-box from left to right, the result would be 'nicer.' Well, everybody wouldn't. Everybody preferred a general assault on all fronts and from all flanks. Thus, more time was consumed. Moreover, even candidates with small followings were loath to withdraw their names, their friends were loath to desert them. We didn't choose the first selectman till the fourth ballot.

* * * *

"Noon: The originally seated 50 still sitting; the original 250 standees still afoot. The now dishevelled town clerk munched sandwiches. Ice cream and lollypops were handed around—at a price. It was known that, in a nearby store you could procure coffee, if you'd a mind to. Few had.

* * * *

"So it continued until half-past three. Only then was the third selectman elected. There was much more to be done, but our south-end had won the important victory. . . .

"That was an undaunted, unwearied crowd through which I edged my way. They were wrangling about a snowplow for next winter, and there was a fuss with the road commissioner because he couldn't produce this winter's bills:

"'How can we make an appropriation unless you give us the bills?'

"'How can I give you the bills when they ain't all in yet, and when the snow's still here, and mebbe there'll be more snow tomorrow?'

"'You can tell us approximate?'

"'Course I can—but approximate ain't the truth.'

* * * *

"Anyhow, the south-end won its cause. So we've our own New Deal in Phippsburg. And it seems a lot more important to us than the New Deal in Washington."

BARGERON.

One of the most striking things about our new Government is the way its various component parts, some of which at first seemed utterly useless, gradually find their place and fit easily into the coordinated whole. There was the matter of the Cabinet officers, for example. For a while it did not seem that more than two or three of them would be needed.

We set up emergency councils, planning boards, NRA's super-executive committees and the like to such an extent that just what ten Cabinet officers were to do remained a puzzle. Insofar as the Secretary of War was concerned, it remained a puzzle until just a few days ago. There seemed nothing for him to do, no way in which he could fit into the new pattern at all. I had confidently expected that legislation would soon be enacted doing away with his office altogether.

• • • •

Other Cabinet members, by and large, had found something to do under the new deal. For example, Mr. Ickes took over the business of administering the public works program and the oil code. It is seldom that he is associated with the Interior Department. He is Public Works Administrator Ickes or Oil Administrator Ickes. Other Cabinet members similarly made themselves useful about the house, so to speak.

But Mr. Secretary Dern—honestly, it was seldom that we heard his name. It develops now, though, that any suggestion that his job be abandoned would have shown ignorance of how the new deal was shaping up. It appears that while he was an unattached particle, all the time he was moving into his rightful function in the conglomerate whole.

That rightful function, it appears now, was to take Col. Lindbergh into camp. "Take into camp" is an expression that men in their earlier gropings formed to denote placating a person, getting him off one's neck or pulling him over from the other side to your side.

Even in the primitive plannings of men it developed that there would always be some formidable fellow in the opposition. So it came about that to overcome this opposition the device of absorbing it was developed, and inasmuch as there has to be some means of describing everything, the expression, "take into camp," was hit upon.

• • • •

For many years the way of politicians in taking a man into camp has been to place him on a committee. This was brought to its highest development in the time of President Hoover. The world will never know exactly how many men and women he placed on committees. It probably will never know how many committees he set up.

The present Administration, there is reason to believe, has developed the art even more. It might be fairly said that it has come to attain its greatest evolution.

Of course, however, none of the students of Government could anticipate that the taking of Col. Lindbergh into camp would be Secretary Dern's part in the new deal. It could not be anticipated by the outsiders, in fact, that the new deal would get into a controversy with the colonel. Undoubtedly, though, it had been carefully planned, was indeed, a part of the whole planned economy; otherwise Mr. Dern would not have been kept hanging around and he would not have moved so easily into his place when the time came.

What has apparently thrown the whole planning machinery, the whole pattern out of sorts is that the colonel refused to be taken into camp. It is the amazing. It is the first time, in the memory of the oldest inhabitants, that it has ever happened. Admittedly, it was not the fairest of tests. The colonel gambled his life for his place in the sun, his whole life and everything he has is dependent upon the airway system which he was instrumental in building up.

But the Administration had good reasons, notwithstanding, to assume that he would fall for the committee trap. All history justified the assumption. The seductiveness of committees has caught bigger men than Lindy in the past. The Administration may well be chagrined over his refusal to serve.

It may possibly be the beginning of the end of committees, in fact.

No End of Books

By

—Theodore Hall—

The only trouble with broadcasting, as I discovered last Thursday morning in my maiden attempt with some remarks on S. S. Van Dine, is that just when you get warmed up and going strong the announcer leans toward you and waves two fingers in your face. That means you have two minutes left. You give him a shocked glance, rally, and plow on.

Then he holds up one finger, and you have to cut your script ruthlessly. Then he crosses his fore fingers—one-half minute—and before you know it you're off the air. At that moment, with increasing qualms, you begin to think of all the things you left out.

• • • •

I quite forgot to mention, both at the WJSV studio and in the squib printed in Sunday's Post, why Willard Huntington Wright chose S. S. Van Dine as a pen name. So herewith that item, and several more.

The Van Dine part comes from his maternal grandmother—named Van Dyne. As to the initials, Mr. Wright says he merely hunted around for a couple of letters that would go well with Van Dine, and he adds: "What S. S. stands for I haven't the foggiest notion, and I have maintained a stout and discreet silence on the subject whenever I'm asked to explain." I dare say we must leave it at that. Though if you want you can call him, as many not-so-bright spirits do, Steam Ship.

• • • •

It is simply this—that for two solid years (he was six years in journalism) he wrote five columns a day, seven days a week. That means, roughly, 5,000 words a day. Multiply it, and you get a yearly figure which would have turned the late Arnold Bennett green. As to quality, I can't say. But for sheer industry there's very little to match it.

• • • •

Mr. Wright makes something of a theme song from the importance of illness in his life. There was his nervous breakdown which led him to write detective stories. And there was an earlier illness which, to all appearances, actually saved his life. On a day in Los Angeles in 1910, he became ill and left the Times Building. Ten minutes afterward the McNamara dynamite bomb went off, demolishing part of the building. The man who sat at the next desk to Wright's was blown to bits.

• • • •

But all this has nothing to do with your relish for "The Dragon Murder Case." How do you like the tale? Have you guessed the villain yet?

• • • •

A gentleman in Chicago has sent me a little bookmark, on which are printed, very neatly, some sentiments which have given me more than one moment of cheer. Indeed there are times when cheer seems a paltry word. The piece is entitled "Books: Our Companions."

"In books when authors see their imaginations clothed in words it stirs their enthusiasm, arouses their eloquence, they feel triumphant. 'To be read,' said Victor Hugo, means success.' Among all the books extant in the world it may be well to mention first the Good Book, the Bible, with its 775,893 words. The best teachings of the Koran, it is claimed, were borrowed from the Holy Scriptures.

"There are many books in the world to interest all kinds of people. Books sensational, books appealing to the sordid and mean, books to show men the splendor of courage, strength-giving books, books containing noble sentiments, books that lead to contemplation, books for hours of quiet retirement, books that make for eager happiness, books that reveal charm and joy of life.

"'Books are a soulful driving force,' said Zola. 'They benefit humanity.' Books are educational, increasing one's knowledge and vocabulary.

"Books can not always please, however good; minds are not ever craving for their food."

In the Margin.

After enjoying an undercover speakeasy circulation in typewritten and mimeograph form, the famous quartet by Ogden Nash—first published in a slightly amended version in "Happy Days"—soon will be released on its own by Simon & Schuster. It will have the title of "Four Prosperous So-and-So's."

It is the rousing and uninhibited Rubaiyat of the era of "Ragged Individualism," first presented at a Dutch Treat Club banquet, then set to music by Robert Armbuster, and since sung wherever men foregather to bemoan the age of investment trusts which offered little trust and less investment.

Somerset Maugham was disturbed recently, in his sun-drenched retreat at Cap Ferrat on the Riviera, by the rumor that Alexander Woollcott had been commenting to radio audiences about his style. So he wrote to Woollcott to find out what the Nero of Wits' End had said was wrong with it.

Woollcott replied that he had been talking about the common misuse of words. Among examples he had pointed out that even so superb a stylist as the author of "Of Human Bondage" misused "infer" and "imply." Whereupon the two great story-tellers engaged in a lively long-distance discussion of the essentials of modern style.

Seattle Right To Tax Rival Utility Upheld

Supreme Court Holds City Is Within Limits of Constitution.

Municipally-owned and operated utilities received new encouragement from the Supreme Court yesterday in an opinion which held the cities which own them may tax other and competing utilities without violating the equal protection clause of the Federal Constitution.

The ruling was made in the case of the Puget Sound Power & Light Co., of Seattle, Wash., and was one of several important actions taken by the court in a brief, but hectic session, which utility questions dominated.

The conservative members of the court voted with the liberal majority to agree that the Seattle tax must be upheld in the present case, but indicated a belief that in other circumstances the use of taxing power on utilities competing with its own might prove unconstitutional.

Justice Owen J. Roberts took no part in the decision of the case, which involved the validity of ICC orders directing the carriers to divest themselves of the stock. This left eight members and they were divided four-to-four on the question.

Lower Ruling Upheld.

In such situation, the court's rules provide that the lower court's decision stands and in the present case the Delaware Federal Court had held the Commissioner's orders invalid. The result, however, does not bind the higher tribunal in future rulings on similar questions.

Receivers of the Missouri Pacific Railroad were refused the assistance of the court in their fight to get into the Texas Federal courts a suit involving the right of two subsidiaries, the Beaumont, Sour Lake and the Houston, North Shore, to retain an interurban line on the Houston, North Shore.

They sought a mandamus to force the Texas Federal court to take jurisdiction, but the Supreme Court ruled that, while entitled to Federal court consideration, the receivers should have applied for aid to the St. Louis Federal court which appointed them.

Possibly indicating a further reluctance by the court to interfere in the utility problems of local communities, the court dismissed an appeal by Columbus (Ohio) Gas & Fuel Co. in its fight against the city's 48-cent gas rate.

Evenly Split Again.

By the rare coincidence of an equally divided membership, the court upheld the Pennsylvania Railroad and the Pennsylvania Co. in its fight to retain stock of the Wabash and Lehigh Valley Railroads acquired at a time when competing carriers were racing to gain control of the stock of the roads.

"The fourteenth amendment does not purport to protect property from every injurious or oppressive action by a State * * * It does not preclude competition, however drastic, between private enterprises or prevent unequal taxation or competitors who are different.

"The injury which the applicant fears may result," Justice Stone said in the majority opinion, "is the consequence of competition by the city, and not necessarily of the imposition of the tax. Even without the tax the possibility of injury would remain, for the city is now bound to conduct the business at a profit.

"The argument that some way must be found to interpret the due process clause, so as to preclude the danger of such an injury, fails to point the way. Legislation may protect from the consequences of such competition, but the Constitution does not."

Unethical Attorneys Face Court Discipline

Chicago, March 19 (AP).—Drastic discipline for attorneys using unethical tactics and delaying criminal justice was voted today by judges of the criminal courts of Cook County.

They adopted a rule empowering any of their number to suspend a lawyer held guilty of such misconduct. Suspension from all branches of the criminal court might be decreed by a majority of the judges.

Britain Grants "Jake" Factor Another Delay

Hull Asks Extradition Stay to Aid Fight on Touhy Gang.

At a request of Secretary Hull, Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British Ambassador, agreed to further delay in the extradition proceedings pending against John (Jake the Barber) Factor in Chicago.

The Secretary explained to Sir Ronald the desire of the Government to keep Factor a little longer in connection with the prosecution of the Touhy gang.

Four members of the gang have been convicted and sentenced, one is dead and one still at large. Justice Department officials wish to have Factor available at least until the time limit on an appeal has expired. Illinois is said to allow 60 days.

Factor is wanted in England on charges of fraudulently receiving money. He was slated to appear in Federal court in Chicago yesterday, but the hearing was postponed pending the outcome of Sir Ronald's talk with Secretary Hull.

Hull is the final authority in extradition matters. Lately, it is believed, the British government has sought to speed up proceedings.

Democrat Debt Almost Thrice That of G. O. P.

(Associated Press.)

Unpaid debts aggregating $544,711 were listed yesterday by the Democratic National committee, compared with a deficit of $195,008 reported by the Republican National committee as hangovers from the 1932 Presidential campaign.

The reports were filed with South Trimble, House clerk, under the corrupt practices act, by William F. Cronin, of New York, assistant Democratic treasurer, and George F. Getz, of Chicago, Republican treasurer.

Contributions to the Republican committee from January 1 to February 28 amounted to $2,250, of which $2,000 came from Silas H. Strawn, Chicago; $100 from Everett Saunders, Washington, and $100 from Mrs. John E. Hillman, Delta, Colo. Expenditures were placed at $7,783.

Net contributions received by the Democratic committee in the two-month period were reported at $30,348, with expenditures of $34,659.

Among the Democratic contributors were:

J. N. Paterson, New York, $2,500; James W. Gerard, New York, $1,000; J. F. T. O'Connor, Los Angeles, $500; Frank Hague, Jersey City, N. J., $5,000; Robert T. Scott, Washington, $5,000; Peter G. Gerry, Warwick, R. I., $1,000; Arkansas State Democratic Committee, $4,222; Sucn J. Serralles, Ponce, Puerto Rico, $1,000; Breckinridge Long, Washington, $2,500; Leslie Morris, Bailey P. Wootton and Frederick A. Willis, all of Frankfort, Ky., $646 each, and Seldon Glenn, of Louisville, Ky., and William Klair, Lexington, Ky., $646 each.

Of the unpaid Democratic obligations listed was $80,250 to John J. Raskob, former chairman.

Others included W. Morrison, San Antonio, $25,000; Joseph P. Kennedy, New York, $32,816; Henry Morgenthau, sr., New York, $10,000; Breckinridge Long, $7,500; M. L. Benedum, Pittsburgh, Pa., $17,500; Vincent Astor, W. K. Vanderbilt and Robert B. Myer, New York, $10,000 each; Howard Bruce, Baltimore, and R. H. Gore, Chicago, $10,000 each.

The committee also owes the Columbia Broadcasting $47,640, National Broadcasting, $107,571; New York Telephone Co., $39,537; Biltmore Hotel, New York, $17,000; Street Railway Advertising Co., New York, $30,000; Western Union, $13,262, and Postal Telegraph, $13,984.

Honest Firms, Copeland Says

(Associated Press.)

Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, yesterday said his pure food, drugs and cosmetics bill was primarily a consumers' measure, but would be of "distinct benefit to honest producers, manufacturers and dealers," and to "advertising agencies and media interested in promoting sale of those commodities, through curtailment of unfair competition resulting from sharp practices."

In a formal report on the latest draft approved last week by the Commerce Committee, Copeland said the bill was intended to "strengthen and extend" the law for which the late Dr. Harvey W. Wiley "labored so long and valiantly."

"Since the passage of that law," he said "profound changes in methods of manufacturing and selling foods and drugs have resulted from developments in scientific, technological and economic fields.

Weaknesses Revealed.

"These changes have not been devoid of opportunities for the unscrupulous to profit, without contravening the provisions of the present law, by endangering the public health and defrauding the consumer.

"Court decisions have revealed weaknesses in the measure that were not foreseen when it was enacted. Very few substantial alterations of the law have been provided to meet its demonstrated deficiencies.

"Yet the confidence of the public imposes a corresponding responsibility that it be made adequate to meet modern conditions. This bill has been prepared with this end in view.

Eliminates Loopholes.

"Its principal differences lie, first, in elimination of those provisions whose terms have compelled the courts to reach interpretations affording avenues of escape for the unscrupulous; second, extension of its provisions to false advertising and to harmful or falsely represented cosmetics; third, an amplification and reenforcement of the provisions designed to safeguard the public health and to promote honesty and fair dealing; and fourth, a strengthening of its procedural provisions."

The bill would create a committee on public health and a committee on food standards to advise the Secretary of Agriculture in administering it. No regulations could be issued without the approval of a majority on these committees.

"Dry" Prosecutor Quits for Beer Job

N. J. Morrison Resigns as Cummings' Aid.

Norman J. Morrison, special assistant to the Attorney General who prosecuted Texan Guinan and Helen Morgan under the dry laws in New York in 1928, resigned from the Justice Department yesterday to become associated with a law firm representing brewing and distilling interests here.

Morrison came here from El Paso, Tex., where he was Assistant United States Attorney, says United Press, to help Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt enforce prohibition.

The Once Over . . . By H. I. Phillips

DANCING AND BUSINESS.

("When the boss gets irritable, inconsiderate, he needs the soothing influence of an hour's dancing to keep him fit—to keep his jumpy nerves in order. Doctors have sent so many business men to our dancing school that we have set aside three floors exclusively for men."—From an advertisement.)

"Late again, eh!" exclaimed Phineas P. Dimmock, tired business man, as his stenographer blew in at 9:45. "The usual subway tie-up, I suppose."

"I'm sorry, Mr. Dimmock," replied Miss Wheedles.

"I couldn't help it," lisped Miss Wheedles.

"I'm sick of it, do you understand?" thundered Mr. Dimmock in a purple passion. "Once more and you're fired! Get that? Now take a letter!"

"Yes, Mr. Dimmock."

"Don't yes me. Get out your pad and pencil! . . . What are you doing with that black box?"

"That's not a black box, Mr. Dimmock," replied Miss Wheedles sweetly. "It's a portable phonograph. I've got some of the dreamiest records!"

"Phonograph!" barked Mr. Dimmock. "Records! For what?"

"Dancing," replied Miss Wheedles.

"What the devil does all this mean?" demanded Mr. Dimmock. "Stop this nonsense and take a letter!"

"A dance first—a letter afterward," smiled Miss Wheedles.

"Now, Mr. Dimmock," crooned Miss Wheedles. "Just one or two little dances. You need them terribly."

• • • •

"Need dances!" exclaimed Mr. Dimmock. "Phineas P. Dimmock, president and general manager of the International Road Roller Manufacturing Corporation, facing one of the busiest days in his career, needs dancing!"

"Now be a nice boy, Dimmie!"

"Dimmie! Phineas P. Dimmock to you!"

"Come, Dimmie dear!" smiled Miss Wheedles as she started the phonograph. "Your nerves are jumpy. You're irritable, inconsiderate. Your nerves need soothing."

"But . . ."

"Dimmie dear!"

"Oh, all right," said Mr. Dimmock as he took Miss Wheedles in his arms and lapsed into a lazy waltz.

"Isn't it lovely, Mr. Dimmock?" gurgled Miss Wheedles after an encore.

"Divine," said Mr. Dimmock. "Let's have a good hot fox trot."

"But how about those business letters?"

"Phooey on those business letters," said Mr. Dimmock. "And lissen."

"What?"

"Call me Dimmie," begged Phineas P. Dimmock.

LOOKING AHEAD.

As the weather is a matter of cycles the recent winter will probably be followed by an old-fashioned summer in which wet sponges will be worn on horses' heads, the office help will be dismissed at noon and ice wagon drivers will suffer from sunstroke.

TRADITION INVIOLATE.

Now it can be told. Miami, Fla., famous for its uninterrupted sunshine, had four days of rain in one stretch not long ago. But nobody down there would admit it. "Raining, eh?" we remarked to the doorman of a Miami hotel during a torrential downpour.

"Sorry, sir, but I wouldn't know," he replied, loyal to all Florida traditions.

Speaking of Florida, the best description of those new 1934 de luxe automobile models yet recorded was made recently by Edgar Hay in the Miami Herald. "All you need with those new streamline cars," he said, "is cream and a spoon to eat 'em with."

Sleet, Snow Sweep South With Spring Near Through West

Sleet and snow pelted the deep South almost to the Gulf Coast line yesterday as a quick-moving cold wave drove from East to West across Dixie.

Freezing temperatures were general across the Southern tier of States during the last 24 hours, but rising mercury and fairer skies were predicted for today in central and western portions. The forecast for Georgia, the Carolinas and Virginia was "colder."

The Western United States appeared to be getting back to spring, however, as the wave moved East and spread North, bringing subzero readings in the Adirondacks and predictions of sleet and snow in New York and New England.

Miss Pine and Raft Admit LoveInterest ThoughBoth Mated

Chicago, March 19 (AP).—Mrs. Edward J. Lehmann, jr., of Chicago—Virginia Pine of Hollywood—and George Raft, the motion picture actor, spent today conversing via the front pages.

In early editions Mrs. Lehmann admitted "George had asked me to marry him, but I don't know. I have my work, and besides, I haven't even got a divorce yet. And he's married, too, you know."

Later George said, "I think Virginia—Miss Pine—is charming and I'd marry her the minute she steps out of court a free woman."

He added that he is bound East to see about a divorce from his wife whom he married 10 years ago and from whom he has been separated for nine and a half years.

Wilhelm Pinched for Funds.

London, March 19 (U.P.).—So impaired are the finances of former Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany that Princess Hermine, his wife, has taken charge of all household arrangements and the family may have to move to smaller quarters, the Daily Express, Doorn, Holland, correspondent reported today.

The Grand Old Man of the Law.

At a Yale banquet in Boston more than 40 years ago, I first saw and heard Oliver Wendell Holmes, who was later to be one of the most distinguished of the justices of the Supreme Court of the United States. At this Yale dinner he was the guest from Harvard, and I remember his speech, because it contained no funny stories or anecdotes, was deeply serious in tone and temper, rather pessimistic in its outlook for the future, and felicitous in its use of the English language.

Although he was at that time eminent as a jurist, his chief title to fame among those who were not intimately acquainted with his work was that he was the son of the famous poet and essayist, Oliver Wendell Holmes. His famous father was still living, and I saw him in 1892 at the commemorative exercises in Appleton Chapel held in honor of James Russell Lowell. Justice Holmes loved his father, but I imagine he became weary of merely being anybody's son, for when he was over 90, some one asked him how it felt to be so old, and he replied playfully that the best thing about it was that he could now take the proper attitude toward his father.

Goethe said that youth is radical, old age conservative. No doubt this, in general is true; but it is not necessarily true. There are men whose wits are sharpened by old age, whose minds become more open to new ideas, who, if their temperament is naturally liberal, become more and not less liberal with advancing years. This has been markedly true of Justice Holmes.

He himself is not a pacifist, not a Communist, not what is called a radical by personal conviction. But he believes that in the long run it is both wiser and safer not to suppress by force the expression of political and religious opinions. He has said that freedom of the press and freedom of speech do not mean that others should be free to express what we ourselves believe, but that they should be free to express opinions that are hateful and abominable to our own way of thinking.

Brown's recent "Life of Justice Holmes" should be read by Americans. His written judicial decisions and opinions are remarkable from the legal, literary and political points of view. They have a distinct and important place in a free and enlightened nation.

Seek Father in Hammer Deaths.

New York, March 19 (U.P.).—Police of five States today sought John McHale, CWA worker, who vanished Saturday a few minutes before his wife discovered their four children, the eldest 6 years old, beaten to death with a hammer.

Sad Story of Parents, Bulls And a Victim

By Robert Quillen

A certain child had parents who loved him not wisely but too well.

Every moment of his life one or both of them watched him as a cat watches a mouse, and their ordinary speech gave him the impression that all proper sentences begin with "Don't."

Their ambition was to make him act right and speak right and believe right, which is to say that they wished him to be just like themselves.

If the child attempted to do anything in a manner prompted by his own reason, he was promptly rebuked. If he persisted, he was spanked.

In his early teens he often attempted to be original, but these rebellions always ended in defeat.

"Why shouldn't I wear a green tie with this shirt?" he would ask. And his mother would answer sweetly: "Because it isn't good taste, dear."

"But it's my taste," he would insist. "And it's my tie. It suits me——"

"That will do, dear," his mother would say. "You must learn to do what is right."

Well, things went on that way until he was 16. His parents told him how to have his hair cut, how to sharpen his lead pencil, how to lie in bed, how much sugar to use in his coffee. If he used the telephone, they interrupted to tell him the right way to address central.

So at 16, being as near right as parents could make him, he was ready to face the world.

One morning he left the house and followed a path along the face of a cliff. At one point a gnarled tree grew from the cliff side and here he stopped to rest.

A moment later he heard a bellow and looked up to see a wild bull charging down upon him. Instinctively he turned, but another bull stood behind him. He was trapped.

Now above him, within easy reach, was a stout limb of the tree. Below was a drop of six feet to a soft bed of leaves. One quick movement and he would be safe.

But, alas! no parent was there to tell him the right thing to do and his own mind wouldn't click, so he stood and took it.

Nancy Sandman Wed To Army Mail Flier

Atlanta, March 19 (AP).—Miss Nancy Goff Sandman, of Garden City, Long Island, was married here today to Lieut. Edmund Theodore Gorman, of the Army Air Crops.

Lieut. Gorman was transferred here recently from Mitchel Field, Long Island, and flew the first plane carrying Army air mail out of Atlanta. He is a native of Haverhill, Mass.

Oklahoma City, March 19 (U.P.).—Oklahoma buried John A. Simpson, Nationally-known farm leader today. A message of condolence from President Roosevelt came while the body lay in state in the Oklahoma Capitol.

Lawyer, Barker Deny Reece Bonds Charge

Nashville, Tenn., March 19 (AP).—Paul M. Davis, banker, and A. V. Louthan, attorney, today denied testimony of J. I. Reece that they participated in a plan for him to divert $22,000 from the State insurance department into a political war chest.

Reece, former insurance commissioner, had said that $90,000,000 of the $100,000 of bonds he is charged with stealing were given to him to sell in accordance with an "agreement" under which he was to refund the deficit in his account with part of the proceeds.

Hundreds Feast As Antonio Pays Debt of Gratitude

Some months ago Mrs. Drago underwent a dangerous operation. Her husband, a printer, vowed that if she survived he would provide a "feast of the apostles" on St. Joseph's Day such as had not been witnessed outside his native taly.

Mrs. Drago recovered, and today, in the modest Drago flat, the tables groaned with exotic viands. Friends were garbed in the traditional costumes of the New Testament characters. Hundreds from the neighborhood enjoyed the feast.

Parrot Fever Kills Third in 2 Weeks

50 Employes of Pittsburgh Store So Far Affected.

Pittsburgh, March 19 (AP).—The city health department today reported the third death officially attributed to parrot fever within two weeks.

Dr. W. G. Augenbaugh said Miss Katherin Deimer, 57, clerk in a department store, died Friday of the disease "with contributory lobar pneumonia." Her sister, Sophia Deimer, 55, who was employed in the same store, died March, supposedly of pneumonia.

Deaths and sicknesses so far investigated have involved about 50 employes of the store, including 11, who have died. Physicians say it is almost impossible to locate psittacosis symptoms in a pneumonia patient.

Beats All How Business Fails To Pick Up in Alphabet Line

The new Government Information Bureau, created to guide visitors through the alphabetical recovery agencies, would like a few more customers, the Associated Press reports.

Now opening its second week of passing out quick answers, the bureau is kept pleasantly busy sometimes. But hardly ever could its headquarters be described as a hubbub of activity.

Already the service has a feather in its cap of which it is right proud. It found a man, when all the visitor knew was his name. It has no list of the thousands of Government employes, but "liaison did it."

When a reporter strolled into the information headquarters, trying to look and act like a manufacturer from the Middle West who wanted to know about the NRA, one other customer was present.

The woman in charge, who said she didn't know her name for publication, apparently was expert in penetrating "disguises." When it came to questions of policy, she explained that clerks were cautioned to refer seekers of that kind of information to the bureaus concerned.

This extended even to matters covered in the bureau's new "primer," which tells all about the AAA, PWA, RFC, &c., she said.

The office keeps hours from 8 a. m. to 6:30 p. m. Around 4:30 is the busy season. On the opening day, 25 went in the door, with "United States Information Service" on it, and asked questions. Sixteen telephoned, several long distance.

A record is kept of each query, and the answer. So far, scarcely a question has been repeated. People want to know lots of things.

It was a Philadelphian who called long distance to ask where he could find a code authority then taking part in an NRA hearing. One man wanted to know what Public Works were planned for Montana. Another asked about a pending bill to relieve chattels.

Academy Bestows Highest Honor Upon Katharine Hepburn and Charles Laughton

Theirs Hailed Finest Screen Acting of All

Hepburn's 'Morning Glory,' Laughton's 'Henry VIII' in Favor; Show News.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

The highest honors the screen world can bestow, on Thursday night were awarded Katharine Hepburn and Charles Laughton.

On that night more than 1,000 of the most distinguished figures in picturedom attended the banquet and ball given by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences to pay tribute to Miss Hepburn and Mr. Laughton for having won the distinction of having contributed the best acting to the screen during the 17-month period ended last January 1.

Miss Hepburn was ranked first among the feminine stars of the cinema by virtue of her outstanding performance in "Morning Glory;" Mr. Laughton for the extraordinary realism of his depiction of the role of Henry VIII of England in the British-made picture, "The Private Life of Henry VIII."

Neither Present.

By an unfortunate coincidence, neither of the stars so highly honored by their craft was present to receive in person the homage that usually attends the academy awards. Mr. Laughton is in England, where, when not engaged in doing classic drama at Old Vic's, he is making a new picture under native auspices; Miss Hepburn is in the East.

These awards of merit are identical, as far as they go, with those announced a day or two earlier, and celebrated in this space on last Thursday, by the Hollywood Reporter, a trade journal of obvious prescience. The Reporter also picked Miss Hepburn and Mr. Laughton, and for the same performances.

Among the academy's accolades were others for "Cavalcade" as the best production of the period providing eligibles for the competition, with "A Farewell to Arms" and "Little Women"—in which Miss Hepburn also was the star, by the way—rated second and third respectively.

Second and Third Honors.

In point of personal performance, May Robson was second to Miss Hepburn as star of "Lady for a Day," and Diana Wynyard third, for her work in "Cavalcade."

Paul Muni received the second largest vote among the males for his performance in "I Am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang," and Leslie Howard the third for the excellence of his portrayal in "Berkeley Square."

In this connection, is is interesting to look back and note that for the year 1931-32, the last in which awards previously were made, the Academy voted Helen Hayes and Fredric March the screen's foremost artists, on the bases of their superlative work in "The Sin of Madelon Claudet" and "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," respectively.

In this year, a special award was made to Wallace Beery for his work in "The Champ," since he had scored only one less vote for first place than the total accorded Mr. March.

The direction award the same year went to Frank Borzage, for "Bad Girl" and "Grand Hotel" was deemed the best pictures.

The Earlier Awards.

If memory has dimmed as to the still earlier awards of the Academy, it may be interesting to revert sufficiently to chronicle that in 1930-31, Marie Dressler and Lionel Barrymore were the winning players and Norman Taurog the honored director for his "Skippy;" 1928-29, Mary Pickford and Warner Baxter and Frank Lloyd the director; 1927-28, the first year awards were made, Emil Jannings—and what has become of him, by the way?—and Janet Gaynor, with Frank Borzage and Lewis Milestone winning directorial acclaim for "Seventh Heaven"—Miss Gaynor's piece de resistance—and "Two Arabian Nights." "Wings" was the outstanding photoplay that year—the same year Paramount held its sales convention at the Carleton and showed "Wings" to an invited audience that packed the Washington Auditorium—and "Sunrise," the winner for sheer artistic quality.

Will Rogers, star of "David Harum," current on the local screen, was toastmaster at the Thursday night banquet and is said to have been very droll in many of his comments upon the past, present and future state of the movies and their foremost luminaries. He would be!

One harbors the suspicion that the powers governing the playing dates of the British-made production of "Catherine the Great," have pulled a boner in "yanking" this admirable picture, costarring Elizabeth Bergner and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., as the attraction long on the booking sheets as the one to follow "It Happened One Night" at a local theater.

No picture has had a more enthusiastic "build-up" in the press and over the air than this English version of the same story that Josef Von Sternberg has made under the title of "The Scarlet Empress," with Marlene Dietrich, John Lodge, C. Aubrey Smith and Louise Dresser as the pivotal figures in a material production of stupendous proportions.

Rather than risk the theoretically dire consequences of a Holy Week engagement, the distributors of "Catherine the Great" have, in the terse vernacular of the industry, pulled it out, probably unmindful of the fact that box-office records have been set in this town during Holy Week with less worthy pictures than their "Catherine the Great"—which, while not the greatest ever made is still a sufficiently meritorious picture to stand on its own, any week, in any man's theater.

As it stands at present, "It Happened One Night" will be followed, in the order named, at RKO-Keith's by Irene Dunne in "This Man Is Mine;" Frank Buck's sequel to "Bring 'em Back Alive," "Wild Cargo," and Katharine Hepburn in "Spitfire"—which makes it not impossible that Herr Von Sternberg's "Scarlet Empress" might precede "Catherine the Great" to a local screen, a contingency which understandably could turn out to be just too bad from the standpoint of the latter.

Local Magnates Named.

The motion picture industry's machinery for operating the NRA code of fair practice in the actual field of its ostensible usefulness moved nearer successful consummation last week as the code authority in New York selected the personnel of local grievance and local clearance boards for Boston, San Francisco and Washington, D. C.

Seven well-known representatives of various branches of the "fillum business" are included in the appointments for the Washington territory.

On the grievance board one finds the names of old friends in the persons of Robert Smeltzer, Washington branch manager for Warner Brothers and First National Pictures; Sam A. Galanty, that high-strung Southern gentleman, who serves as local branch manager for Columbia pictures, and Carter Barron, city manager in Washington of Loew's, Inc.

More of the Boys.

On the clearance and zoning board appear the no less prominent names of Rudolph Berger, Washington branch manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who irritates his less fortunate friends by sending them postcards of the tropic beauties of Miami Beach, Fla., while we are enjoying the ravages of the year's best blizzards; Sam J. Flax, of Liberty Pictures, a life-long pal of one Asa Yoelson—Al Jolson to you, youngster—John J. Payette, general manager of the Warner Brothers' interests in the Washington territory, and Sidney Lust, foremost among Washington's independent theater operators and film exchange managers.

This column acknowledges with gratitude a kindly note from Stanley R. Chase, manager of the advertising sales department of Paramount Pictures in the Washington territory, anent the recent visit to Washington of John Lodge, leading man with Marlene Dietrich in the von Sternberg production of "The Scarlet Empress," already hereinabove alluded to. Thank you, Mr. Chase, but the pleasure, as the saying goes, was all mine.

Let Him Stay In!

We are led to believe from vagrant hints in various of the New York and Boston public prints—that would be newspapers—that one of the principal things to anticipate in the coming of "Annina," the new Rudolf Friml operetta starring Mme. Maria Jeritza, to the National a week from tonight, is the dancing of Paul Haakon.

It is reported that Mr. Haakon created some agitation in New York not so long ago by the extraordinary character of his work in "Champagne, Sec," the modernized version of Strauss' "Die Fledermaus." Longer ago than that, Haakon was the last partner ever to appear with Mme. Anna Pavlowa in Europe.

He dances four times in "Annina"—or has up to now—and on each occasion "stops the show." It is said that a great deal of Mr. Haakon's evening in the theater is devoted to the pleasant business of taking bows and curtain calls.

Coupled with the Jeritza voice and Junoesque bearing, and the Friml music—perhaps tripled with them is what I mean—this assuredly is something to look forward to.

You Get the Drift?

It certainly will be a keen disappointment if, by the time you see this athwart your coffee cup, it has not turned to snow. If there is anything we have needed this winter it has been a snowstorm, not another one of these dinky little rains!

And if you think we mean it, Mr. Weather Man, you are practically off your nut!

Gayety

"HOLLYWOOD BABIES." Hirst-Lake production in two acts, featuring Lucky Darlin, Rita Zane and Sammy Weston, with Trilby Kolsa, Ina Thomas, Nora Murray, Karl Bowers, Billy Ainsley, Lew Petel, Jimmy Byrnes and Harry Allen. Staged under the direction of Frankie Bryant. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

No less glamorous than its expressive title, "Hollywood Babies" proves beyond doubt that Col. Jimmy Lake can dish it out, not only in the way that his patrons like it, but in a manner to make them cry for more.

Less star-studded than usual, the bill is the more consistently entertaining on that account, relying on the general appeal of every number rather than occasional moments of dazzling grandeur.

It matters not where one looks this week, there is charm and delight—good singing, cleverly routined dances, appealing specialty numbers, fast comedy by good comedians, abetted by fine straights and, above all, colorful and brilliant staging.

Outstanding is Lucky Darlin, one of Washington's strongest weaknesses. Her terpsichorean achievements, as the prima ballerina, are revealing and stamp her the ace lady of the current company.

But Lucky is just one of the attractions. Rita Zane, the titian charmer, and Ina Thomas, the devastating platinum blonde, are there to add zest to the program. Trilby Kosla, through some emergency, was raised for the week from the line to the rank of principal, starting off the array of talent in a way that made those subsequently appearing do their best to run even.

Topping the roster of comedians is Sammy Weston, who is making his first appearance in the East, following a successful tour of duty on the West Coast. His piece de resistance is a revival of Ben Welsh's famed "The Cobbler" skit (which Joe Welsh, a brother, inaugurated on the vaude stage). It is a great act that packs a k. o. wallop.

Karl Bowers and Billy Ainsley, the latter also coming from the West Coast, are the other comics who contribute more than a few of the excellent reasons for the emission of hearty guffaws. Lew Petel, with the doubling of Mr. Allen, who is the male warbler for the week, handles the straight roles.

Norma Murray trills a sweet soprano of the better sort, and Jimmy Byrnes does a couple of tap numbers that are by no means enough.

Special mention should be made of the extraordinarily capable chorus this week. An innovation in finales is introduced with a tabloid minstrel show closing the first act.

Auto Victim Improves.

The condition of Mrs. W. Ashby Carr, of Baltimore, who was severely injured in an automobile accident at Riverdale Saturday, was reported slightly improved last night at Providence Hospital.

When Rhumba Rhythms Rumble!

When the presumably Cuban orchestra begins its tantalizing syncopations in "The Trumpet Blows," Frances Drake, appearing opposite George Raft, will appear as the Spanish dancer. An American girl, Miss Drake first attracted attention as a dancer in London, having ducked to England, in a manner of speaking, at an early age; thence she graduated to the British screen and so to Hollywood, and now look at her—which ought not to be too difficult! "The Trumpet Blows" will be coming along.

Hollywood, March 18.—While Paul Muni may be of a mind to do a comedy next, now that he has enjoyed considerable acclaim for his work in "Hi, Nellie," there is more than a slight chance that a serious portrayal will again claim him. One of the roles that is being talked of is the title character in "The Sea Wolf," grand old war horse of the movies, which was one of the first famous pictures ever to be made.

PAUL MUNI.

"The Sea Wolf" is that potent kind of story, which stand revival once every so often. It was made once in the talkies, but not so successfully the last time.

It was three times produced in the silents, but for those who remember, there was really only one version, and that starred Hobart Bosworth, and was filmed about 20 years ago. It has been refilmed on an average of every five years.

Actress to Play Stylist.

Carole Lombard is to have her chance at being a style exponent. The story being written for her by Roland Pertwee, who came all the way out here to do it, will be called "Excursion Into Paradise," and will concern itself with pirating of fashions, like the recent "Fashions of 1934." It has to do with a small-town girl who goes to Paris and copies styles before they are released, sending them back to America. Miss Lombard is just now playing in "Twentieth Century" with John Barrymore, but this picture will probably shortly follow. Just to lend authenticity to the picture, Columbia is sending its designer, Kalloch, to Paris to gather data.

Frances Dee Assigned.

Frances Dee has joined the cast of the film, "Of Human Bondage," with Leslie Howard, and, incidentally, is to play the star's wife in the picture. This also will be her final picture until after the interesting event, destined to happen in September. Miss Dee really expected to retire from the films, but was prevailed upon to accept this role, because RKO had difficulty finding the right actress to play it.

Musical Cast Selected.

Grace Moore's picture, "One Night of Love," will have a personnel marked by musical experience. Tullio Carminati, of course, has done music shows in the East, and sung on the screen in "The Gallant Lady" and "Moulin Rouge." Andres de Segurola, former opera star, is another member of the cast whose voice has been heard in pictures. Rose Marie Grosse, who sang in "The Merry Widow," is also in the picture. Others now include Henry Armetta, Jane Darwell, Sam Hayes and Jessie Ralph. The film is to get into work Wednesday, with Victor Schertzinger directing.

Picture Pageant in Passing.

Douglas Scott has signed up for "Too Many Women" with Warner Baxter and Rosemary Ames. He was the boy in "Cavalcade."

He is of the James Cagney type—is Joe Morrison. He was with George Olson's band, and sang "The Last Round-Up." He will make his screen debut in "Grease Paint."

Ben Bernie and his orchestra arrived in town recently for "The Great Magoo."

Hollywood, March 18.—"Have you any of those nice hankies that your wife monogramed for you at Christmas left," we asked Clark Gable.

"Any buttons on your coats or vests?" we demanded.

"Oh, we had those renewed three or four times," the newest matinee idol admitted. "Somebody has a hat of mine, too, and a tie, and—" he blushed—"a lock of my hair."

CLARK GABLE.

We were talking about Clark's recent hectic personal appearance tour of the East.

It seems also that the somebody who snatched the tie was a feminine fan, and the same one who sent Clark another in its place.

"Parties, I suppose?" we hazarded.

"Parties? Huh!" snorted Clark. "Nary a party. No time for 'em. The nearest I got to one was to see it through the elevator door. And I scrammed. Had to sleep in another hotel! Nice party, too. Wanted to go to it. You see, some of the Baltimore social set got up a party for me, taking the whole fifteenth floor of the Lord Baltimore Hotel for it. Didn't find out about it until I arrived at 2:30 a. m., to go to bed. By that time the party was gay. But I had to turn away sorrowfully and go to another hotel to sleep!"

"Meet any dumb but pretty girls?"

"Uh-huh. Three of the prettiest fans I met were dumb. But they were really dumb—deaf and dumb. They were 10, 12 and 16 years old. They came to the theater back stage to meet me. And they gave me a card with the sign language on it, with a note telling me I could learn to speak that way so we could talk together when I came back!"

Heard on the Boulevard.

Charlie Ruggles telling about raising poultry on his San Fernando ranch . . . "I have found," said Charlie, "that a hen, properly encouraged with kindness and a spot of grain, will deliver an egg with sufficient regularity to pay her own way. The problem is to get the hen to lay eggs more often. I have been attempting to cross my hens with high-frequency current, but the only result to date is that the overstimulation simply put those hens into a non est condition . . ." Leave it to Alice Fay to think up good ones. Her prosperity slogan is—"An oil station for every college graduate!" . . . Will Rogers figuring on the table cloth in the Cafe de Paris on the Fox lot, and finally announcing that his deductions show that the United States now has more gold than money!

Her Ambition to Direct.

Eva Le Gallienne has only one ambition, as relates to the movies, and that is to direct. Sometime she would like to undertake this. And it's a natural step in view of her activities in the realm of stage production.

"Maybe 15 or 20 years from now I would be interested in doing character roles in pictures, but I do not believe that there would be any possible place for me right today in acting," she said.

"One has to be either younger or older than I am really to prosper in pictures. So for the present I will continue on the stage. Directing? Possibly later."

Women Campaign To Save Records

Kilmarnock, Va., March 19 (Spl.).—Preservation of old records in the Lancaster County clerk's office, many of which date back to the seventeenth century, is sought in a drive by the Lancaster Women's Club.

Lack of proper care has reduced the documents to a deplorable condition, club members say.

The University of Virginia has offered assistance in the campaign, while several authorities to whom the club has written have joined them in the drive.

Cumberland Jury Drawn by Judges

Cumberland, Md., March 19 (Spl.).—Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan and Associate Judge Albert A. Doub have drawn the jury panel for the April term of the Allegany County Circuit Court. It includes:

Order Closing Bases Rapped

Menace to Ships Is Seen in Abandonment of Patrols.

Norfolk, Va., March 19 (Spl.).—The Propeller Club of Hampton Roads at a meeting today adopted resolutions protesting the decommissioning of Coast Guard bases at Norfolk and Morehead City, N. C.

It was announced at the meeting that closing the two bases would reduce equipment of the Coast Guard in this district to such an extent that the efficiency of the service would be endangered.

The Norfolk division, which extends to Savannah, answers more calls of distress from ships than any other division on the East Coast. Closing of the base here would mean withdrawal of three patrol boats.

Senators Byrd and Glass and Representative Darden will be asked to voice protest of the maritime interests before the Treasury Department, which controls the Coast Guard.

U. of M. to Launch State's Celebration

Senator Tydings to Speak Next Monday.

The University of Maryland formally will usher in the tercentenary celebration next Monday with "Maryland Day" exercises at 2:30 p. m. Senator Millard E. Tydings will be the principal speaker.

The Reserve Officers Training Corps unit will provide a guard of honor for Senator Tydings. Songs by Miss Helen Stokes, of Baltimore, and selections by the university band will be other features. The Glee Club, headed by Gene Kressin, will open the program.

Senator Tydings is a graduate of both the College Park and Baltimore branches of the University of Maryland. He received his degree at College Park in 1910, and last year was given the honorary degree of doctor of laws.

Virginia Peanuts, Potatoes Increase

Acreage for Tobacco, Corn, Beans Cut.

Richmond, March 19 (AP).—Henry M. Taylor, agricultural statistician for the Federal-State crop reporting service, said today Virginia farmers will plant less corn, hay, soy beans and tobacco this year. Potatoes and peanuts will show increases, he said.

Tobacco acreage in the State will be reduced about 17 per cent, he estimated, despite an expected increase of 22 per cent in the acreage planted to sun-cured leaf. Flue-cured growers have announced plans to reduce their planting 15 per cent; fire-cured growers 22 per cent, and burley growers 30 per cent.

Potato growers will increase their acreage about 14 per cent and peanut farmers will plant 10 per cent more acreage than last year.

Winchester Man Takes Own Life

Failing Health Is Blamed; Throat, Wrist Cut.

Winchester, Va., March 19 (Spl.).—Edgar L. Hook, 73, retired miller, was found dead in a spring near his home here today. The artery in his left wrist and the jugular vein had been severed. A knife and razor were found at the end of a trail of blood some distance from the spring. Dr. Charles R. Anderson rendered a verdict of suicide.

Despondency over failing health was given by friends as the probable motive.

Prior to retirement from business several years ago, Mr. Hook operated flour and feed mills at Gore and Trone, Va. He leaves a second wife, three sons, Carson, Loring J., and E. Russell Hook, and two brothers, Mack B. Hook, of Winchester, and Marvin Hook, of Capon Bridge, W. Va.

Roanoke Rifle Club Plans New Range

C. L. Stockdell Is Elected President.

Roanoke, Va., March 19 (Spl.).—The Roanoke Rifle Club has planned an outdoor range for shoots during the spring and summer. A meeting will be held March 29 to complete arrangements for the season.

C. L. Stockdell was elected president of the club, and other officers are R. B. Loveland, vice president, and William Ferguson, secretary.

Nearly 100 sportsmen are expected to take part in the club's activities. Plans for an indoor range call for six targets, two at 25 feet, two at 50 feet and two at 75 feet.

Action on Hanover's Budget Set April 2

Hanover Courthouse, Va., March 19 (Spl.).—Action on recommendations made at a public hearing on the proposed Hanover County budget will be taken at the board of supervisors' meeting on April 2.

A 12-cent increase in Ashland district and a 3-cent increase in Beaver Dam was favored at the hearing, while the new tax levy in Henry district was closely contested.

Woman's Death by Auto Is Declared Accident

Harrisonburg, Va., March 19 (Spl.).—Dr. F. L. Byers, Rockingham County coroner, today decided Mrs. Emma E. Trainer, 59, came to her death last night at Mount Crawford by being struck by an automobile driven by Oliver Kagey, 25, of Dayton.

No charges have been preferred against Kagey. Mrs. Trainer was walking along the highway when struck. Kagey said rain prevented his seeing Mrs. Trainer, who is survived by seven children.

Augusta Will Receive $5,000 More School Aid

Waynesboro, Va., March 19 (Spl.).—State appropriations to public schools in Augusta County will be increased 5 per cent next year as a result of the educational bill passed by the Assembly, according to C. G. Quesenbery, delegate from this county, in an address before the Business and Professional Women's Club annual banquet.

The $5,000 additional funds will bring some relief to country teachers whose average salary is $540.

Budget Reduces Tax 26 Per Cent

Henrico, Virginia County, Has Slash Plan.

Richmond, March 19 (AP).—County Manager Willard F. Day, of Henrico, today presented a budget set-up for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1934, which envisages a reduction of 26 per cent in the general county tax levy.

Slight increases were written into the special school levies.

A public hearing on the budget will be held April 3. Manager Day also presented a revised list of county employes.

Foreclosure Brings $7,100.

Women's Press Club Laughs at Politics

Mae West Reigns Over Republican National Committee by Proxy and Barbs of Satire Rake Women Celebrities at Dinner.

The yearly milestone of the Women's National Press Club was celebrated last evening at a dinner in the grand ballroom of the Willard Hotel. The merry-making commenced at 7:30 o'clock and continued late.

"Mae West" was made chairman of the Republican National Committee in a comedy sketch as part of the entertainment. Selection of Mae, it was explained, was intended to put some life in the Grand Old Party.

Mrs. Roosevelt and nearly every other woman in official and social Washington watched Mae install fan dancers in Republican headquarters, rob the First Lady of her press conference by holding a Mae West conference at the same hour, and finally go over to the Democrats when Jim Farley made her gold stabilizer.

The siren of the screen had first turned down Farley's job as head of the Democratic Committee, and also refused to be appointed Minister to Denmark.

She told newspapermen to remember "it's not the press conferences in your life but the life of your press conferences."

Gold Standard Expert.

She declined an offer from Senator Carter Glass to "teach her all about the gold standard."

"If there's anything I know about, it's the gold standard," she murmured. "I've always been on the gold standard."

The Three Little Pigs changed their tune and begged the Big, Bad Wolf to eat them.

"If that lazy old wolf doesn't eat us, Henry Wallace 'll kill us!" they wailed. But the wolf said he'd "huffed and he'd puffed and he just couldn't eat up all the farm surplus."

A code hearing for the Roosevelts was presided over by a solemn Blue Eagle, while lawyers wrangled over hours per week and literary output for the F. D. and T. R. branches of the family.

Then came the troublesome problem of child labor.

"In behalf of Paulina," said the T. R. representative, "I ask that Sistie and Buzzie and all the other little Roosevelts in your branch of the family be forbidden to write books, magazine articles, syndicated newspaper articles and to make radio talks until they're 16."

Code-Exempt Roosevelts.

A meek consumer protested that he "just couldn't take all the Roosevelt literary product, and the hearing ended hilariously when it was decided that all Roosevelts are executives and wouldn't come under a code anyhow, and that the National anthem should be changed to 'Ring Around the Roosevelts.'"

A scene in Little America satirized Mrs. Roosevelt's travels. Three members of Admiral Byrd's party, huddled in furs over a campfire, were horrified when they saw a visitor approaching. "It's Mrs. Roosevelt!" they gasped.

There also was a bootleg beauty parlor raid, based on the Rex Tugwell bill to regulate beauty preparations, among other drug and food products. The beauty parlor resembled a prohibition speakeasy, with customers gaining admission by a secret series of knocks, and contraband cosmetics were dispensed. Nail polish was recommended as "embassy stuff." Henna rinse was kept in reserve because "J. Ham Lewis was sending in his whiskers to be hennaed."

Raiders pounded at the door, and customers and operators drank lotions and ate cold cream, to do away with them. When the raiders broke in, the party was peacefully playing bridge.

A "Dance of the Seven Veils" featured Salome Morgenthau and John the Reserve Board. Salome danced before Herod, shouting "there goes 5 per cent!" as she threw off veil after veil.

"Oh, keep your tunic on," said Herod, and gave Salome the head of John the Reserve Board on a silver platter. John's head proved to be a huge bag labeled "Five Billion Dollars."

Anniversary Guests.

Dr. Coleman Nevils, S. J., president of Georgetown University, and the members of the observatory staff were hosts at a reception last night in the Copley Lounge in honor of Capt. J. F. Hellweg, U. S. N., superintendent of the United States Naval Observatory.

The evening was devoted to the sciences as a part of the Georgetown tercentenary program and was dedicated to Father Angelo Secchi, S. J., Italian scientist of the early eighteenth century, who taught at Georgetown for several years until recalled to Rome in 1850. Dr. Paul A. McNally, S. J., director of the Georgetown Observatory, entertained the guests with an illustrated lecture on "The Universe in Which We Dwell."

After the lecture the guests who so desired went to the Georgetown Observatory. The reception to Capt. Hellweg followed the lecture. The guests included Capt. and Mrs. Hellweg, Dr. and Mrs. James Robinson and other Naval Observatory staff members.

Among others from scientific and educational circles in the city were Dr. W. P. Grey, chief of the United States Weather Bureau, and Mrs. Grey; Dr. George R. Heyl, of the Bureau of Standards, and Mrs. Heyl; Dr. L. S. Badger, director of the National Institute of Health; Dr. Francis E. Johnston and Dr. Walter F. Fenton, of the American University; Dr. Otto J. Ramler, of the Catholic University; Dr. William Gerry Morgan, dean of the Georgetown School of Medicine; Dr. William F. Notz, dean of the School of Foreign Service, and Mrs. Notz; Dr. George Tully Vaughan, of the School of Medicine; Mr. and Mrs. William A. Reid, of the Pan-American Union, and Maj. Raymond O. Barton, U. S. A., commandant at Georgetown.

The name of Angelo Secchi is of particular interest in Washington at this time, since the honors of the Secchi Academy of Sciences at Georgetown are to be awarded on Founders Day, next month, to Dr. Sofie A. Nordhoff-Jung, one of the leading women physicians and scientists of Washington. Father Secchi's researches are contained in the original Smithsonian Contributions to Knowledge.

Symphony Teams To Meet Friday

The National Symphony Orchestra Association, of which Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe is chairman, will meet Friday at 12:30 p. m. in the home of Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis. Five teams which have been engaged for three weeks in seeking funds to sustain the orchestra for the 1934-35 season will report.

To complete the $60,000 sustaining fund by April 1, $29,000 is needed. Memberships at $25 each are being subscribed. The orchestra will return 12 per cent of the membership price to the members in concert tickets for next season.

Contributions of small or large amounts are being urged by the campaign committee, between now and Easter Sunday, in order that shortly thereafter Dr. Hans Kindler and Mr. C. Cappel may complete their plans for the coming winter season.

Among those who have recently become members are Mrs. Vincent Astor, Mrs. David Barry, Mrs. John C. Breckinridge, Mrs. Duncan Cameron, Mrs. Wilbur John Carr, Miss Helen Lee Doherty, Miss Deborah Dows, Miss Marianna Dunn, Miss Anne Livingston Eustis, Mrs. Fairfax Harrison, Mrs. William Hitt, Mrs. Wilton J. Professor Crum Lectures Tonight

Archeological Society to Hear of Portugal.

Prof. Earle Le V. Crum, of Lehigh University will deliver an address at the 178th meeting of the Archaeological Society of Washington tonight at the Washington Club on the subject, "The History of Portuguese Architecture." He returned recently from Portugal, where he made an intensive study of the curiously mingled foreign influences which resulted in the characteristic highly decorated architecture to be seen only in Portugal and its dependencies and former colonies.

The April meeting of the society will be held at the Spanish Embassy April 4, with Ambassador and Mme. de Cardenas as hosts. At that time Mr. William Howe Downes, formerly of the Boston Transcript, will lecture on "Velasquez: The Master of Realism."

Both lectures will be illustrated by lantern slides. The society will close its season in May with a garden tea.

Honor Paid Writer Of Beta Mu Song

Sorority Presents Ring to Miss Martin.

Miss Burley Martin was presented with a Beta Mu ring at a meeting of Beta Mu National Sorority at the Thomas Circle Club Friday, in recognition of her service in writing the sorority's National song. Six Washington chapters, a pledge chapter of Washington and two pledge chapters of Baltimore, were represented at the meeting. Miss Helen Ray, National president, presided.

A song contest was held and a loving cup presented to the winner. Entertainment was furnished by the pledges of Alpha, Delta, Eta, Gamma, Zeta and Epsilon Chapters.

The committees for the meeting and contest were composed of Miss Helen Ray, Miss Gwendolyn Willis, Miss Audrey Gill, Miss Janet Hauser, Miss Mildred Crampton, Miss Billy Martin, Miss Dorothy Leigh, Miss Dorothy Miles, Miss Alline McBride, Miss Betty Hall and Miss Margaret Welk.

Mr. and Mrs. Sturges Joined by Two Sons

Mr. and Mrs. Hollister Sturges have been joined in their apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel by their sons, Mr. Hollister Sturges, jr., a student at the University of New Hampshire, who will remain until Sunday, and Mr. Paul Sturges, who has just returned from an extended trip to South Africa. The latter has been attending Harvard University, but suspended his studies this year to make the voyage. He will be with his parents for an indefinite stay.

Richard duPont, Helena Crozier Wed in Florida

Miss Helena Allaire Crozer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Crozer, of Philadelphia, and Mr. Richard duPont, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Felix duPont, of Wilmington, Del., were married at a simple ceremony in the Trinity Episcopal Church at Miami Beach, Fla., yesterday.

The bride wore a smart traveling suit of heavy white silk with a blue blouse and a white hat. Her only attendant was her sister, Miss Marion Crozer. Mr. A. Felix duPont, jr., was best man for his brother.

After the ceremony there was a small reception at the home of the bride's parents for the out-of-town guests, who included Mr. and Mrs. A. Felix duPont, parents of the bridegroom; Mr. and Mrs. A. Felix duPont, jr., Miss Lydie duPont and Miss Alice duPont, Mr. Benson Marvel and Mr. Robert Marvel, all of Wilmington, Del.; Mr. Robert W. MacDonald, of Baltimore; Mr. Scott Townsend, jr., of Rockford, Del.; Mr. Robert Owen, of Valley Forge, Pa.; Mr. Francis Leiber, of Bryn Mawr, Pa.; Mr. Laidler D. Mackall, of Washington; Mrs. William Churchman and her daughter, Miss Beatrice Churchman; Miss Bodine Moon, Miss Elizabeth Pierson, Miss Kate von Moschzisker, Mr. Benjamin MacFarlane, Mr. Perry Benson and Mr. Irwin D. Two Lipsticks For One Price Now Available

This Rouge Comes With a Refill; Both Are Indelible.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Right here at Easter time it's only right and proper we should make our pilgrimage to the bonnet shops. By the time we've donned our new chapeau, we feel pretty positive that, yes sir, spring is here and we might as well celebrate by making a few other purchases.

Before the fever wears off, be sure and see the new perfumed refillable lipsticks. After all, with spring housecleaning just around the corner, a spring ensemble on our back, a straw hat on our head and a new bag in our hand, we might as well have new rouge on our lips.

These mark an epoch in the history of rouges anyway. For a long time now we've been paying one price for one lipstick. But these newcomers appear on the scene and we pay one price for two lipsticks. The neat little case is already filled with a perfumed rouge that doesn't come off with the first cocktail. And alongside that comes a rouge stick, ready to be inserted when the first contents are down and out.

For lipstick and filler we're called upon to pay the princely sum of—$1. A real Easter greeting from a well-known cosmetic manufacturer.

Birds and Bunnies.

To make Easter shopping more complete for the kiddies a downtown store is showing a little paper Easter basket crammed full of birds, bunnies and chick-a-bunnies.

These toys are crowded into a paper nest, just waiting to be scattered all over the parlor floor. And if Junior is the man we think he is—it won't be long now.

Autumn in Spring.

Whether it was a mistake, an artistic endeavor, or merely a sense of humor which motivated the designer of some new chiffon handkerchiefs is a matter of some debate.

For there they are, a riot of vivid autumn shades, a fantastic pattern of autumn leaves, holding honor place in the midst of new spring handkerchiefs. Doubting Thomas asked the clerk if they weren't fall merchandise still hanging on. But no—there are writeups in several fashion magazines to prove that the fall idea is a new quirk in this season's fashions.

So whether we wear spring violets on our hats, or forget-me-nots in our hair, we're going to carry autumnal handkerchiefs in our hands—and like it. Which isn't hard to do, considering the magnificent color blends of deep purples with blues, golds and crimsons.

Perfume Tree.

Like a tree in full bloom a steel rack is a mass of flower-trimmed perfume bottles containing the true orange blossom essence. Down in Miami there's a company that specializes in extracting the fragrance from the blossoms, blending it into perfume. It comes in small pocket-sized bottles, attractively trimmed with wrought glass orange blooms.

The perfume has only been here a short while, but its popularity shows many shoppers approve it as an Easter remembrance.

Silver Ice.

Round silver balls with water hermetically sealed inside are the modern equivalent to plain ice cubes. They can be used in any home which has a refrigerator with a freezing chamber. They should be placed there and left as long as it takes an ordinary ice cube to freeze.

Beverages look more attractive with these silver spheres floating like huge silver bubbles inside of them. Unlike ice, which melts and destroys the perfect proportions of a drink, these simply chill, and change the quality of the drink not at all.

In these days when wine cellars exist principally in novels, it's nice to be able to put a cooling touch on wine in a few short minutes with this silver ice.

Soapless and Fragrant.

Here is an individual shampoo which meets a particular need. An eight-ounce bottle contains a fluid fragrant with pine needles. It should be rubbed into the scalp and through the hair to take away successfully all the city dust and grime.

It's a soapless shampoo, latherless, but it penetrates into the scalp, stimulates and cleanses. It also removes that dry and peeling cuticle, often mistaken for dandruff.

Variety of Delicious Veal Preparations Helps Housewives Avoid Dull Menus

Something Tart and Spicy Should Be Served With Them.

Veal loaf, so skillfully made you'd almost think you were eating chicken—that's the way veal appeals to screen star Marlene Dietrich. Irene Dunne likes a veal roast, so tender it can hardly stand to be sliced. Author and Musicman John Erskine prefers veal birds—small, thin slices of veal rolled 'round a savory stuffing, then browned and sauced to perfection. For Walter Winchell, it's a blessed event to be handed a good wiener schnitzel.

And so it goes—with so many more delicious veal dishes there's no such thing as monotonous menus, once you learn how to cook them at all. The more so, because veal always suggests certain accompaniments, so that your menus just about plan themselves. Always something tart, for example—pickled beets and onion, or Harvard beets; lemon preserve; sliced tomato or tomato aspic; cabbage salad, hot potato salad and so on.

As for the actual cooking of veal to make it A-1 tasty, here are points to remember: First, never cook it fast. Cook it long and slowly, so as to have it thoroughly done without being dried out. Veal should never be rare, like beef. Second, use plenty of fat with it (butter, bacon, pork or cream), as veal in itself is exceptionally lean. Third, use plenty of seasoning to pep up the flavor. That is: Pepper, paprika, cayenne pepper, onion or garlic, tomato, lemon, vinegar or wine, and so on. Here are recipes to show what I mean:

Veal Loaf.

Veal loaf (which is as delicious sliced cold for a Sunday supper or a picnic lunch as it is served hot for dinner) starts with 2 pounds of raw veal, chopped or ground. Mix this with 2 teaspoons salt, ½ teaspoon pepper, 2-3 cup chopped raisins, 1¾ cups fine, soft bread crumbs (first mixed with ¾ cup boiling water or meat stock), 4 tablespoons melted butter, 2 tablespoons lemon juice and 2 eggs (slightly beaten).

Shape this mixture into a roll about 8 inches long and 3 or 4 inches deep and wide. Place it in a shallow oven pan or dish, place 3 or 4 thin strips of suet (or 4 slices of bacon) over it, and pour 1 cup water or stock into the pan. Roast at 400 F. for 10 minutes. Then reduce heat to 350 F. and roast 40 or 50 minutes longer.

Then remove the loaf to a hot platter. Add enough water to drippings in pan to make 1 cup. Thicken with 1½ tablespoons flour mixed smooth in 1½ tablespoons cold water. Serve with mashed potatoes and Harvard beets.

Roast, Stuffed Veal.

For a good stuffed roast of veal, buy 5 to 6 pounds from the upper part of leg (cushion). Have the meat man take out the bone. Then rub the meat with 1 teaspoon salt mixed with ⅛ teaspoon pepper, and stuff the hole with this mixture; 2½ cups soft bread crumbs; 1-3 cup hot water; ½ cup melted butter; 2-3 cup chopped, seeded raisins; ¾ teaspoon salt; ⅛ teaspoon pepper; ¾ teaspoon poultry seasoning; 1 tablespoon chopped parsley; 1 teaspoon grated onion.

Next, sew the meat up, to hold the stuffing in. Then put it in a roasting pan, and put over it 3 thin strips of fat salt pork (or 3 strips of bacon). Roast at 375 F. for about 15 minutes. Then reduce heat to 350 F. and roast till done, allowing about 30 minutes to the pound. Baste every 15 minutes with a mixture of ¼ cup butter and ½ cup water. When roast is done, remove to hot platter and add enough water to drippings in pan to make about 2 cups. Thicken with 3 tablespoons flour mixed with 3 tablespoons cold water. This will taste fine with mashed potato, buttered cauliflower and lemon preserves.

Veal Birds.

Maybe you've held out this far, but if veal birds don't make your mouth water, I'll give up! For these you'll need about 1½ pounds veal cutlet, sliced about ⅛ inch thick. Then have these slices cut into strips about 4 inches long and 2 inches wide. Have the trimmings that are left over chopped or ground. Then do this: Mix the chopped veal with ½ cup chopped, raw bacon; ¾ cup fine, stale bread crumbs, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon onion juice; 1 teaspoon worcestershire sauce 2 tablespoons minced parsley and 1 egg (slightly beaten).

Next, spread this mixture about ⅛ inch thick on the strips of veal, and roll each one up like a jelly roll. Fasten them with string or toothpicks. Then sprinkle them with salt and pepper, roll in ¼ cup flour, and brown them in 3 tablespoons of drippings or fat. Next, pour in 1 cup thin cream or thin white sauce (1 tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 cup milk), cover pan tightly and cook gently 20 to 30 minutes. Remove string or toothpicks and serve very hot (2 birds to each person).

Eggs in Rolls Are New Kind Of Lenten Dish

Another Boon in Meatless Season Is Scalloped Egg and Shrimp.

Food advertisements announce to the world that eggs are cheap. The hens are generous with the supply, and the poultry dealers are more than reasonable with the price.

Aside from the fact that eggs are useful because they are cheap and nourishing, they are a boon to the housewife when her ideas about meat substitutes are nearly exhausted. Eggs make an excellent Lenten dish, but since omelettes and other common egg dishes are by this time uninspiring a few variations on the usual preparations might be welcomed.

Ever try eggs in rolls? Take your small French rolls and scrape out the inside, leaving the crusts. Fill with hard-boiled eggs mixed with a white sauce, and heat in the oven. This dish is nice for a supper, or light luncheon.

Scalloped Eggs and Shrimp.

1 cup milk
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons butter
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup or 1 small can shrimp
4 eggs, hard cooked
½ cup bread crumbs

Make white sauce of milk, flour, butter and salt. In buttered casserole alternate thin layers of white sauce, shrimp, sliced eggs and crumbs. Top lightly with crumbs and dot with butter. Brown in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) Garnish the top with slices of egg and a few whole shrimp.

Cookie-Making Art Returns to Favor

Rye and Oatmeal Cookies Are Toothsome.

The repeal of prohibition has focused attention of housewives on the old art of cookie-making. Cookies make delightful adjuncts to drinks served at the cocktail hour.

Following are some modern cookie recipes:

Rye Cookies or Ragkakor.

Use half a cup of butter, half a cup of granulated sugar, 1¼ full cups of white flour, 1¼ scant cups of rye flour, one generous teaspoonful of baking powder, half a cup of chopped walnuts, or half cup of fresh, chopped peanuts, or half a cup of chopped raisins. Wash the butter, crumble well in cold water, and then pour off the water in order to remove some of the salt. Sift baking powder and flours together; mix in the sugar; place on board and work the butter in with the fingers like a dough, adding nuts or raisins. Place in refrigerator until ready to use. Place dough on board, roll out thin, and cut with round cookie or dougtnut cutter. Place on greased cookie sheets and bake for about 15 minutes in oven 400 degrees.

Oat Meal Cookies or Lojnantens Havrebrod.

Use one full cup of dry oatmeal, three-quarters cup of butter, one-half cup of brown sugar, ten bitter almonds chopped with skins on, 1½ teaspoonfuls of baking powder and 2½ teaspoonfuls of cream. Cream butter and oatmeal together. Mix almonds, baking powder and sugar together; add to butter and oatmeal anl mix well. Then add the cream. Form into small balls and place on buttered cookie sheets not too close together. Bake for about 5 minutes, or until light brown, in oven at 400 degrees.

The Dragon Murder Case —By S. S. Van Dine.

The Story Thus Far.

Philo Vance and District Attorney Markham, with Sergeant Heath, are investigating the strange disappearance of Sanford Montague in the old Dragon Pool on the Stamm estate. According to Leland, one of Stamm's guests, each member of the house party had a motive for murdering Montague, with the exception of Bernice Stamm, to whom he was engaged. Stamm himself was helplessly intoxicated at the time of the tragedy.

Vance let the matter drop, and said:

"Doctor Holiday has just told us that Mr. Stamm had a close call tonight, and I understand from Mr. Leland that Mr. Stamm ordered another bottle of whisky at the time the other members of the party went down to the pool."

"Yes, sir, I brought him a fresh quart of his favorite Scotch whisky—Buchanan's Liqueur * * * although I will say, sir, in extenuation, so to speak, that I took the liberty of protesting with Mr. Stamm, inasmuch as he had already became almost abusive, I might say; and I remarked to myself, 'Every man to his own poison'—or words to that effect. It was not my place, you can understand, to refuse to obey the master's orders."

"Of couse—of course, Trainor. We certainly do not hold you responsible for Mr. Stamm's condition," Vance assured him pleasantly.

* * * *

Teeny McAdam's age was perhaps 40, but from her clothes and her manner it was obvious that she was making a desperate effort to give the impression of youth. There was, however, a hardness about her which she could not disguise. She seemed perfectly calm as she sat down in the chair which Vance held for her.

Vance explained briefly who we were and why we were there, and I was interested in the fact that she showed no surprise.

* * * *

"It's always well," Vance explained further, "to look into tragedies of this kind, where there is a feeling of doubt in the mind of anyone present. And there seems to be considerable doubt in the minds of several witnesses of Mr. Montague's disappearance."

For answer the woman merely gave an arctic smile and waited.

"Are there any doubts in your mind, Mrs. McAdam?" Vance asked quietly.

"Doubts? What kind of doubts? Really, I don't know what you mean." She spoke in a cold, stereotyped voice. "Monty is unquestionably dead. Had it been any one else who disappeared, one might suspect that a practical joke had been played on us. But Monty was never a practical joker. In fact, any sense of humor was painfully lacking in him. He was too conceited for humor."

"You screamed, I am told, when he failed to rise to the surface."

"A maidenly impulse," she remarked lightly. "At my age I should, of course, be more reserved."

The woman shrugged, and a hard light came into her eyes.

"No, not expecting it," she returned bitterly, "but always hoping for it—as were many others."

"Most interestin'," Vance murmured. "But what were you looking for so intently across the pool, after Montague's failure to come up?"

Her eyes narrowed and her expression belied the careless gesture she made.

"I really do not recall my intentness at that time," she answered. "I was probably scanning the surface of pool. That was natural, was it not?"

"Quite—oh, quite. One does instinctively scan the water when a diver has failed to reappear—doesn't one? But I was given the impression your attitude was not indicative of this natural impulse. In fact, I was lead to believe that you were looking across the water to the rock cliffs opposite."

Mrs. McAdam Is Startled.

"I quite understand," she sneered. "This half-breed has been trying to divert suspicion from himself." She swung quickly back to Vance and spoke between clenched teeth. "My suggestion to you, sir, is that Mr. Leland can tell you far more of the tragedy than any one else here."

Vance nodded carelessly.

"He has already told me many fascinatin' things." Then he leaned forward with a half smile that did not extend to his eyes. "By the by," he added, "it may interest you to know that a few minutes ago there was a terrific splash in the pool, near the point, I should say, where you were looking."

A sudden change came over Teeny McAdam. Her body seemed to go taut and her hands tightened over the arms of her chair. Her face paled perceptibly and she took a slow, deep breath as if to steady herself.

"You are sure?" she muttered in a strained voice, her eyes fixed on Vance. "You are sure?"

"Quite sure. * * * But why should that fact startle you?"

"There are stange stories about that pool——" she began but Vance interrupted.

"Oh, very strange. But you're not, I trust, superstitious?"

"Oh, no; I am far too old for that." She was speaking again in her former cold, reserved tone. "But for a moment I got jumpy. This house and its surroundings are not conducive to calm nerves. * * * So there was a splash in the pool? I can't imagine what it might have been. Maybe it was one of Stamm's flying-fish," she suggested, with an attempt at humor. Then her face hardened and she gave Vance a defiant look. "Is there anything else you wish to ask me?"

It was obvious that she had no intention of telling us anything concerning what she may have feared or suspected, and Vance rose listlessly to his feet.

Woman Sighs With Relief.

"No, madam," he responded. "I have quite exhausted my possibilities as an interrogator. * * * But I shall have to ask you to remain in your room for the present."

Teeny McAdam rose also, with an exaggerated sigh of relief.

The master bedroom was on the second floor, just at the head of the main stairs, and when we entered, ushered in by Dr. Holliday, Stamm stared at us with resentful bewilderment.

I could see, even as he lay in bed, that he was an unusually tall man. His face was lined and cadaverous. His piercing eyes were ringed with shadows and his cheeks were hollow. He was slightly bald but his eyebrows were heavy and almost black. Despite his pallor and his obviously weakened condition, it was evident he was a man of great endurance and physical vitality. He was the type of man that fitted conventionally into the stories of his romantic exploits in the South Seas.

"These are the gentlemen that wished to see you," the doctor told him, by way of introduction.

Stamm looked from one to the other of us, turning his head weakly.

"Well, who are they, and what do they want?" His voice was low and peevish.

Vance explained who we were, and added:

"There has been a tragedy here on your estate tonight, Mr. Stamm, and we are here to investigate it."

"A tragedy? What do you mean by a tragedy?" Stamm's sharp eyes did not leave Vance's face.

"One of your guests has, I fear, been drowned."

Stamm suddenly became animated. His hands moved nervously over the silk spread, and he raised his head from the pillow, his eyes glaring.

"Some one drowned!" he exclaimed. "Where? and who? * * * I hope it was Greeff—he's been pestering the life out of me for weeks."

Vance shook his head.

"No, it was not Greeff—it was young Montague. He dived into the pool and didn't come up."

"Oh, Montague." Stamm sank back on his pillow. "That vain ass! * * * How is Bernice?"

"She's sleeping," the doctor informed him consolingly. "She was naturally upset, but she will be all right in the morning."

Vance regarded the man on the bed critically and, I thought, suspiciously.

"We understand that one of the guests you invited to your week-end party did not put in an appearance."

"Well, what of it?" complained Stamm. "Is there anything so unusual about that?"

"No, not unusual," Vance admitted, "but a bit interestin'. What was the lady's name?"

Stamm hesitated and shifted his eyes.

"Ellen Bruett," he said finally.

"Could you tell us something about her?"

A Sudden Interruption.

"Very little," the man answered ungraciously. "I haven't seen her for a great many years. I met her on a boat going to Europe, and I ran across her again in Paris. I know nothing of her personally, except that she's a pleasant sort and extremely attractive. Last week I was surprised to receive a telephone call from her. She said she had just returned from the Orient and intimated that she would like to renew our acquaintance. I needed another woman for the party; so I asked her to join us. Friday morning she phoned me again to say she was leaving unexpectedly for South America. * * * That's the extent of what I know about her."

"Did you," asked Vance, "by any chance, mention to her the names of the other guests you had invited?"

"I told her that Ruby Steele and Montague were coming. They had both been on the stage, and I thought she might know the names."

"And did she?" Vance raised his cigarette deliberately to his lips.

"As I recall, she said she had met Montague once in Berlin."

Vance walked to the window and back.

"Curious coincidence," he murmured.

Stamm's eyes followed him.

"What's curious about it?" he demanded sourly.

Vance shrugged and halted at the foot of the bed.

"I haven't the groggiest notion—have you?"

Stamm raised himself from the pillow and glared.

"What do you mean by that question?"

"I mean simply this, Mr. Stamm"—Vance's tone was mild—"every one we have talked to so far seems to have a peculiar arriere-pensee with regard to Montague's death, and there have been intimations of foul play——"

Inquires About Body.

"What about Montague's body?" Stamm broke in. "Haven't you found it yet? That ought to tell the story. He probably bashed his skull while doing a fancy dive to impress the ladies."

"No, his body has not yet been found. It was too late to get a boat and grappling hooks to the pool tonight * * *"

"You don't have to do that," Stamm informed him truculently. "There are two big gates in the stream just above the filter, and they can be closed. And there's a turnstile lock in the dam. That lets the water drain from the pool. I drain it every year or so, to clean it out."

"Ah! That's worth knowing—eh, Sergeant?" Then to Stamm: "Are the gates and lock difficult to manipulate?"

"Four or five men can do the job in an hour."

"We'll attend to all that in the morning, then." Vance looked at the other thoughtfully. "And, by the by, one of Sergeant Heath's men just reported that there was quite a noisy splash in the pool a little while ago—somewhere near the opposite side."

"A part of that damned rock has fallen," Stamm remarked. "It's been loose for a long time." Then he moved uneasily, and asked: "What difference does it make?"

"Mrs. McAdam seemed rather upset about it."

"Hysteria," snorted Stamm. "Leland has probably been telling her about the pool. * * * But what are you driving at, anyway?"

Vance smiled faintly.

"I'm sure I don't know. But the fact that a man disappeared in the Dragon Pool tonight seems to have impressed several people in a most peculiar fashion. None of them seem wholly convinced that it was an accidental death."

"Tommy-rot!"

Stamm drew himself up until he rested on his elbows, and thrust his head forward. A wild light came into his glaring eyes, and his face twitched spasmodically.

"Can't a man get drowned without having a lot of policemen all over the place?" His voice was loud and shrill. "Montague—bah! The world's better off without him. I wouldn't give him tank space with my guppies—and I feed them to the Scalares."

"Montague jumped into the pool, did he?

"And he didn't come up? Is that any reason to annoy me when I'm ill? * * *"

At this moment there came a startling and blood-chilling interruption. The door into the hall had been left open, and there suddenly came to us, from the floor above, a woman's maniacal and terrifying scream.

Easter Gloves Are Vacillating— To Be or Not to Be Trimmed

Plain Ones With Dressy Costumes; Vice Versa Also Correct.

By Amos Parrish.

New York, March 19.—Easter gloves are having almost as hot an argument as you could hear between two political factions. One side says "Plain is the thing," while the other insists just as loudly "No, trimmed is the thing." To our way of thinking they are both right and both can live harmoniously in the same glove box.

But a slick tailored suit . . . neatly double-breasted in mannish oxford gray . . . that's plainest of the plain and with it can go gloves with some simple decoration to keep the spirit of the costume.

Plain Always Correct.

Of course, every well-regulated wardrobe will have at least one pair of plain unadorned gloves. Kidskin makes them most formal, capeskin makes them more tailored, and fabric makes them part way between.

By "unadorned" we mean either exactly that . . . a perfectly plain glove . . . or one with just a tiny trick in its cut, such as the edge of the top glove in the sketch.

There's a longer length of this plain glove, the mousquetaire with one button fastening at the wrist, which you'll also want for wear with ¾ length dress sleeves.

Sports Gloves.

But never is the glove in a fabric which looks hand-knit or crocheted

As for color, there are two sides to that question, too. One is, match gloves to the costume, as navy gloves with a navy coat. The other is, contrast the glove and the costume, but match it to some other accessory

(Copyright, 1934.)

Gloves of the types described are available in Washington in all the better shops and department stores.

Being blessed with an unusual amount of intelligence, people born on this date are usually conversant with all the current news and the latest books. If they too readily express their opinions or display an overeagerness to discuss the topics of the day or the most recent literature, unfriendly illiterate critics may claim conceit prompts this display of knowledge. Sometimes it may prove advisable for you not to express too freely an opinion, unless requested.

The child born on March 20, as it grows up, will display a very alert mentality, and a remarkable fund of general information as well as an inordinate desire to impress on others how much it knows. This child should be taught that modesty of mental accomplishment is a virtue, and that a blatant display is an annoyance. Children should never be allowed to monopolize a conversation. Many parents would be more popular if they likewise did not overextol their offsprings' virtues, and make that the sole theme of their conversation. The average person is only interested in his own child.

The woman born on March 20 is, as a rule, very advanced in her thinking, as well as energetic in her actions. Extremely competent and with an unlimited capacity for work, her individual efforts stand out, whether they are employed in social or business affairs. Women born on this date usually select as their mates men who are mentally their equals, and consequently find their married lives most congenial. They will find it advantageous to exercise moderation when offering criticisms. It will also prove wise not to indulge in sarcasm. A stinging remark can inflict an unhealable wound.

The man born on March 20 usually has a remarkable mathematical mind, and is a wizard where statistics are concerned. Some of our most successful financiers and stock and bond men were born on this date. Banking and securities are two lines of business which should prove attractive to men whose natal day this is.

People born on March 20 are, generally, very broad-minded, tolerant and generous. Where any dubious question arises, involving a person's integrity, they usually believe in giving the benefit of any doubt that might exist as to the individual's innocence, which is not only a kind deed, but just.

Successful people born on March 20:

Charles William Eliot, educator.

Mrs. Bellamy Storer, originator of Rookwood pottery.

Everett P. Wheeler, lawyer.

John G. Walker, naval officer.

Viscount Forbes Sees Boat Races in Florida

Viscount Forbes, son of the Earl and Countess of Granard, who arrived in New York last week aboard the Majestic, with his mother and his sister, Lady Moira Forbes, went immediately to Palm Beach, Fla., where he is the guest of his aunt, Mrs. Henry Carnegie Phipps, at her villa, Heamaw. Viscount Forbes is a student at Cambridge and a former captain of the British outboard motor boat racing team. He arrived in Palm Beach in time for the finals of the International Gold Cup races, which were held Sunday on Lake Worth.

The Countess of Granard, sister of the former Secretary of State, Mr. Ogden L. Mills, and her daughter, Lady Moira Forbes, will arrive in Palm Beach on Thursday.

Social Worker In Brazil Tells Of Clinic Work

Mrs. Byington Laughs at Romantic Notions of Country.

When the average American woman thinks of Brazilian senoritas, she thinks in terms of tangoes, mantillas and caballeros.

But Mrs. Alfred Byington, citizen of Sao Paulo, in the province of Sao Paulo, Brazil, throws a new light on old ideas. As director general of Cruzada pro' Infancia, or child clinic, there, she laughed at the romantic notion, and told a tale of social welfare work that tore all tinsel from the glamorous picture.

At the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, Seventeenth and F streets northwest, she took a few minutes from her research work yesterday to describe the activities of South American women in caring for underfed children and prospective mothers.

Clinic Established.

She told of a small group of women — she among them — who organized a child welfare association three years ago and established a children's clinic with private contributions.

"From the very beginning," said Mrs. Byington, "our work developed miraculously. At first we cared for only the undernourished children, but now we have branched out into many other fields.

"The women in Sao Paulo were quick to recognize what good could result from their efforts. In consequence a great number of them have been wonderfully cooperative.

"At the Cruzada pro Infancia over three thousand children have been cared for during the last three years, and over one thousand mothers."

Not Difficult Task.

Mrs. Byington said it had not been difficult to teach the people to come to the clinic.

"At first, Government nurses in the school discovered that it did no good in a lot of cases to teach the children what they should eat, for their parents could not afford the proper food. We would get their names and addresses and contact the parents. They would bring their families to the clinic, a doctor would examine them, and we would take over the cases.

"Every day over 130 quarts of milk, donated to the clinic, is given out to needy families. It is specially treated for children, and called for each morning by their mothers."

Another department is devoted to giving prenatal care to women.

Too Poor and Ignorant.

"A great many of them who come to us are simply too poor to be able to buy proper foods and have right care, or too ignorant to know how. We conduct classes in hygiene, give them medical attention, and provide layettes for babies.

"In some cases, it's the inducement of the layette which at first tempts these women to come to us. Once they find they're given kindly attention they no longer hesitate.

"We have quite a few cases of young unmarried mothers. Some of these have been put out of their homes, and have nowhere to go. We take them in and care for them until they are able to go out and look for work. Not one of these girls has ever gone away and left her baby. She is taught how to care for it and when the time comes to leave, when she has found outside employment, she always wants to take her baby with her."

Fresh Air School.

Besides the prenatal department there is in conjunction with the clinic, a fresh air school, Mrs. Byington said.

"We have 150 pupils, and four teachers. The children are given the proper nourishment, are kept out in the open, and made to take rest periods. In fact," she declared, "our whole scheme of things is patterned after the American plan.

"When we started out, it was all quite new to us. So we simply read and studied and found out how you did these things in this country, and we followed the same plans.

"Naturally there had to be some changes, some adaptations made. For instance, the people have for years and years gone on with the 'institution' idea. Now we are trying to teach them that their children can be well cared for in foster homes, as you have here.

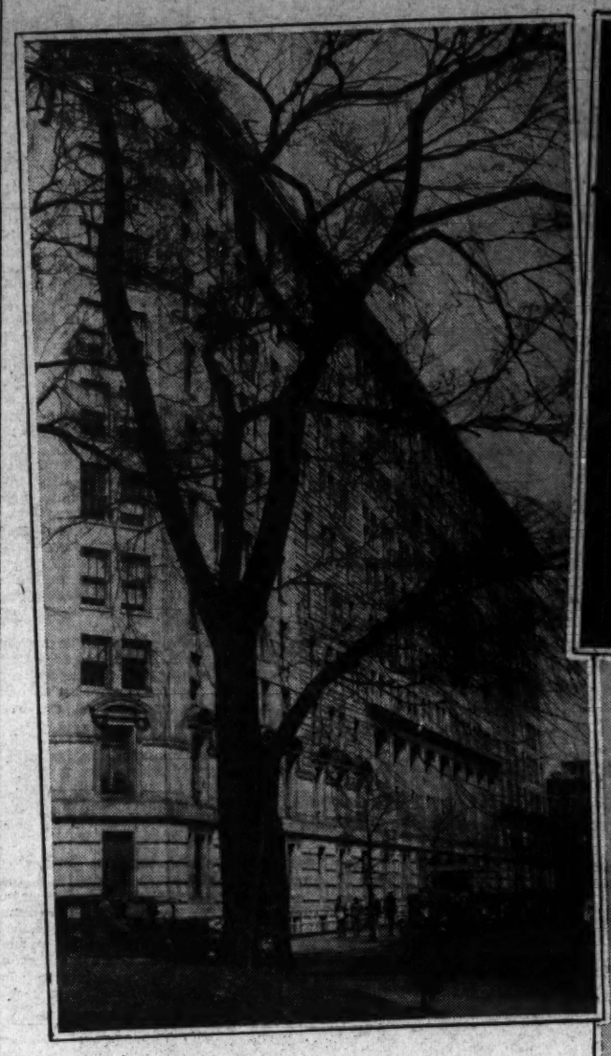
Children's City.

"There's an idea afoot there now to start a 'City of Abandoned Children.' Instead of one large institution or home, there would be a group of houses in which couples would live and care for the children. They would be taught to do as much for their support as possible. This doesn't come under our welfare work," she added. "but I think it's interesting."

Mrs. Byington took time from her social work a short while ago to indorse and support Dr. Carlota Pereira de Queiroz, the first woman to be elected to the Brazilian Congress.

"I'm really not in politics at all," Mrs. Byington explained. "It's just that we all felt that for the good of our social organizations there should be some woman who really knew the work to represent us.

"Dr. de Querioz has held posts at the Institute of Abnormal Children, in the Little Mothers' Clinic and other institutions, where she has picked up first-hand information of social conditions of the country. She herself has always been Johnny on the spot' to cooperate with worthy welfare work, so naturally I felt she should be elected, and worked toward that end. But honestly," Mrs. Byington was deeply in earnest, "I'm not politically inclined."



American Liberty Is at Stake, According to Rep. Wadsworth

Speaking Before G. O. P. Women, He Announces a Choice Must Be Made Between Soviet and U. S. Forms of Government.

Americans are facing the choice between their traditional form of government and that of the Soviet, Representative James W. Wadsworth declared yesterday at the annual luncheon of the League of Republican Women at the Mayflower.

"If present emergency measures are allowed to become permanent," said Representative Wadsworth, "liberty, as we know it, will be gone. We will have an imperial government, centering in Washington. The States will be simply provinces with all the people regimented on a national plan. And in the future, unless something is done, we can expect nothing but a series of four-year plans."

Representative Wadsworth's statements were received with ringing applause by the 600 women who attended the luncheon. His speech was followed with tense interest, as he is generally regarded as a probable candidate for Republican Presidential nomination in 1936.

The speaker pointed out that although emergency measures have started with appeals for voluntary cooperation, they have eventually developed into machines in which the citizen is subjected to compulsion. "The Government will eventually dictate how a man shall earn a living," he said, "unless the Republican Party rises to the defense of the Constitution, so that the citizen will be master of the Government and not its servant."

The concerted efforts of all people to overcome depression have given rise to many measures, "all important, many novel, and some revolutionary," according to Mr. Wadsworth. "A party's right to live depends on its willingness and ability to serve the people," he stated, "and a party has failed only when it has evaded issues."

With this as a preface to his appeal, Representative Wadsworth called on the Republican party to arise to the defense of the Constitution, which stands for the American form of government, the oldest in the world.

"Since liberty is more precious than material advantage," he said, in closing, "it is now for us to choose whether we will have the American kind of government, or the Soviet."

Representative Wadsworth was introduced by Mrs. George Thorpe, who presented him as "our defender in times past and our champion in the future."

In addition to the 600 guests who attended the luncheon there were a number of Republican State club presidents, including Mrs. George Horace Lorimer, of Pennsylvania; Mrs. Sibyl H. Holmes and Miss Lodvinie LeMoyen, of Massachusetts, and Mrs. Lula E. Powell, of Maryland.

Star-Spangled Banner Is Called Militaristic

Philadelphia, March 19 (U.P.).—The Star-Spangled Banner is driving American youth to war, according to Dr. David Muzzey, Columbia University history professor.

"It is a hymn of destruction," Dr. Muzzey said in an address here. "When our young people sing about 'bombs bursting in air' they are being prepared for another slaughter. Our peaceful country needs a peaceful National anthem like 'America the Beautiful.'"

Perhaps because Miss Betty Ryan was born and grew up in Gloucester, Mass., the quaint charm of the fishing village—reflected in the Gordon Grant painting reproduced above—seemed pale to her, compared to the high adventure of accepting a Government job with the Veterans' Administration (upper left), where she is now administrative assistant. She began as a typist.

Attorney Sees Improvement In Chicago Woman's Courts

Miss Pearl Hart, Voluntary Defender for Two Years, Says Justice Unknown in Old Morals Courts; Cites Unfair Trials.

When Chicago's great World Fair becomes a paragraph in American history, the Woman's Court which resulted from the clean-up campaign preceding the fair will endure. For this court set the precedent for giving justice and understanding aid to women delinquents.

The Woman's Court succeeded the old-time Morals Court, into which women were brought in at the rate of from 600 to 1,000 monthly. They were sent to prisons, later released, only to be arrested again.

Miss Pearl Hart, prominent Chicago attorney, voluntary public defender in this court for more than two years, yesterday told of some of the things accomplished by the establishment of the court, and outlined the plans for the future. Miss Hart is at the Dodge Hotel for several days.

"Justice was almost unknown in the old Morals Courts," Miss Hart said. "The women who were brought in almost never had the money to employ lawyers. They were found guilty as a matter of course, and sentenced without a fair trial. The terrible thing was that once a woman had been arrested police always took her in custody when they saw her again, whether or not she merited arrest.

"Even today, an average of 50 women a day are brought in by officers. Seventy per cent of these are acquitted, however, whereas formerly almost all of them were found guilty. We have established a social service department in this court; the workers interview the women before they are tried and attempt to discover the underlying cause of their delinquency. Employment is found when possible, and medical treatment given if necessary. The majority of the women placed in jobs stick to them; remarkable, as they are not very good jobs. They can't be, because the women are untrained. They are very responsive and grateful for help. And they all say that it is the first time in their lives that anyone has ever offered to help them without wanting some kind of pay for it."

Miss Hart was bitter in her indictment of some plainclothes policemen, who trap women by pretending to be friendly and then arrest them.

"In the woman's court of the future there will be no plainclothes policemen," she said. "The judge will be a socially minded man, who also knows the law; there will be a permanent public defender for the women who can't afford to hire lawyers.

"But most important of all, laws stating all women who approach men on the street are subject to arrest must be changed. More unjust laws were never made. What about the men who try to pick up girls on the streets? Why, a girl can not walk two blocks in many cities without some man making advances to her. Isn't it just as logical that these men should be subject to arrest?"

Miss Hart declared the only real solution for the problem is in the social education of children and greater social-mindedness on the part of women.

"So long as women think they are too dainty and sweet to get mixed up in the mire of politics, laws will discriminate against women," she said. "Politics is not a game nor a profit-making business. It is the civic and social duty of every intelligent woman to work for the social betterment of all people."

Borglum Will Speak To Women Tonight

Gutzon Borglum, sculptor, who is fashioning the Mount Rushmore Memorial, will address the National Woman's party at 8:30 o'clock tonight at Alva Belmont House, 144 B street northeast.

"The Allied Arts and Giving Beauty Back to the American People" will be his topic. The program has been arranged by Miss Myrtle R. Patterson, chairman of the poets' council of the organization.

A special program of Hungarian music will be given, with A. Nimmerrichter, formerly of the Royal Academy of Music, Vienna, playing the violin.

Did You Ever See a Dream?

I seldom dream, but when I do
I'm glad that I can safely keep
The visions of unconsciousness

If I should see a dream that walked
And talked (as some song-writers say)
I'm very much afraid that I
Would run the other way.

Party Slippers Come to Letty in Cinderella-Like Fashion.

My chance to see how a pair of patent leather party slippers can change the wistfulness of a 15-year-old girl's brown eyes to positive glowing joy is something I'm impelled to speak about.

The party slippers are something most exciting to Letty. She is a ward of the city, only one of 1,800 girls and boys who are provided with food and clothing by the District. Her timid inquiry about party slippers came to the ears of some college girls with the result that Cinderella-like Letty was provided not only with the slippers but with a pretty, youthful frock as well.

• • • •

Suppose Letty's case were multiplied. Many other shining eyes, too, particularly with Easter so near, with its universal instinct to dress up. Outgrown frocks and hats, coats and shoes of daughters of fortunate families—and clothes for boys and babies, too—will brighten existence for "those who have not." The city's foster mothers will hear gladly about any possible donations to the wardrobes of their "family of 1,800"—so rummage about the house a bit and telephone National 6000, branch 490, if you find anything.

When slender, brunette Marjorie Phillips superintended the hanging of a special exhibit of her paintings in the Public Library she confided that her "Cherry Blossoms" is her husband's favorite of the whole exhibit. Scarcely any one need be told that her husband is Duncan Phillips, director of the Phillips Memorial Gallery and a noted connoisseur and critic of art.

The interest of public school children in special lectures on first aid ministrations was much greater than authorities had expected. But several children fainted during the demonstrations, requiring real, not imaginary, emergency work.

Turbulent Years Remembered In Veterans' Administration

Girl Who Came to Capital From Gloucester, Mass., to See What Excitement Was All About in 1917 Achieved High Government Trust.

Security and pleasant working hours—these two things have impelled thousands of women to seek positions with one of the largest and most important business concerns in the world—the United States Government. But sometimes it is a desire for thrills and excitement—an eagerness to be in the heart of things—that brings a woman to Washington.

This, the second in a series of articles describing Government positions held by women, tells of a job that has had a full quota of thrills.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

From typist to administrative assistant in 16 years at the Veterans' Administration is the record of Miss Betty Ryan.

Miss Ryan, who looks more like a coed than a woman with a responsible Government position, now sits quietly at a large, orderly desk and assists Col. George E. Ijams, in charge of veterans' hospitals throughout the United States.

Her work with the Government, however, has not always been so calm and peaceful.

Frenzied former soldiers have threatened jumping out of the window of her office on the tenth story, breaking up the furniture and similar violence when she refused to let them in to see Col. Ijams. Miss Ryan, in cool, level tones, asked them to leave the room. She did not dare let them in to see the colonel, fearing they would do him bodily harm. One man became so infuriated he broke his crutches into bits. Others paced up and down, wild-eyed, in front of Miss Ryan's desk.

Not once did the veterans menace her, but she admits that she felt a little uneasy when one tried to break the lock on the colonel's door with a carving knife; an ingenious lock that was operated by a push-button under Miss Ryan's desk.

There was the feverish time when she helped make the first payment of the bonus to former soldiers who had lined up for blocks outside the Veterans' Administration Building.

Most disturbing of all was the second invasion of the bonus army, with its leaders dashing in and out for seemingly endless conferences.

War Drama Lures Typist.

Miss Ryan has found these experiences exhilarating and interesting. She even regrets missing the excitement when the bonus army made its first march on Washington. She was then in Europe.

Betty Ryan had just finished high school in her home city, Gloucester, Mass., when the United States went to war. Immediately Washington became the center of wild activity. Betty Ryan wanted to be a part of it.

"Guess I had war fever," she explained yesterday at her office. "I simply had to come to Washington and see what was going on."

Her first job in the Capital was an appointment as typist in the War Risk Insurance Department. This department later grew into the Veterans' Bureau and still later became the Veterans Administration. When Miss Ryan entered the department there were about 1,000 employes. Now there are 33,000. The first quarters were in the new National Museum where exhibits had been pushed back to make room for desks and filing cabinets.

"I like to look back on those days," declared the typist who became an administrative assistant. "There was so much work to do that we didn't have time to think whether we were in a museum or a morgue."

Decentralization Phase.

After she had worked three years as a typist Miss Ryan was chosen by Col. Ijams to be his private secretary. Just as she was learning to feel at home in her new position, the colonel began what has been called the biggest decentralization program ever attempted by a Government agency. Miss Ryan stood by while her superior, who was then manager of the District offices, successfully decentralized all major operations of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, the Federal Board of Vocational Education and Public Health Service. This resulted in regional offices being established throughout the United States.

In spite of her arduous days, Miss Ryan attended George Washington University at night for three years. She also organized European tours which involved three trips abroad for herself. This last winter she found time to make a West Indies and South American cruise and to give lectures before girls' schools on the advantages of travel.

It was in 1930 that Col. Ijams made Miss Ryan an administrative assistant. In that capacity the young woman from Gloucester is in constant touch with the 79 government hospitals and agencies which take care of 43,000 former soldiers.

Read in tomorrow's Post of another woman who holds an interesting position with the Government.

P. W. A. Women Receive Ickes' Hearty Praise

They Handle Emergencies as Capably as Men, He Maintains.

Do women face serious emergency as calmly and capably as men? In the home, yes. In the broader field of Government? Also, yes. So believes Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes, who has given professional women a generous break in his emergency program appointments.

Women financiers, women lawyers, women engineers are working side by side with their masculine colleagues in an enthusiastic effort to put the tremendous Public Works program across.

Mr. Ickes says of them:

"Women have earned their place in emergency work. They have helped shoulder the burden of the Public Works Administration, and, in every field, have done a splendid job of it."

Beauty, as well as brains and initiative distinguishes the feminine wing of the Public Works legal division. Including those, with legal training, who act in secretarial capacities, perhaps one-fifteenth of the attorneys are women. Most of them are in their 20s, and all good looking.

Four of this number actually pass upon the intricate legal points involved in Public Works projects. They are, Miss Dorothee Scarbrough, University of Washington graduate, who was enlisted from the State attorney general's office, Olympia; Miss Louise McCarthy, a Washington, D. C., girl, who graduated with honors from the University of Pennsylvania Law School; Miss Mayte Boylan, New York, graduate of the Columbia Law School, and Miss Elizabeth Rountree, Southern Pines, N. C., a law review editor and also a graduate of Columbia.

Of these, Assistant General Counsel Edward Foley says:

"They can hold their own with the men attorneys in the division. Their vision, judgment and knowledge of the law fit them for some of the best positions we have to offer."

Girls' Design Contest Will End Tomorrow

Tomorrow is the last day for young designers to enter the Hecht Co.'s Coat Designing Contest.

The contest, run in conjunction with a National coat manufacturer, is open to all girls between the ages of 8 and 16, except those employed by the Hecht Co. Entrants should fill out enrollment blanks in the coat department of the Hecht Co., and be accompanied by their parents or other adult. The local girl submitting the best original sketch will be awarded a spring coat. The local prize winning sketch will then be forwarded to the New York headquarters of the style contest. The winner of the National contest will receive a week's trip to New York, accompanied by chaperon, with all expenses paid.

Aerial Dinosaur Hunt Planned in Northwest

New York, March 19 (U.P.).—The American Museum of Natural History today announced an aerial hunt will take place this June for dinosaurs that populated Montana, Wyoming and South Dakota 12,000 years ago.

The expedition, with headquarters at Cloverly Postoffice, 25 miles from Graybull, Wyo., will be led by Dr. Barnum Brown, curator of fossil reptiles. Two skeletons of prehistoric giants found in 1932 and partly uncovered also will be excavated.

Dr. Brown estimated the monsters' length, from head to tail, at 50 feet. He believes they lived 120,000,000 years ago.

Cannon Pleads For Dismissal Of Indictment

Final Two Counts Do Not Charge Offense, He Says; Ruling to Be Rushed.

With his trial scheduled for early in April, Bishop James Cannon and Miss Ada L. Burroughs, indicted 18 months ago for alleged violation of the corrupt practices act, yesterday filed in the District Supreme Court an attack on the indictment.

The hearing on their motion to dismiss the indictment will be held by Justice Peyton Gordon, who only two weeks ago denied a motion by Bishop Cannon to advance his trial for an early date.

Grounds advanced for dismissal of the indictment were claims that it was vague, indefinite, and uncertain. Justice Gordon probably will rule Friday, when it is scheduled to be argued, so there will be no delay in the trial.

Counsel Issues Statement.

Robert H. McNeal, counsel for Cannon, issued the following statement to the Associated Press:

Notwithstanding the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States which struck down the eight substantive counts in the indictment, we still adhere to our previous views that the remaining two conspiracy counts are bad. We also think they do not legally charge an offense.

"Having these views, and in order to fully protect all the rights of our clients, we felt we should present them to the court far enough in advance of the trial date, April 9, for them to be argued and disposed of.

"Should the court sustain either our demurrer or motion to quash, that will dispose of the case in the Supreme Court of the District. Should the court be of a contrary view, we would then have a record showing that the points we rely upon have been fairly presented to the trial court.

Garnett Favors Action.

"Counsel for the defendants have conferred with the United States Attorney, Mr. Garnett, and his assistant, Mr. John J. Wilson, and they have agreed to join us in having the demurrer and motion to quash presented to Mr. Justice Gordon and passed on by him within the next few days.

"Justice Gordon also has stated that he will hear the points to be argued promptly so that his decision may be made long before April 9, so as not to affect the date of trial should he not sustain the demurrer or grant the motion to quash."

Cannon asserted in his plea to the court that the April 9 trial date might prevent his attendance at the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, to be held in Jackson, Miss., the third week in April.

Liquor Law Writ Review Postponed

Prisoner Contends Court Ruling Voids Sentence.

Hearing on a writ of habeas corpus petition filed by Henry T. Johnson for release from District Jail for violation of the Volstead act, has been postponed until Friday.

Johnson, appearing in court yesterday as his own attorney, contended that legality of his sentence had been overruled by the United States Supreme Court in a recent decision.

Only two men are in the District Jail because of violations of the liquor laws. They are Johnson and Jack O'Hearne. Both cases are expected to be settled by Justice O'Donoghue in his ruling in the Johnson case.

Amateurs Asked to Join Community Orchestra

Amateur musicians are invited to join the recently organized community orchestra of the Central Community Center. The organization, with more than 40 members, is directed by Bailey F. Alart. It meets every Tuesday at 8 p. m. in the Central High School.

Mr. Alart announced that he needs more violins and another violoncello for the string choir. No fees or dues are required, as the orchestra will confine its activities to community programs, including appearances this summer at the National Sylvan Theater.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Blackie Feels Better

JAY BIRD always gets up as soon as it is day, and that morning when he got his face washed and his topknot combed up high on the middle of his head, the first thing he did was to fly over to Blackie's house to see how he was, for Dr. Coon, the night before, had said that Blackie was mighty sick. When he got to Blackie's house, the door was still shut, and there was no sign that Blackie was up, so Jay Bird hopped about on the ground and ate berries and acorns for his breakfast while he waited for Blackie to wake up.

Away along about 10 o'clock Jay Bird got scared that Blackie was dead or too sick to get up, so he flew up to the window and stuck his head in to see what was the matter with Blackie.

Dr. Coon was coming lickety-split.

And what do you think he saw? Instead of being dead, there sat Blackie in front of his looking glass with his comb and brush, and was parting his hair in the middle, and grinning at himself in the glass.

Blackie Slicks Up.

Blackie had already brushed his hairy coat all over and got off all the perspiration and dirt that he got on it yesterday when he worked so hard and when he rolled in the dirt to fool Dr. Coon; and now he looked mighty clean and slick.

Jay Bird certainly was surprised to see Blackie looking so well, and was just getting ready to holler at him when Blackie took down his hat and put it on his head, and opened the door and stepped out.

Jay Bird flew down from the window and said: "Good morning, Mr. Bear. I thought you were dead, and I have just been up to your window to see. You don't look very dead to me, with your face all washed, and your hair parted in the middle, and your hat on one side of your head, like you had started off for a frolic."

"It is a fact that I might be deader than I am, and I am sure I would be if it hadn't been for Dr. Coon. That tea he gave me made me sleep so hard I didn't much miss my bed that I gave to Billie Possum. You didn't make any mistake when you told me he is the best doctor in the world."

Dr. Coon in a Hurry.

And now here comes Dr. Coon, lickety-split, through the woods, just like something was after him, with his hat in his hand and no medicine chest.

"What in the world is the matter with you?" Blackie asked him.

"Matter enough," said Dr. Coon. "Just as I got about half way over here, I heard Rover Dog barking, and I looked and saw him swimming the creek just below me, so I hung my hat and medicine chest on a limb and lit out for your house as fast as I could run. He must have been after Jack Rabbit, for I heard him barking and running the other way, so I guess I can rest for a while now. But I haven't any medicine for you."

"You needn't worry about that," said Blackie. "You fixed me up so well last night that I don't need any medicine."

Ballou Defends School Heating By Custodians

Complaints of Cold Rooms Seldom Heard, Says Superintendent.

Defense of the custodian staff in Washington public schools was voiced yesterday by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent.

He said complaints of unpleasantly cold temperature in any of the 170 buildings of the system were seldom heard, and interpreted that as "good evidence that the custodians are doing their work."

Dr. Ballou reported licensed engineers were employed in schools where they were deemed necessary. He saw no necessity for placing licensed engineers in all schools as suggested by L. C. Wormington, head of District Repair Shop, after cold weather resulted in the closing of Force School for a day.

Defense of the janitors was in reply to a demand by Washington Local, No. 102, International Union of Operating Engineers, that employes maintaining schools be placed in a separate department independent of the Board of Education.

Wormington was congratulated by the union for his "fearless and truthful criticism."

Howard "U" Job Approved.

The design for a power and heating plant, to be erected at Howard University as a public works project, was approved yesterday by the Fine Arts Commission. Albert I. Cassell, architect, drew the plans.

Park Policeman Hurt Pursuing Light Violator

Police efforts to curb increasing traffic violations resulted yesterday in the injury of a park policeman, who was chasing an auto which had gone through a red light. Pvt. E. E. Saar suffered bruises when his motorcycle struck the curb at Sixteenth and Q streets northwest.

At Emergency Hospital his injuries were called not serious. The auto driver was not caught.

E. J. Kelly, Parks Officer, Tells Attention Given in Radio Talk.

How the famous cherry trees around the Tidal Basin and bordering Potomac Park have to be carefully nursed throughout the year by a staff of horticulturists was explained last night by Edward J. Kelly, administrative assistant to the superintendent of the National Capital Parks office, in a radio address over Station WMAL.

Washington's cherry blossoms are in bloom for an average of only ten days every spring. There are few days during the year when these famous Japanese trees are not under constant care.

Mr. Kelly said that the task of orientating the trees to their new surroundings was difficult when they were brought over from Japan. In their native land cherry trees grow in a semimountainous country and are rooted in light, well-drained soil. Conditions around the Tidal Basin, which is only a few feet above sea level, are exactly opposite.

The trees have to be fed throughout the year and well watered. They must be pruned constantly and sprayed for the many insect enemies and disease which are ever present to destroy them.

As a result of the care which has been given the trees, Mr. Kelly said the cherry blossoms here are equally as beautiful as those in Tokyo.

Mr. Kelly spoke on the Greater National Capital Committee time of the weekly Civic Hour program.

5 about Cigarettes

Practically untouched by human hands

WE'D like you to see Chesterfields made. We know you'd be impressed by the absolute cleanliness of our factories.

The tobaccos are the best that money can buy.

Expert chemists test for cleanliness and purity all materials used in any way in the manufacture of Chesterfield cigarettes.

The factories are modern throughout. Even the air is changed every 4½ minutes.

When you smoke a Chesterfield you can be sure that there isn't a purer cigarette made.

In a letter to us an eminent scientist says: "Chesterfields are just as pure as the water you drink."

Inspectors examine Chesterfields as they come from the cigarette making machines and throw out any imperfect cigarettes.

Senators Plan Study of D. C. Budget Rule

Federal Bureau Control to Be Scrutinized by Committee.

Reorganization Report Is Awaited; May Offer Solution.

Removal of the District budget from control of the Federal Budget Bureau will be studied by the Senate District Committee in connection with the municipal reorganization report now being prepared, Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, committee chairman, said yesterday.

The report is being drafted by a special committee composed of William A. Roberts, special assistant corporation counsel; Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, and Lewis Douglas, director of the Budget Bureau. Several preliminary volumes have been delivered to Senator King by the committee, but the major section, that containing the committee's recommendations, is being withheld until all other data has been presented the committee.

If the committee report does not deal with the control of the District estimates he will lay that subject before the District committee, Senator King said.

"The question deserves serious study," the Senator said. "If it is not incorporated in the reorganization committee's report I will have the matter brought up myself.

King Holds "Open Mind."

"I have an open mind on the question.

"There is a good deal to be said on behalf of the Budget Bureau control. President Wilson sought such a control of Government expenditures and President Harding sponsored formation of the bureau.

"If the Federal Government contributed nothing to the maintenance of the National Capital there would be no reason for the Budget Bureau passing on District estimates. There is enough to be said on the other side of the question, however, to merit a careful study by Congress."

Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, chairman of the Senate District Appropriations subcommittee, said he thought the question was primarily for the District committee rather than his subcommittee. He did not intend to open the question at hearings on the annual District appropriations bill, but he added that if the Commissioners wished to discuss it the committee would be glad to hear their views.

Capper Proposed Plan.

Divorce of the District estimates from the control of the Budget Bureau was proposed by Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas, former chairman and ranking minority member of the Senate District Committee, in a speech last Saturday night.

Senator Capper contended District fiscal affairs would be handled much better if the Commissioners were permitted to deal directly with Congress.

Approval of Senator Capper's proposal was voiced yesterday by Representative D. Lane Powers (Republican), of New Jersey, a member of the District appropriations sub-committee.

"It seems to me a sound suggestion that the Budget Bureau, which is entirely a Federal agency, be relieved of consideration of the District municipal budget," he said.

Says One Check Sufficient.

"Washingtonians have to go through too much red tape now to get approval of expenditures of their own money. Congressional consideration of the District budget should be a sufficient check on municipal expenditures without there being any need for an intervening agency."

Powers, who has already expressed opposition to any increase in District taxes this year, said it was particularly important that District officials be allowed to at least tell the Congressional committees in charge of their appropriations what they wished.

Powers pointed out that this year the Budget Bureau held up the request of the District Commissioners for money to complete the appropriation of the Anacostia Junior High School, although the project has been authorized by Congress and has been granted an initial appropriation.

"I agree with Senator Capper that school needs should be given every consideration, and this can be done better if the estimates are submitted by the Board of Education through the Commissioners to Congress," he said.

Postoffice Painting Presented to Farley

Treasury Acts For Depositors Of Park Bank

Moves for Permission to Put Loss Liability on Directors.

The Treasury Department yesterday moved in District Supreme Court to align itself with the depositors' committee of the closed Park Savings Bank to establish liability of former directors of the bank.

The Treasury, in abetting the depositors, asked the court to declare the directors liquidating trustees for all affairs conducted after the bank's charter expired in 1929, and to hold them responsible for a shortage of $2,500,000.

The order, which was presented to Justice Jesse C. Adkins, would give John F. Moran, receiver for the bank, wide powers in asking the directors to make good losses sustained through defalcations of Robert Stunz, former executive officer of the bank.

The receiver asked permission of Justice Adkins to join with the depositors' committee in waging a fight against the directors of the defunct bank. Action was postponed until Friday on motion of Joseph T. Sherier, of counsel for the directors.

Filing of the motion revealed an armistice between the committee and the Treasury. Up until this time, appointment of a receiver by the Treasury has been opposed by the committee, which has sought to have District Supreme Court take over the bank. The new set-up indicated the Treasury has joined hands with depositors.

Parents Warned In Measles Cases

Careless Treatment Peril Cited by Officers.

Health authorities yesterday warned parents against careless treatment of children suffering from measles. Four deaths and 176 new cases have been reported.

The deaths were caused by pneumonia, which resulted from the effects of measles. Health Officer William C. Fowler advised parents to keep ailing children in bed until they have thoroughly recovered.

The death toll since January 1 is 15. Total number of cases reported this year is 3,725.

Dozing Hacker Unhurt In Highway Smash

Clyde V. Hicks, 1400 Decatur street, fell asleep during the wee sma' hours while driving his taxicab down the Mount Vernon Memorial highway. The cab smashed into the guard rail, tore up two posts and was badly damaged, but Hicks was unhurt.

Beg Your Pardon.

Dr. John Haynes Holmes, New York clergyman, yesterday called attention to the fact that he had been quoted in The Post as having said in an address at the Jewish Community Center last Wednesday that he was favorable to Fascism.

"It is true that I said that Fascism might come in this country in the wake of economic and political disaster, but I deprecated this utterly and denounced as strongly as I knew how the whole tendency toward Fascism at this moment," Dr. Holmes said.

Breaks!

Snapped Ankles Delay Court Three Times.

An epidemic of broken ankles yesterday frustrated attempts of Assistant United States Attorney James Kirkland to bring to trial Policeman J. R. LeFoe and H. L. Wood on charges of taking a bribe.

First LeFoe broke his ankle. Then when his case was called the second time, he was suffering from a rebroken ankle. Yesterday the case was called again and it was found that Attorney Charles Ford, acting for Wood, had broken his ankle. The case was reset for March 27.

The charge is that the two officers took $10 from a man they had arrested on a traffic charge.

School Lunch Kitchen Starts Service Today

1,500 Children to Partake of Hot Noodle Soup at Noon.

Hot noodle soup will be the piece de resistance today on the menu of the new central public school kitchen for needy children.

Each of the 1,500 children will receive a bowl of soup, two slices of buttered bread, a glass of milk and an orange. The youngsters will be given an extra helping of soup on request.

Final tests preparatory to the first day's service by the kitchen were held yesterday at Wisconsin Manual School in Georgetown. A lecture on personal hygiene was given the staff of 40 workers by Dr. J. A. Murphy, of the District Health Department.

Mrs. Katharine McK. Ansley, kitchen director, explained the force would begin on a limited scale and gradually increase its output until reaching a peak of 6,724 lunches daily in about a week. She added menus would be changed from time to time, depending on what surplus food was received from the Federal Government.

Trucks driven by ten CWA workers will be used to deliver the food. Soup will be distributed in three and five gallon cans.

The cooking equipment, all new, will include 14 stoves. The kitchen will take over work performed in the past by Earl E. Harrington, restaurateur. Lunches will be served as usual during the school spring vacation.

Mrs. Ansley's chief assistants will be Harry M. Gardner, Miss Sue Frick and Miss Ethel Nugent.

Van Duzen Urges No Turn Continued

Traffic Experiment Held to Be Success.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer yesterday recommended the adoption of regulations continuing the ban on traffic turns at Thirteenth and F streets northwest. His recommendation was sent to the District Commissioners.

The two-month ban on turns at this corner, first termed an "experiment," has been approved by officials and its inclusion in traffic laws indorsed.

Although signs warn against making turns between 8 a. m. and 6 p. m., motorists continue to disregard orders, police said.

Hip Broken in Fall.

Mrs. Anna Rice, 75, of 1733 Twentieth street northwest, slipped in descending from a street car yesterday at Fourteenth and C streets southwest and suffered a fractured hip, police reported. She was taken to Emergency Hospital.

Ballou Blocks Liquor Store Nearby School

Congress Heights Location Ruled "Inappropriate;" Licenses Denied.

Application of John R. Quinn for a liquor license at 3128 Nichols avenue southeast was denied yesterday by the Alcohol Beverages Control Board because of protests of Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou and the Congress Heights Parent-Teacher Association.

Chairman George W. Offutt said the board considered Quinn's an "inappropriate" location for a liquor store because of its proximity to the Congress Heights School and, also, because it is within a half mile of St. Elizabeths Hospital, which has been ruled to be a dry area by the board.

The board also denied the applications of Abraham Benson, 1428 Kenilworth avenue northeast, and Clara Wiseman, 1304 Kenilworth avenue northeast, because of proximity to the Kenilworth School. Protests from Catholic University blocked the request of Pasquale DiRocco, 815 Monroe street northeast. Officials of the university objected the place is too near the institution.

Other applicants whose requests were denied are Eva Buckner, 401 O street northwest, because her establishment was not deemed a restaurant within the meaning of the law; Jacob Cohen, 701 Massachusetts avenue northeast, because owners of adjacent property petitioned for a denial.

Bride and La Roe Take Office Today

Oaths to Be Given New Parole Officials.

The oath of office will be taken today by William W. Bride, former corporation counsel, and Wilbur La Roe, prominent churchman, recently appointed to the Parole Board by the District Commissioners.

Ceremonies will be held in the office of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen. The oath will be administered by Daniel E. Garges. Bride will be named chairman, succeeding Isaac Gans, who is now a member of the Liquor Control Board.

La Roe will take the place of Dr. Loren B. T. Johnson, who resigned after expressing to the Commissioners the belief that the task "was useless and probably harmful," because of their failure to approve recommendations and to draft legislation expanding the work of the board.

2 Drivers in Hospital After Auto Accident

Drivers of a private auto and a truck are in Casualty Hospital, where their conditions are serious, following a collision yesterday at New Jersey avenue and M street southeast.

Linwood L. Sanford, 29, truck driver, of 2303 E street northeast, is suffering from lacerations and possible internal injuries and a fractured shoulder. The operator of the car, Harry D. Brown, 41, colored, of 142 M street southeast, was knocked unconscious and may have a fractured skull and internal injuries.

Magicians to Give Show And Supper on Friday

Led by W. W. Durbin, register of the Treasury, Ring 67 of the International Brotherhood of Magicians will give a magic show and supper in the Lee House Friday at 7:30 p. m. A business session will precede the entertainment.

Dr. Kenneth Sheelor will preside and Henry L. Clapham, secretary, will introduce out-of-town guests.

Laundry Sued for $10,000.

The Pioneer Laundry yesterday was named defendant in a damage suit for $10,000 because of alleged injuries to James Brown, 218 Bates street northwest, struck by one of the company's trucks January 24.

Grand Jury Again Indicts Col. Cooper

The District grand jury late yesterday voted an indictment against Col. Wade H. Cooper, president of the closed Commercial National Bank, on charges of misapplying approximately $100,000 of the bank's funds.

The indictment failed to name Bates Warren, general counsel of the bank, who was mentioned with Col. Cooper in an earlier indictment.

The indictment voted yesterday charges Col. Cooper misapplied funds of the bank, first for the purpose of purchasing stock in the Continental Trust Co., which was absorbed by the Commercial, and, second, in loans which were extended to the Continental after it had been taken in by the parent company.

Both Col. Cooper and Warren were indicted several weeks ago on charges of conspiring to misapply the funds of the bank and actually misapplying some $90,000. The indictment was dismissed last week by Justice Peyton Gordon after Attorneys William E. Leahy and Edmund Toland, for Warren, and William H. Collins, for Col. Cooper, had attacked the sufficiency of the indictment.

In the second investigation of the affairs of the bank, Col. Cooper and Warren were permitted to testify. Both told the grand jurors of the part they played in the handling of the bank's affairs, and the grand jury yesterday afternoon began its deliberations. The indictment against Col. Cooper was voted but it was held that nothing had been shown to warrant indictment of Warren.

La Roe Scores NumberRacket Brown to Help

Church Suokesman Says Policy Gamingg Draws Purses of Poor.

Attacking the "numbers racket" as "one of the most insidious forms of gambling," Wilbur La Roe, jr., chairman of the civic affairs committee, Federation of Churches, yesterday announced plans for an immediate campaign to stem further operations.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of Police, pledged his "fullest cooperation" in a drive to curb the reputed "racket."

"I have not been approached on the matter," Maj. Brown declared, "but I understand the federation has expressed strong feeling on the subject. The Police Department will cooperate."

"It is one of the most insidious forms of gambling. It takes money from the class least able to lose it—small-salaried class. It takes money from Government employes who already have had salary cuts they can hardly stand. School children are prey to this dirty business. gives them their first experience in gambling."

He charged that operators of the "racket" employed elevator boys, garage employes, store clerks and office building workers as their

Keech, Former Counsel, Now P.U.C. Member

Roosevelt Also Appoints William J. Thompkins Recorder of Deeds.

Richmond B. Keech, until recently people's counsel of the District Public Utilities Commission, yesterday was appointed a member of the commission itself by President Roosevelt.

In line with previous announcement, the President also sent to the Senate the name of William J. Thompkins, of Kansas City, Mo., to be recorder of deeds for the District.

Keech succeeds to the vacancy created last fall by the resignation of Maj. Gen. Mason Patrick. His term as people's counsel expired in February, another vacancy which the President is expected to fill shortly. Both offices pay $7,500 annually.

Thompkins, editor of a newspaper for Negroes, succeeds Jefferson Coage, who was appointed by President Hoover in 1930. This position pays $5,600.

Other nominations sent to the Senate yesterday were Bryan M. Battey, of New York, to be assistant commissioner of patents and Carol H. Foster, of Maryland, to be consul general in the Foreign Service.

D. C. Police Budget Hearing to Resume

House Sub-committee Calls Maj. Brown Today.

The House District Appropriation subcommittee today will hear Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, justify estimates of the Police Department in the 1935 District budget.

Shortly after starting consideration of the police items yesterday morning, the subcommittee adjourned because members desired to attend important House sessions.

The police estimates total $3,113,442, as compared to $2,879,000 in the 1934 act. Following the police hearing, the Fire and Health Department estimates will be taken up.

Sock-less $10

Witness, Peeved on Stand, Couldn't Take It.

Aldo Pieri was just a witness when he entered Police Court yesterday. But after threatening to "sock" an assistant district attorney, he remained to face contempt charges.

Pieri was testifying in an assault case. From the witness stand, he answered questions of Assistant United States Attorney David A. Hart. The questions grew personal. Pieri grew angry. He turned to Hart and shouted:

"If you keep this up, I'll slap you in the jaw!"

Hart appealed to Judge Isaac Hitt and demanded Pieri's immediate sentence for contempt. The case was interrupted and Judge Hitt ordered the witness to pay a $10 fine or serve 48 hours in jail.

Raises for 150 In Relief Unit Again Refused

Commissioners in Second Plea Urge Controller to Increase Pay.

Pay raises for 150 Emergency Relief Division employes were in effect rejected for the second time yesterday by the Comptroller General's office.

A negative ruling was made by R. N. Elliott, acting controller general, on a request by the District Commissioners that the workers involved be graded under the classification act or be placed under an emergency salary established for new agencies.

The only concession made by Elliott was that raises of less than $60 a year would not be construed as administrative promotions if given to individuals receiving $900 or more. He added all salaries could be reduced.

In an earlier decision Comptroller General McCarl held that raises would be prohibited by the prohibition of administrative promotions contained in the economy act.

In their request for a second decision, the Commissioners wrote that at present "practically all of the employes of these divisions are receiving less than employes doing the same class of work in other departments, and for this reason many of them are so underpaid that it causes a very serious effect on the workers and a considerable turnover in personnel through the acceptance of better-paid positions."

Jury Probes Killing Of Woman by Auto

Evidence in the death of Mrs. Mary Bladen, 60, killed Sunday night when struck by an automobile near Georgia avenue and Ingraham street northwest, will be presented to a coroner's jury today.

Mrs. Bladen was killed as she hurried into the street to catch a street car. Police said she was struck by the machine of Conrad Huffman, 2814 Fifth street northeast. Huffman was ordered to appear at the inquest.

Prompt Pay Bill Accord Is Predicted

Conference Tomorrow to Set Independent Offices Funds.

Veterans', Government Clerk Benefits Raise Opposition.

Prompt agreement between Senate and House on disputed sections of the much amended independent offices bill, carrying Government pay-cut and veterans' benefit provisions, was predicted yesterday as Senator Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, announced first meeting of the conferees would be held tomorrow.

Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, head of the Senate group, could not attend a meeting yesterday and Representative Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, head of the House conferees, would be out of town today, Senator Byrnes said.

Representative Woodrum went to the White House yesterday, where he laid before the President a compilation showing differences in appropriations made by the bill as it passed the House originally and as it was passed by the Senate. Woodrum did not give a compilation of the total carried in the bill as it was sent back to the Senate by the House last week.

Huge Sum Added.

As passed originally by the House the bill carried $566,435,693, Woodrum told the President. Amendments adopted by the Senate added $228,132,349 for Government pay and veterans' benefits, he reported. Of this increase, only $22,139,021 had been approved by the Bureau of the Budget, he said. More than $21,000,000 of this is accounted for by increased veterans' expenditures authorized in executive orders issued by the President.

The President did not say whether he would accept the House pay and benefits amendments, Woodrum said.

Executive approval of these provisions is expected, however, inasmuch as Senator Byrnes offered much the same proposals during consideration of the measure in the Senate. Although Byrnes was careful to say he offered the proposals on his own responsibility, he made it clear that he expected Presidential approval if they were adopted.

"Living Cost" Plan.

As the bill now stands it provides for restoration of 5 per cent of Government salaries, as of February 1, and another 5 per cent effective July 1, with authority for the President to restore the remaining 5 per cent if living costs rise sufficiently to justify it.

Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, yesterday introduced a bill providing for a flat 10 per cent increase in the basic pay of Government employes. The bill is not expected to get very far, but Randolph is determined to push it despite adherence of leaders to the antipay raise policy of the President.

Principal battle in conference is expected to revolve about provisions for veterans' benefits, treatment of Spanish War veterans and World War presumptive cases.

Dr. Ragsdale Denies Hospital May Close

Denial that he had expressed any belief that Columbia Hospital might have to close, in view of a reduction of $10,000 in the Federal appropriation for heating and power costs, was made yesterday by Dr. S. B. Ragsdale, superintendent. He had been quoted to that effect in a release issued to newspapers.

Dr. Ragsdale deplored publication of the statement attributed to him, as he assured employes and patrons that there was no likelihood the hospital would close.

Connie Mack, at 72, Shows Enthusiasm as He Rebuilds Athletics

Vet Gambles On Mound Staff

Otherwise Team Built Around Jimmy Foxx Is Promising.

FORT MYERS, Fla., March 19 (AP).—Perish the thought that there is melancholy in the mind of Connie Mack; or tears in his eyes over the breaking up of his second and perhaps last great championship ball club.

At 72, after more than a half century devoted to the National game, the tall, thin master of the Athletics had banished all regrets in his earnest, keen-eyed enthusiasm for a fresh job of reconstruction.

For one thing, the elderly leader is free for the time being from financial worries that have weighed heavily upon him and his associates for the last few years. For the second time in his career, Mack has known the bitter experience of losing money with a championship club.

Financial Load Lightened.

Consequently, the sale of his greatest stars within the past two years, while wrecking his own pennant chances and making contenders out of three rival clubs this season, nevertheless has lifted a heavy pay roll burden from the Athletics and brightened the club's hopes of capitalizing on Sunday baseball at home for the first time.

For another thing, Mack feels confident that except for an absolute gamble on his pitching staff, he has a first-class ball club this year, one whose speed and batting power, featuring the great Jimmy Foxx, will make it troublesome for all rivals. The main survivor of the 1929-31 champions, Foxx is a power house all by himself as the American League's leading batsman, home run slugger and run producer. At about $18,000, the Maryland mauler is now the only player on the club whose salary runs into five figures and he had to wage a brisk debate with Mack to get that much.

All Pack Batting Punch.

Mack's infield worries will be removed as soon as Frank Higgins, the last holdout, reports. Eric McNair is a great young shortstop and Dib Williams has replaced Max (Eagle Eye) Bishop at second. They all pack a real batting wallop, along with the rangy outfield trio of Bob Johnson, Roger Cramer and Ed Coleman.

The task of replacing the irreplacables, Left Grove and Mickey Cochrane, is something else. It only emphasizes the gap left by this great battery to say that Mack is hopefully inspecting a group of young pitchers named Cascarella, Dietrich, McKeithan, Benton, Kennedy and Matuzak or relying on Charley Berry and Ed Madjeski to do the back stopping. It is extremely doubtful if all six of the ambitious young moundsmen named could combine to duplicate the work of Grove last year, when he won 24 games and saved at least 10 more. In short, there are no substitutes for players like Grove and Cochrane, the best proof of which is the fact that on the strength of having one of them apiece, the Boston Red Sox and Detroit Tigers have been babbling about their pennant chances.

Only Two Seasoned Hurlers.

"Some of my young pitchers are real promising," says Mack, "but I could not even give you a guess as to what they might do."

That just about sums it up. In Merrit (Sugar) Cain and Roy Mahaffey, Mack has only two seasoned flingers in a group consisting exclusively of right-handers. Consequently, there is not even a potential Grove. The old master fancies John Marcum, fast-ball product of the American Association, who registered two shutouts in his 1933 major league debut. Harry Matuzak, apparently the best of a trio bought from Oklahoma City; Joe Cascarella, from Jersey City, and Tim McKeithan, a former collegian, so far have won Mack's approval, but the future of all, under fire, is highly speculative.

The A's are shy anything resembling a seasoned relief pitcher. In fact, Mack probably could use several experienced rescue artists. As it is, he may have to work his young pitching staff in relays when the season opens, just as he is doing now in training camp. The rest of the club's reserve strength also is limited. Rabbit Warstler and George Detore are the only infield reserves. Although Lou Finney can substitute at first base as well as in the outfield. The veteran coach, Bing Miller, is available for pinch-hitting duty. Ray Radcliffe, obtained from St. Paul, also may be carried for outfield reserve duty.

Kansas State Names Waldorf Grid Coach

Manhattan, Kans., March 19 (AP). Appointment of Lynn Waldorf as football coach of Kansas State College, succeeding A. N. (Bo) McMillin, was announced today by Athletic Director M. F. Ahearn.

Waldorf, who played tackle at Syracuse, will resign as athletic director and head coach at Oklahoma A. and M. College.

Harrisonburg's Sextet Keeps Slate Clean

HARRISONBURG, Va., March 19 (Spl.).—Led by Miss Emily Pittman, brilliant junior forward and captain, the State Teachers College closed an all-victorious season by triumphing over New College, of Columbia University, New York City, 54 to 17 in Reed Hall gymnasium. A capacity crowd, including the presidents of the two institutions, Dr. Samuel P. Duke, of H. T. C., and Dr. T. J. Alexander, of New College, saw the contest.

With this game the Harrisonburg girls completed their seventh straight victory, having defeated Shepherds College, Shepherdstown, W. Va., 62-12, East Stroudsburg Teachers College, of Pennsylvania, 35-30; Westhampton College, Richmond, 33-10; the Savage School of Physical Education, New York City, 32-23; New College, 51-17 and 54-17, and Blackstone College, Blackstone, 33-19. The teachers scored a total of 300 points to 128 by their opponents.

Miss Pittman Stars.

Of the Harrisonburg points, exactly one-half, or 150, were made by Miss Emily Pittman, Gates, N. C. who accounted for 67 field and 16 foul goals. Second honors went to Miss Douglas MacDonald, Scotts, N. C., who tallied 29 goals from the floor, and 9 one-pointers. Close behind her is Miss Virginia Barrow, Blackstone, whose record includes 31 two-pointers and 2 free shots. She also starred as a guard.

The sextet throughout the season showed speed, accuracy, and excellent team work. Misses Virginia Grogan (Spencer) and Laura Scheibeler (New York City) as jumping center, Miss Julia Couter (Amelia) as side center, and Misses Mary Van Landingham (Petersburg) and Alma Fultz (Butterworth) veteran guards, must be mentioned for their superior play. Mrs. Althea Johnston is the Harrisonburg coach.

A. A. U. Officials Meet.

An important meeting of the District A. A. U. board of managers will be held tonight at Roosevelt High School at 8 o'clock, William Russell, president, announced. Matters pertaining to the basket ball tournament, the National diving and swimming championships, and other coming events will be discussed.

Appalachian Title To Erwin "Y" Five

Elizabethton Ramblers Are Third in Tourney.

Bristol, Va., March 19 (Spl.).—Erwin, Tenn., Y. M. C. A., playing with a smoothness and power that justly earned a brilliant victory, won the championship of the second annual Appalachian tournament on the Bristol Y. M. C. A. floor by shooting out a 37-to-24 victory over the Kingsport, Tenn., Drug Co. Independents.

Morley, with 17 points; Cox and Harvey featured for Erwin and Jackson, Bellamy and Grills for Kingsport.

Piling up their winning margin in the fourth quarter, the Elizabethton (Tenn.) Bemberg-Glanzstoff Purple Ramblers captured third place in the tournament by defeating Piggly-Wiggly, of Bristol, 44 to 36, in the curtain raiser to the championship game.

Mansfield Jackson, sensational star of the Kingsport Drug Independents, carried off the bulk of tournament honors. He was voted the outstanding player and unanimously placed on the first all-tournament team. In addition he won the high-point medal for the entire tournament and the medal for high scorer in a single game. Grills, his teammate, was voted the second best player.

All-tournament teams were selected as follows:

Giants Pound Ball To Rout Dodgers

Rally Off Mungo in Fifth to Score 4 Times; Win 7-4.

Miami Beach, Fla., March 19 (AP). The World Champion New York Giants pounded Van Mungo, Dodgers pitching ace, for five hits and four runs in the fifth inning today to defeat the Brooklyn Nationals 7 to 4, in an exhibition game at Flamingo Park before 1,200 spectators.

After each side scored a run in the first inning, the Giants took command of the game in the fifth largely as the result of a lusty triple off the bat of Pitcher Joe Bowman, who relieved the Giants' starting pitcher, Hal Schumacher, in the fourth. Bowman's blow scored Vergez and Healey. In the fifth inning Bowman hit a double.

Score:

	R.	H.	E.
Dodgers	000	000 012—4	7	1
Giants	100	042 00x—7	11	1

Mungo, Page, Leonard and Berres, Sukeforth; Schumacher, Bowman, Castleman and Healey, Danning.

Quarles Gets Vote Over Goldstein

Split Decision Awarded North Carolina Boy in Richmond Bout.

Richmond, Va., March 19 (Spl.). Norment Quarles, University of North Carolina boxing star, and Southern Conference 135-pound champion, won a close and rather dubious decision over Bobby Goldstein, of Washington, D. C., former University of Virginia boxing captain, tonight at the City Auditorium before a capacity crowd of 4,000 spectators.

The bout went three rounds. One judge voted for Quarles, another for Goldstein, and the referee cast his ballot for the Tarheel scrapper.

Thrills were packed into the match from the opening gong. Quarles came out fast throwing punches with machine-gun rapidity. One of the first blows, a well-timed left hook caught Goldstein flush on the chin and sent him down for a short count.

Quarles weighed 134¾ pounds, and Goldstein 132.

The two battlers were resuming a rivalry born in intercollegiate competition when the North Carolina boxer scored a thrilling decision over the former Cavalier scrapper in a Southern Conference match. This was Goldstein's only defeat while representing Virginia U.

A. A. U. Lists 5 Court Games Tonight

Saranacs, Boys Club in Feature of The Post's Title Tourney.

THREE games at Roosevelt High gym and two at MacFarland Junior High will be offered basket ball followers in the District A. A. U. tournament sponsored by The Post tonight.

In the feature battle at Roosevelt, Boys Club of Washington and the Saranacs, challengers for the unlimited crown, will collide at 9:30 o'clock, while on the same court, St. Martin's and Jewish Community Center will compete in a 130-pound semifinals game at 7:30, and the Twin Oak: Black Hawks will oppose Stewart's Pharmacy for the right to enter the semifinals of the 145-pound division.

Two semifinals contests in the unlimited girls' class are calculated to attract a capacity crowd to the MacFarland court. In the curtain-raiser, scheduled for 8 o'clock, Rockville's lassies, conquerors of the Red Flashes, will meet Bethesda-Chevy Chase High, and at 9 o'clock Al's A. C., defending champions, will make their bow in the tournament against the Jewish Community Center, which eliminated Brooks A. C. in its opening game last week.

Saranacs Favored.

The Boys Club and Saranacs promise to put on a red-hot battle to the finish, although, on the strength of their past performances in the tournament and games during the Community Center League season, the latter team rules a slight favorite. In handy fashion, the Saranacs put away the Y. M. C. A. Big Five and Jewish Community Center, while the Boys Club played in-and-out basket ball against Company F of Hyattsville last week. The Boys Club played winning basket ball in the first half against the Soldiers, but bogged down in the closing period, and was fortunate in winning, 29 to 27.

Teddy Capelli, former Duke University star, will not start against the Saranacs tonight. Alec Cabell will take his place at forward, with Billy Harris at the other forward; George Beach at center, and Shorty Harris and George Ginsmer at the guard posts. The Saranacs will open with their prep school star line-up of Bob Smith and Bill Burke, forwards; Downey Rice, center; Gene Swift and Jack Moulton, guards.

Twin Oaks recently won a thrilling 34-33 game from Northeast Boy's Club and will have a battle on their hands attempting to stop Stewart's Pharmacy, the team that had quite a time beating Langdon Boys' Club. Two sets of brothers, Bob and Frank Schaefer, and Joe and Charles Hunter, are the Twin Hawks stars.

St. Martin's, easy winners over Rockville, has a fleet-footed array of young stars, with Boyle, center, and Wiles, forward, as the shooting luminaries. The Saints won easily from Rockville. Their opponents, the J. C. C., beat the Georgetown Boys' Club in their opening encounter.

Puppy Trials at Luray To Haws Branch Jake

Luray, Va., March 19 (AP).—Haws Branch Jake, a pointer, owned by Fritz Sitterding, jr., of Richmond, and handled by Mrs. Rae Shenk, of Amelia, took first honors in the spring puppy trials of the Page Valley Association, run off at Atwood Farm today.

Starpoise, a setter, owned and handled by Capt. R. H. Clemmer, of Waynesboro, and Equity, also a setter, owned and handled by Virgit, of Staunton, was third. Running with the three winners in the second series, Capt. Clemmer's Allegheny Jake and Portsmouth Jake, owned by J. W. Abbitt, of Portsmouth, handled by A. W. Valentine, of Richmond, showed speed and were outstanding except for four of the second series, but ran out of judgment.

Equity, running in the fifth brace with Shenk's Jack Boy, was best up to that time and ran a good heat. Eight brace were entered in the puppy trials, which finished about 2 o'clock. Rain and sleety weather hampered the dogs.

Chestervalley Ginger, owned by President Richardson of the Rappahannock Club, running in the first brace of the all-age stake with Beaux, found two coveys of birds. The all-age event continued until dark and will be finished tomorrow.

A.A.U. Tournament Schedule

At Macfarland Gymnasium—Unlimited girls' class, 8:00, Rockville vs. Bethesda-Chevy Chase High; 9:00, Al's Athletic Club vs. Jewish Community Center.

At Roosevelt Gymnasium — 130-pound class, 7:30, St. Martin's vs. Jewish Community Center; 145-pound class, 8:30, Twin Oask Black Hawks vs. Stewart's Pharmacy. Unlimited, 9:30, Boys Club of Washington vs. Saranacs.

Tomorrow.

One hundred and forty-five pound class, 7:30, Heurich Flashes vs. Olmsted Grill. Unlimited, 8:30, Bureau of Investigation vs. Mount Vernon; 9:30, George Washington Freshmen vs. Congress Heights.

Thursday.

At Macfarland Gymnasium—8:00, finals, 100-pound division, Boys Club Americans vs. Y. M. C. A. Hawks; 9:00, finals, girls.

At Roosevelt Gymnasium, 7:30, finals, 115-pound division, Roosevelt High Lightweights vs. Ebell's Grill; 145-pound class, 8:30 St. Stephen's vs. winner of Twin Oaks-Stewart's game; unlimited division, 9:30, Trinity vs. winner of Boys Club-Saranacs game

No games Friday and Saturday, owing to National A. A. U. diving championships.

Old Age Creeping Up on Nats; Four Star Pitchers Are Now 33

By Shirley L. Povich.
(Sports Editor of The Post).

BILOXI, Miss., March 19 (Spl.). Time may be the great healer, but in the guise of the old gentleman with the scythe he looms as an ugly specter, athwart the path of this Washington Ball Club whose most important component parts are skating on the thin ice of the thirtfes.

Thirty-three is no ripe old age, but, as baseball calculations go, it is a venerable one and no less than four of Manager Cronin's regular pitchers answer to that number—Al Crowder, Earl Whitehill, Walter Stewart and Alphonse Thomas, representing both the warp and woof of the Washington pitching staff.

And with Cronin himself, Joe Kuhel, Fred Schulte, Johnny Stone and Monte Weaver the only regulars on the sunny side of 30, Owner Clark Griffith is faced with the task of retrenchment, maybe not this season, but certainly as soon as he can conveniently unload for younger blood.

Griffith has already made one move in that direction by trading the 32-year-old Goose Goslin to the Tigers for 28-year-old Johnny Stone and is actuated chiefly in the development of 20-year-old Cecil Travis as a protective measure against the decline of the 33-year-old Ossie Bluege.

Washington's pitching staff is not yet superannuated, but with four regulars admitting to 33, it is on the border line, although still younger than the famous pitching staff of Bucky Harris which won the pennant in 1925.

Those Were the Days.

That was the year when Ring Lardner's famous Jack Keefe character, in his "You Know Me Al" comic strip, said that some day when he was facing a Washington pitcher he expected to see an arm as well as a ball come sailing up to the plate. On that 1925 Washington staff were such pitching relics as Stanley Coveleskie, Dutch Ruether, Oyster Joe Martina and Vean Gregg, the oldest 44, the youngest 40.

Washington was the old man's home of the league that season, what with such notable veterans in addition to the pitchers as Roger Peckinpaugh, Everett Scott, Hank Severeid and Joe Harris, but it is significant that the following season Bucky Harris' veteran club all but crumbled and drifted away on the wings of a zephyr.

By this time you have probably deduced that nothing of importance happened in the Nats training camp today. Right. The smug complacence of the Washington Club and its stand-pat attitude goes on apace, to the great grief of the correspondents who are being driven to thinking at the risk of bursting an ear drum.

Today was noted chiefly for the absence of Biloxi Chamber of Commerce officials from the practice and the Nats' hotel. The benevolence of the Biloxi weather which is featured prominently in the Chamber of Commerce literature was something else again today with the temperature hovering around freezing and only some ear muffs and Commander Byrd's Little America dog team needed to complete the frigid scene at the ball park.

Batting Drill Is Short.

In a humane gesture, Manager Cronin dispensed with the afternoon session and concentrated his forces at the field in the morning, thus enabling the rookies to rub shoulders again with their more talented colleagues. After one turn at the bat that left him with hands stung to the marrow, Cronin curtailed batting practice for the day and volley ball occupied the bulk of the workout.

They are actually going to play a game of baseball here day after tomorrow, with the regulars facing the yannigans. First-string pitchers will work for both teams in three-inning shifts to enable the hitters of both sides to get a look at some good pitching.

Runs, Hits and Errors.

Ossie Bluege's glasses are still the chief object of interest in camp here . . . But Specs Torporcer, of the Cardinals, and Danny MacFayden, then with the Red Sox, were the game guys with the spectacles . . . Before shatter-proof glass had been invented . . . Two titles have changed in the hotel lobby . . . Bob Boken is the checker champion . . . and Johnny Kerr is the slot-machine king . . . Moe Berg, master of seven languages, is now learning to speak Biloxi . . . Cronin has no thought of disturbing the Berg-Bobby Burke combination. . . and Moe will catch Burke whenever the latter pitches . . . and the Brooklyn announcer at the Athletics park will say, "Boike and Boig battery for Washington."

Charlotte Glutting Wins Golf Medal

Mrs. Haines, D. C., Among Pinehurst Qualifiers.

Pinehurst, N. C., March 19 (AP). Miss Charlotte Glutting, of South Orange, N. J., shot a 79, to win the medal in the qualifying round of the annual North and South Women's Golf tournament here today, and led a field of 16 into the championship flight, who will battle for the title not defended by Maureen Orcutt.

One stroke back was Miss Edith Quier, Reading, Pa., in second place with an 80.

Miss Niela Gorozyea, of Fort Worth, Tex., the Southern champion, had an 84. Other qualifiers were Mrs. K. F. Schedit, Philadelphia, 89; Mrs. R. H. Barlow, Bryn Mawr, Pa., 92; Mrs. Marvin Haines, Washington, 89; Mrs. J. W. Hoopes, Kennett Square, Pa., 92; Miss Helen Waring, Pinehurst, 86; Mrs. M. K. Garter, Pittsburgh, 92; Miss Jean Bauer, Providence, R. I., 85; Mrs. Joseph J. Lawlor, New Rochelle, N. Y., 93; Miss Jane Douglas, Beverly Hills, Calif., 92; Miss Jane Brooks, Nyack, N. Y., 82; Mrs. Sarah Fownes Wadsworth, Pittsburgh, 91; Miss Marion Miley, Lexington, Ky., 89; Miss Deborah Verry, Worcester, Mass., 91.

Grid Drill Again Delayed at Navy

Brisk Snowfall Sends Tar Candidates Off Field.

Annapolis, Md., March 19 (Spl.). Fickle March, with snow and otherwise unfavorable weather, is proving a jinx to Navy's plans for spring football practice. Deferred five days because of snow, thaw and rain, the stage was all set for activities today but, before all of the players were on the field, snow began to fall briskly so the session was called off after a brief period.

The coaching group was headed by Lieut. Tom Hamilton, former Navy star, new assistant director of football; Edgar E. (Rip) Miller, of Notre Dame fame, last year's head mentor, will be chief line coach; Johnny Wilson, of the Academy's regular civilian staff, back field coach, and Lieuts. Johnny Cross, line coach, and Harry Hardwick, end coach. Another former Navy star, Lieut. Howard Caldwell, who will assist in back field coaching, is expected here in a few days.

Hamilton, Hardwick, Cross and Caldwell, all played on the famous team of 1926, generally regarded as the strongest ever developed at the naval school.

Landers and Dougan to Collide

Wright and Davis Face Tough Opponents in Six Rounders.

THE old ring feud between lilliputian Leroy Dougan and Blond Billy Landers has been resurrected from its shelf in the fistic hope chest, refurbished with new threats and angry gestures by the parties of the first and second parts, and will be shoved into Portner's Arena tonight for the paying customers' entertainment. From this corner it shapes up as a promising club fight, a fitting climax to the 32-round "all-star" card promulgated by rotund Frank Mann. It will be a six-round argument—mebbe.

A few months back Landers planted a stiff right on Leroy's jaw, propelling the Terminal toy bulldog into dreamland. Later they were rematched, but Dougan canceled the engagement, pleading an infected tooth. This drew a scornful barrage from Blond Billy, who asserted, among other things, that he'd score another knockout if Dougan would climb through the ropes with him.

Not at the Terminal.

Dougan retaliated with a jawful of remarks concerning home-town refereeing and a subsequent quick count, &c., &c., and that he would like nothing better than a return engagement with Mr. Landers, unless he would call personally at the Termnial gym to iron out their difficulties. Terminal, of course, was out of the question as duelling grounds, inasmuch as the customers probably couldn't find it and the promoters couldn't charge admission. So the festivities will be across the river.

Two of Washington's finest ring prospects, Carey Wright and Roddy Davis, have speaking roles in supporting six-round scraps. Wright tackles Al Parks, of Baltimore, and Davis is matched with roly-poly Morris Gross, recent conquerer of Bill Bullock. Benny Victor who scored before the Portner patrons recently, will engage K. O. Sloat in another six.

Richard Boys Elected Harvard Court Captain

Cambridge, Mass., March 19 (AP). Richard C. Boys, varsity center for the Harvard College Basket Ball Team, was today elected captain. Boys is 20 years old and stands 6 feet 2 inches. He is a junior and prepared for Harvard at State High School, Kalamazoo, Mich.

Hagerstown Boy Wins 15-Mile Hike

Young Sets Mark; Schamel Brothers Second, Third.

Frederoick, Md., March 19 (Spl.). Covering 15 miles in 1 hour and 47 minutes, Frank J. Young, Hagerstown athlete, won the Brunswick-to-Frederick marathon race from a field of eight starters. James Schamel, Brunswick, winner of the Frederick - to - Brunswick run two weeks ago finished second 4½ minutes later, and Charles (Speed) Schamel, brother of James, was third in 1 hour and 54½ minutes.

Tony Wagner, the only Negro entrant, started fast and led the field nearly half way. He weakened going up Steiner's Hill and was overtaken by James Schamel, near Jefferson. Schamel then led until he reached Feagaville, 3 miles from the finish, when Young, running 4 minutes behind Schamel, put on a burst of speed and passed the latter at the edge of Frederick.

Young's time bettered by 6 minutes the mark set by Schamel two weeks ago, notwitstanding that the course was about 1 mile longer. Schamel was faster by 1½ minutes than his previous record, while his brother's time was 1½ minutes slower. Others who competed were Tilghman Price, Harold Alexander and Norman Prill, Hagerstown, and Norman Trump, this city. The officials were R. A. Mulkey, R. L. Everhart, Brunswick, and Monroe Burdette and Alvin Bopst, this city. Another race will be planned for next month. A large crowd witnessed the start and finish and many followed the runners in automobiles.

Injured Rider's Mother Flying to His Bedside

Montreal, March 19 (AP).—Mrs. M. C. Blanchard, mother of Tommy Blanchard, apprentice jockey who is in a critical condition in Houston, Tex., left last night to be at his bedside.

Blanchard was wounded a few days ago when a revolver was accidentally discharged at Epsom Downs race track. Mrs. Blanchard left by train for New York and planned to fly from there to Houston.

Legionnaires to Bowl.

Members of Fort Stevens Post, No. 32, American Legion, will roll the second round of their bowling tournament Thursday night at the Arcadia alleys, starting at 8 o'clock. Roy Butrum leads with a high game of 125 and set of 339.

Big Beau, 3 to 1, Is Winner in Opening Tropical Park Feature by Stretch Drive

Headley Star Set Track Record

Lowers 1 1-16 Figure a Second; Pastry, Live One, Next Home.

TROPICAL PARK, March 19 (AP). Back to the less effete but more intimate confines of the Gables Racing Association's picturesque plant came king horse and his racing retinue this afternoon as the last two weeks of a successful Florida season got under way. A well-balanced program, featured by the Seminole Handicap, and delightful weather, attracted a good-sized opening crowd. H. P. Headley's Big Beau, winner of his last Hialeah outing, provided a worthy treat for the crowd by winning the Seminole and smashing the mile and a sixteenth track record to smithers. The Supremus 5-year-old completed his trip in 1:43 2-5, a full second faster than the previous mark held by Banderlog.

Big Beau beat J. E. Widener's Pastry by a length in a drive, while M. J. Sansone's Live One was nosed out of second money. Stealingaway, slight choice over the winner, was a tired fifth. The winner paid $7.60.

Choice Finally Wins.

The talent had a hard time selecting winners, none registering until Renewed showed the way home in the sixth.

Harold Thurber, veteran jockey who rode Chance Favor in the juvenile event, was struck under the collar bone by a flying stone. He suffered a ruptured blood vessel which caused a large swelling. Thurber will be out of competition for several days, it was said.

Big Beau was first away in the feature, but he lacked speed and was buffeted around at the clubhouse turn, then eased back to last in the backstretch. Pastry and Live One had the running between them to the stretch. Bobby Jones made Big Beau sneak up on the outside on the final bend. The bearer of the navy blue and white silks, full in his stride, circled the field with a rush turning into the short home lane and catching Pastry inside the last sixteenth, won going away.

Suspicious Pays $23.30.

Earl Porter, leading rider at the first Tropical Park meeting and at Hialeah Park, began the current meeting auspicously by guiding the $23.30 for $2 shot Suspicious first home in the curtain raiser. Mae Sweep, showing improvement and heavily backed, lost the purse by a half length. Jane Ellen was a good third. Suspicious made all her own pace and held on courageously under Porter's powerful ride. Mae Sweep always held the place safe.

Premeditate, paying $21.70, upset several good things in the second when she had the best of a thrilling finish that saw four horses heads apart. Jimmy Hunter gave the winner a corking ride, holding the mare together while bunched with the leaders for the last three furlongs. Singing Heart and Uppercut held on gamely to finish second and third, with the weakly ridden Dornoch fourth.

Hernando Nose Victor.

Silvio Coucci lifted Hernando over the finish line a nose winner of the fourth event after a spirited duel with Aunt Flor. Wedding Ring was third, two lengths behind. Aunt Flor cut out most of the running, but Fred Almy, Hernando and Wedding Ring stuck right alongside. Aunt Flor held a head advantage at the stretch turn, but was unable to withstand Hernando's closing rush. The winner returned $8.10.

A favorite finally made good with the running of the sixth event, but the decision of the judges in deciding on Renewed over Momo was doubted by many and roundly booed. Pardee was third, three lengths behind the pair. Renewed assumed command at the far turn and held on gamely when Momo challenged on the outside. The latter looked a winner as the two horses, heads bobbing together, passed the finish, Momo appearing to get the nod, but the judges ruled otherwise. Renewed paid $4.90.

High Socks, $6.80, won the closing contest by a half length to give Jockey Meade a double. St. Christopher was placed second over Spud, although the latter looked to have gained second place by a nose.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

Under the press of wartime necessity, United States shipbuilding reached an all-time high for speed during the late months of the World War. Typical was the building of the S. S. Invincible, a 12,000-ton ship in the summer of 1918. The keel was laid in Alameda, Calif., on July 4, and the ship was launched on August 4.

Faster time, but for a smaller ship, was made in the building of the Tuckanoe, a 5,500-ton craft. The keel for this ship was laid on April 8, 1918, and she was launched on May 5. The Tuckahoe was sold by the Government in 1922, and renamed the Seacomet. She was lost off Vineyard Sound, Mass., on June 15, the following year, according to records of the United States Shipping Board. The Invincible is still afloat, and is now laid up at New Orleans. She is still owned by the Government.

The most unusual record for unusual weather was enjoyed by Southern California last January when Weather Bureau records showed the paradox of much rain and much sunshine. During that month the heaviest rainstorm ever known in any January on record drenched the southern part of the State. Stanch supporters of California's sunshine, however, pointed to the 284 hours of sunshine out of a possible 315—which is also a record for sunshine during any January.

with* Bill Bennings.

Tropical Park, March 19.

Dear Al:

Well, friend, the Bennings forces opened the campaign here with a "double." Foreign Lady, at $8.10, and Big Beau, at $7.60, were my successes, and Aunt Flora, my best bet, was beaten a lip in the last stride. However, two a day keeps the boss away. To harp back on Hialeah for a moment, the State made a nice killing on the 45-day meeting at that course, according to official figures released today. The contribution was $432,811.25. Mutuel play averaged $259,835 a day. The average attendance was 8,321, which was 2,181 more than last year. Providing you acquire a wagering urge tomorrow, you might do worse than give these a chance. BILL.

First race—Billies Orphan breaks from No. 1 post tomorrow and will have the hustling Jimmy Hunter aboard at only 105 pounds. I expect a lot of running from this one. Vishnu, with Gilbert in the saddle, carries top weight but is dangerous. In High for the show end.

Second race — Chance Line, another Gilbert mount, appears to have the edge over these sprinters. Has a good third to his credit and turned in a fair workout this morning. Bernie K. showed a return to form in that recent race and gets the call to beat Mr. Boss for the place.

Third race—Happy Scott seems to have found a spot here to his liking and I can't see anything stopping him except too much play in the mutuels. Hasty Peter figures to make a race of it. The sleeper here is Steel. Porter will be up. This one can really go places.

Fourth race—Deadeye Dick is said to be a juvenile with a future. Had little chance to show his stuff last out due to interference. Clearer sailing tomorrow would take this purse, I do believe. Migrate has conducted himself well on several occasions. Dawn Flight is an outsider with a chance.

Fifth race—Chasity was so impressive in that last outing that I'm not looking elsewhere for the winner of this test. Flying Gypsy and Appomattox to complete the picture.

Sixth race—Dancing Mack won at this course during the first meeting and likes the track. Little Haines will be aboard tomorrow and, like his mount, loves the front of the field. Mack may go on top and stay there. Bichloride and Bub McFarland for the rest. Incidently, I have heard it whispered around that Fair Crest is rounding into form again.

Golden Miller Is 21-2 Grand National Choice

London, March 19 (AP).—Dorothy Paget's Golden Miller today remained favorite at 21 to 2 for the Grand National Steeplechase at Aintree March 23 in the latest call-over of betting odds, but the surprise winner of the 1932 race, W. Parsonage's Forbra, moved up into second place at 13 to 1.

Two American horses, John Hay (Jock) Whitney's Thomond II and J. B. Snow's Delaneige, were bracketed with the English-owned steeplechasers Really True and Ready Cash at 18 to 1.

Southern Hero was quoted at 20 to 1; another American horse, F. Ambrose Clark's Sorley Boy, and two English racers, Gregalach and Trocadero, at 22 to 1; Perlorus Jack at 25 to 1; Fortnum and Alpine Hut at 28 to 1; Egremont, Francolino and Remus at 33 to 1, and Uncle Batt and Bantillius at 40 to 1.

Ping Pong Tourney.

A tournament for class B and C ping pong players will open Monday night at the District ping pong courts, 1510 H street northwest, it was announced last night. A trophy will be awarded the winner. An entrance fee of 50 cents will be exacted from all contestants and entries will be accepted up until 8:30 o'clock the opening night.

Dusek Counts On Roughness To Gain Win

Will Beat Browning Thursday if Met Half Way, Rough Rudy Says.

"I CAN take it—didja ever see a Dusek that couldn't? I wonder if Browning can?"

Rudy Counts on Speed.

"Browning's a big man and a powerful one," Rudy concedes. "Also he's a great wrestler. Even so, I figure to give him more trouble than I did Londos.

"The Greek's small, lightning fast and hard to get to. And he's plenty smart with it. I figure I can step circles around Browning, take everything he's got, and give him more in return. If that can't win for me, Buddy, nothing can!"

Whereas big Jim not only has emphasized but has proven that he can stand toe-to-toe with everything sent against him here previously, Rudy insists that Browning's doing so Thursday will be playing right down his (Dusek's) alley.

"Let him so much as meet me half way and you'll see an upset," Rudy snarled in parting. "Yeah a mighty big upset!"

Colored League Meets.

Representatives of teams in the Tri-State Colored Baseball League are requested to attend a meeting of league officials at the Twelfth Street Y. M. C. A. tonight at 8 o'clock.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUSPICIOUS, $23.30 $14.70, $6.70; MAE SWEEP, $5.10, $3.50; JANE ELLEN $11.40.

SUSPICIOUS got away running, was hustled into lead, saved ground and stood long drive; namely, MAE SWEEP got away fast and, showing good speed, closed gamely and was wearing the winner down. JANE ELLEN, well up from the start, had no mishaps. SEQUOIA ran a poor race and was timidly ridden. QUORUM closed a big gap. STRETCH CALL was placed on the outside of the stalls, broke slow and never was a factor.

SECOND RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming price, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:55. Off at 2:56. Winner, H. Herendeen's ch. m. (5), by Supremus—Mettie Beraud. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third $50; fourth, $25. Time 1:06 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PREMEDITATE, $21.70, $6.00, $4.60; SINGING HEART, $3.70, $3.30; UPPERCUT, $5.60.

PREMEDITATE, under a hustling ride, rushed into lead, displayed good speed and held on gamely. SINGING HEART, never far from the early pace, was hustled along all the way and held on well. UPPERCUT moved up very fast entering stretch, but weakened in last twenty yards. DORNOCH was pounds the best and should have won, but was weakly ridden in closing strides. CABOCHON finished very fast. DIJONETTE never was prominent.

THIRD RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $700. For maiden fillies 2-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:27½. Off at 3:30½. Winner, Charles Robson's b. f. (2) by Polymelian—Dulcines II. Trained by Nat Ray. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:48 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FOREIGN LADY, $8.10, $4.51, $2.70; POLLY HUNDRED, $4.60, $3.00; EVER TRUE, $2.40.

FOREIGN LADY broke alertly from the outside, rushed into lead, bothered field some as she took command, drew away and won nicely in hand. POLLY HUNDRED got away fast, but was in close quarters turning out of back stretch. She stood long drive gamely. EVER TRUE was first away, dropped back, but finished fast. POLLY RITA closed a big gap. BLUEBOTTLE showed a flash of early speed. GOBET ran out on turn. DISTRACTING ran a fair race.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse $700; claiming price, $1,500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:59½. Off at 4:00. Winner, W. E. Stanton's br. g. (4), by Axenstein—La Poudre. Trained by C. Ponce. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:11 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HERNANDO, $8.10, $3.40, $2.60; AUNT FLOR $3.90, $2.80; WEDDING RING, $2.60.

HERNANDO broke well, but was crowded back turning out of back stretch. He was taken to the outside and, closing with a rush, was up to win in last stride. AUNT FLOR rushed into lead, displayed good speed and held on gamely. WEDDING RING, on the outside all the way, had no mishaps. FRED ALMY was kept with the pace from the start, but weakened in last sixteenth. THE KING closed a big gap. GRANNY'S TRADE lacked speed.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. The Seminole Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:26½. Off at 4:27. Winner, Hal Price Headley's b. h. (5), by Supremus—Big Sis. Trained by D. A. Headley. Value to winner $725; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:47 3-5, 1:11 3-5, 1:37 3-5, 1:43 2-5. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BIG BEAU $7.60, $4.30, $3.50; PASTRY, $5.90, $3.80; LIVE ONE, $3.10.

BIG BEAU broke running, but was crowded and eased back going into first turn. He moved up very fast on outside, closed with a rush under the whip and won going away. PASTRY, showing unusual speed and gameness, forced a terrific pace and held on well. LIVE ONE, well up from the start, made a game effort. SUN APOLLO made a bid around turn but weakened in last sixteenth. STEALINGAWAY tired badly in stretch. SPICSON never was prominent.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $700; claiming prices, $2,250 to $1,750. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 4:58½. Off at 4:58. Winner, A. Hulicoat's br. g. (5), by Archaic—Red Cross IV. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:44.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RENEWED, $4.90, $2.90, $2.20; MOMO, $4.00, $2.80; PARDEE $2.40.

RENEWED was allowed to rate along for the first half mile, moved into lead, stood off all challenges and was lucky to win. MOMO, well ridden, made her move turning out of back stretch, closed gamely and appeared to have won. PARDEE jumped away fast, raced TWO TRICKS into defeat and then tired. PRIMUTE made his move turning into stretch, but faltered badly. KINDACORN was outrun. TWO TRICKS had speed for five furlongs, then tired.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $700; claiming prices, $1,200 to $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:27. Off at 5:27½. Winner, R. Curran's br. g. (5), by Gen Thatcher—Rachel D. Trained by G. C. Milton. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:46.

The

Stocks Decline As Labor Fear Upsets Dealers

Prices Dip Sluggishly in Active Trading; Sales, 1,539,060 Shares.

New York, March 19 (AP).—Declines prevailed in the financial markets today. Stocks gave up roughly one to three points.

Labor matters loomed large in the day's news, and speculative quarters expressed their uncertainty as to the outcome of current differences by moderate offerings in the security markets.

Stocks had a rather active dip around noon, but most of the day their decline was sluggish. Transfers totaled 1,539,060 shares.

Auto Conference Lingers.

Wall street went home without learning the outcome of today's automobile conference, but it did learn that the railroads had renewed their demand for a 15 per cent wage reduction.

As was the case Saturday, industrial stocks had the largest average decline of the three major groups, motors and steels being especially heavy. U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Nash and National Steel were down one to more than two points.

Metals weakened when the market heard that House action on the Fiesinger bill for silver purchases had been halted at the request of the White House. Silver metal also slumped again, though not as sharply as last Thursday. U. S. Smelting lost 3½ net.

On Losing List.

Several aircrafts, alcohols, chemicals and farm implements were generally losers, while some rails yielded one to two points. United Aircraft and Montgomery Ward offered considerable resistance much of the day, finishing fractionally lower.

Steel trade reviews have been saying that orders from railroads and miscellaneous consumers have been offsetting smaller takings by automobile manufacturers who face labor uncertainties. This week's production average compiled by the American Iron & Steel Institute would appear to bear out this view, since the figure has risen to 46.8 per cent of capacity from 46.2 per cent a week ago.

Steel Specifications Lighter.

The magazine Steel reports that although suspensions of shipments to automobile makers have been relatively few, "lighter specifications are being issued."

Two pieces of news that came to hand after markets had closed were the new exchange regulation measure and House passage of the Dies silver bill providing for exchange of agricultural exports for silver through trade agreements.

Changes in the revised exchange bill represented several modifications of the original draft, notably the authority given the Federal Reserve Board in the matter of margin provisions and the different requirements on reports of listed companies.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Value of Intermediate Credit Banks Will Depend Upon Proper Limitations Being Placed Upon the Type of Credit They May Extend.

By Ralph West Robey.

With the Administration definitely back of the drive to ease credit to industry, there probably is little reason to doubt that something will be done by the present Congress along this line. The only question is whether it will be constructive, in the sense of strengthening the existing financial organization, or another step that is permitted, because of the urge to make more credit available, to undermine and handicap our present machinery. The answer to this depends upon the limitations that are placed upon the lending powers of the new institutions.

Specifically the question is one of limiting loans to what is known as intermediate credit. This means loans with a maturity of not less than one year and not more than five years. Loans that run for more than five years are "long-term" and properly should be provided through the investment banking organization. Loans with a maturity of less than one year belong in the field of commercial banking. In both of these extremes we have adequate machinery to meet all possible needs. No new organizations financed by the Government are needed.

Have No Institutions in Intermediate Field.

We do not have any institutions well organized for meeting the needs for intermediate credit in the industrial field. There are organizations of this character—the agricultural intermediate credit banks—that take care of such demands from the farmers, but in the case of business it is necessary for the borrowers either to go to commercial banks, which usually is done, or to try to work through the investment banking machinery. In both cases the results are unsatisfactory.

If such credit is extended by commercial banks, it means that their portfolios tend to become frozen and to this extent their strength is undermined. On the other hand, if the investment banks are used the cost of such credit tends to be higher than necessary because these institutions are not organized with a view of handling such paper.

Should special institutions be established for making loans of from one to five years, accordingly, our whole financial structure would be strengthened. It would mean the filling in of a gap in our lending organization. For this reason the proposal of the Reserve Board, which has the support of the President and the Treasury, deserves consideration.

Should Supplement, Not Duplicate, Existing Units.

Let me emphasize, nevertheless, that the cause for this consideration is the possibility of getting some benefits from supplementing the existing financial machinery, not because we need governmental institutions to compete with our commercial banks and investment organizations. If we go into the latter field, through permitting any newly established organizations to make loans of less than one year, the net result will be to weaken our financial structure. We shall not, accordingly, be performing a service for the economic system as a whole.

It probably also should be stressed that if this limitation is placed upon the lending power of the new institutions, they will not be a major factor in hastening recovery. This is because there is no great demand for intermediate credit, even when the economic system is prosperous. If there were such a large demand, we already would have established intermediate credit institutions. The organizations, therefore, should be looked upon, not as a great recovery measure, but as a step in the direction of making our financial system more useful to society.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Trading on the stock exchange started the week quietly. Prices drooped under the lead of German bonds, which were 2 to 4 points lower on nervousness regarding the German financial position. Investment buying and bear covering later hardened prices of British issues and Kaffirs. The market closed irregular.

Paris—The uncertain international situation marked by Premier Mussolini's speech and the French-German disarmament notes, sent prices lower on the bourse. Later the tone improved, and the market closed firmer.

Berlin—Despite lack of orders, the tone on the boerse was cheerful. The market grew unsettled later, but closed with a slight improvement.

Minneapolis, March 19 (AP).—FLOUR—Unchanged. Carload lots, family patents, 7.10@7.30 a barrel in 98-pound cotton sacks. Shipments, 21,288.

BRAN—19.50@20.00.

Visible Supply U. S. Grain.

New York, March 19 (A.P.).—The visible supply of American grain shows the following changes in bushels: Wheat decreased 2,200,000; corn decreased 715,000; oats decreased 1,023,000; rye decreased 143,000; barley decreased 499,000.

Bonds Yield Under Rush of Profit Takers

Weakness Is Laid to Labor Troubles; Sales Cut to $14,065,000.

New York, March 19 (AP).—The threatening labor situation apparently brought further profit-taking in the bond market today and prices of the more active issues were the heaviest in several weeks.

While the trading volume was not large, tranfers totaling only $14,065,000, par value, the average for 60 domestic corporate loans declined four-tenths of a point.

The U. S. Government list was mildly mixed at the close, but a sharp break in the German division unsettled the foreign department. Federal bonds displayed a firm undertone most of the day. Highest grade corporate issues eased with the rest of the market.

Reich Loan Weakness.

The weakness of Reich loans was attributed to growing fears that the recent statement of President Schacht of the Reichsbank on the German financial situation indicated that demands would soon be made for a further reduction of interest payments on external debts.

The Dawes plan 7s lost 4 and the Young Plan 5s were off 1½ points, while German State, municipal and corporate obligations were down 1 to 5. Most other foreign loans were quiet and easier.

Domestic rail liens generally were under pressure. Among the more active losers of 1 to 2 or more points were some issues of Alleghany Corporation, Baltimore & Ohio, Canadian Pacific, Chesapeake Corporation, St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, Missouri Pacific, Northern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific and Southern.

Bonds of such companies as Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Norfolk & Western and Chesapeake & Ohio were moderately lower.

Utilities and Industrials.

Some resistance was shown by scattered utilities and industrials. Erie, Missouri Pacific, Northern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific and Southern.

Bonds of such companies as Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Norfolk & Western and Chesapeake & Ohio were moderately lower.

Some resistance was shown by scattered utilities and industrials, but declines of 1 to around 2 points were recorded by loans of American I. G. Chemical, American Rolling Mill, American Telephone, American Water Works, Columbia Gas, Goodrich, International Telephone, McKesson, Paramount, Postal Telegraph and Warner Bros.

Curb Market Starts Week at Lower Level

Utilities and Alcohols Turn Downward; Transfers, 286,000 Shares.

New York, March 19 (AP).—The curb market started the week at a lower level today, closing with numerous recessions of fractions to more than 3 points. Pressure on some of the industrial specialty issues was pronounced.

Offerings were quiet except for a brief flurry around noon. Some steady spots prevailed in oils and metals but utilities and alcohols were generally lower.

Aluminum Co. of America sagged 6¾ points to close at 65½. General Tire & Rubber lost 4 and shares off 2 to around 3 points included Bunker Hill & Sullivan, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Parker Rust Proof, Safety Car Heating and A. O. Smith.

Recessions of about a point were shown by Hiram Walker, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, American Gas & Electric, Electric Bond & Share, Standard Oil of Indiana and J. J. Newberry. Wright Hargreaves, International Petroleum and United Molasses steadied.

Transfers approximated 286,000 shares compared with 249,000 for last Friday.

Wool Market.

Boston, March 19 (A.P.) (U. S. Department of Agriculture).—Trading in wool was still quite limited, but the recent slight increase in the demand for the finer quality Western grown wools, which comprised the bulk of local supplies, stimulated a more cheerful atmosphere in the Boston market. Sentiment was helped also by increased deliveries of wool tops in the Boston market and by firmer fine wool prices abroad.

Estimated receipts of domestic wool at Boston reported to the Boston Grain and Flour Exchange during week ended March 17, amounted to 198,900 pounds compared with 454,100 during the previous week.

Stocks—Declines ranging from 1 to 3 points and averaged 1.9 points down. Labor difficulties inspired caution. There was an active dip near noon, but the downward run was sluggish. Stales totaled 1,539,060 shares.

Bonds—Profit-takers rushed in and bonds wilted four-tenths of a point. The slump was laid to labor troubles. Federals were mildly mixed at the close. Sales decreased to $14,065,000.

Curb—Trading was started at a lower level and closed with many losses ranging to 3 points. Offerings were light. Steady spots prevailed in metals and oils. Sales increased to 286,000 shares.

Wheat—Misgivings about labor unsettled wheat, and prices slid off to a maximum of 1¾. The loss was trimmed later as the market strengthened. Other grains were down. May wheat sold at 87, July at 87⅛

Cotton—An early decline of $1.25 a bale was partially recovered on reports that the Bankhead bill had been passed. March sold at 11.91. The general market dropped 13 to 17 points. May closed at 11.96.

Rubber—Crude rubber futures closed easy, 45 to 48 points lower. March sold at 10.66, May at 10.82.

Sugar—Raw sugar was lower. It declined another 2 points to the basis of 3.05; refined was unchanged at 4.50.

Gold—Bar gold sold in the United States at $35 per ounce. It sold in London at 136 shillings and 6 pence.

Dollar—The United States dollar was steady on foreign exchanges. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $5.10½ to the English pound; 6.58 cents to the French franc, and 39.55 cents to the German mark.

Wheat Losses Trimmed by Late Recovery

Labor Troubles Blamed in Declines; Other Grains Point Lower.

Chicago, March 19 (AP).—Misgivings about labor unrest did much to unsettle the wheat market today, and bring about lower prices.

A maximum setback of 1¾ cents a bushel for wheat took place, but much of this loss was overcome later owing in considerable degree to cotton market rallies that accompanied House adoption of the Bankhead cotton control bill.

In some quarters, enactment of a similar measure to govern wheat production has been forecast.

Wheat Closes Nervous.

Wheat closed nervous, ¼ to ⅜ under Saturday's finish; corn, unchanged to ¼ lower; oats, ⅛ to ¼ down, and provisions varying from 20 cents decline to an advance of 2 cents.

Liquidating sales on the part of holders of futures dominated the wheat pit most of the day, with stop-loss orders forced into execution at times.

The tendency to let go of wheat holdings received much of its impetus from downturns of stocks, silver and cotton. Most of all, however, attention of wheat traders focused on uncertainties regarding a threatened big strike affecting the automobile industry.

Denials of Damages.

A handicap to friends of higher prices was Kansas denials that wheat crops had been seriously injured by recent wind storms and dust. Notice was also taken of a substantial increase of the amount of wheat on ocean passage, with word Liverpool stocks of wheat had been so much enlarged that there was difficulty in obtaining storage space.

On the other hand, a new liberal decrease of the United States wheat visible supply helped wheat prices to recover in part as the day drew to an end.

Commodities Decline After Making Peak

New York, March 19.—The Daily Weighted Price Index, compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., reached a new peak for this year on Monday of the present week when it stood at 110.24. Some reactionary trends in the grains and other markets, however, pulled the index down on succeeding days, and on Thursday, March 16, it stood at 109.56, only .04 points above the same day of the previous week. The latest index compares with 109.08 a month ago and with 80.50 for the same day two years ago. A year ago at this time the general bank and business holiday was still on.

The following table presents the Dun & Bradstreet Daily Weighted Price Index of 30 basic commodities, compiled from quotations furnished by the United Press, since February 1, 1934, and the corresponding periods of the preceding year. (1930-1932 equals 100):

Sears-Roebuck Sales Up.

New York March 19 (AP).—Sears-Roebuck were reported today as showing a higher percentage of increase over 1933 than those of February. Montgomery Ward had a 52.2 per cent increase in February over the same month of last year and Sears-Roebuck reported a 28.9 per cent gain.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil today broke under increased liquidation, promoted by the weakness in cotton and grains, but rallied partially on covering, following the passage of the Bankhead cotton control bill by the House. Final prices were 3 to 8 points net lower. Sales were 74 contracts. Bleachable spot nominal: March closed 5.00, May 5.20, July 5.45, September 5.65, October 5.72.

Goods Markets.

New York, March 19 (A.P.).—Better inquiries for cotton goods and a moderate increase in sales were reported today. Little change was noted in wool goods. It is difficult to pick up spot lots of light colored goods for men's wear. Silks are in fair demand with printed lines doing best. Rayon fabrics show an easing trend in finished lines. Burlaps were in light demand.

Steel Operation Is Hit by Labor Uncertainties

Rail and Other Demands Offset Some Effects of Handicap.

Cleveland, March 19.—Uncertainties regarding labor are casting a pall over the production phase of steel, as well as the major consuming outlet, the automobile industry, states the magazine.

This is offset in considerable degree at the moment by railroad and miscellaneous demands. But whether the steel industry has passed the peak in the spring bulge of production, or merely is in a shallow valley, depends on adjustments in the labor situation.

The unsettlement has penetrated deeply enough to cause Ford output to level off and Chevrolet to reduce its assemblies slightly in the past week. Releases from many automotive consumers have tapered off moderately.

Operation Varies Little.

Trustworthy reports to Steel indicate thus far steelworks operations have varied negligibly. Predictions made by other sources at the beginning of last week that the rate would be sharply curtailed proved exaggerated, because capacity scheduled to be taken off remained in production.

Actually the rate was 50 per cent, a loss of 1 point from the preceding week. Gains at Pittsburgh and eastern Pennsylvania practically offset weakness at Chicago and in New England. For this week, Pittsburgh and Youngstown mills indicate a recession, with other districts approximately unchanged.

Faced by prospects of higher costs steelmakers are not urgently seeking committments for second quarter. They estimate that with a 10 per cent proposed reduction in hours of labor there will be need for about 12 per cent more workers and in that event foresee a shortage of skilled labor.

Halts in Shipping Few.

Suspension of shipments to automobile manufacturers have been relatively few, though lighter specifications are being issued. The chief improvement in the market emanates from railroads which are releasing rails, cars and material recently awarded. This has lifted rail production at Pittsburgh, Chicago and Buffalo. New rail orders in the week include 18,000 tons for three Western lines.

Structural shape awards last week increased moderately to 17,203 tons. Though the total so far this year—202,247 tons—is nearly twice that last year, slowness in construction is reflected by comparison with the average of 454,000 tons in the same periods in five years, 1927-31. Some larger tonnages are pending for early action. For a sanitation project at Cleveland 2,500 tons of concrete bars have been awarded.

The first orders for steel barges placed at Pittsburgh in many months call for 1,000 tons of steel. The farm equipment industry is operating at about 40 per cent, its best rate since 1930. A leading manufacturer of electric refrigerators has the best production schedule in its history. Heavier miscellaneous and export demands for tin plate contribute to tin plate mill operations at 80 per cent.

Some Scrap Reacts.

Prices of some grades of scrap have reached to the heavier offerings at recent peak levels, but Steel's scrap composite registers another gain of 8 cents to $12.41. Bethlehem Steel Co. has purchased 25,000 tons for its Lackawanna, N. Y., mills which are resuming rail production.

Beehive furnace coke is off 25 cents a ton. With consumers evidently stocking up, 109 more ovens were lighted last week, bringing the number active to 1,589, identical with March, 1931. Bessemer pig iron has been reducted $4 a ton at Birmingham. Ferroalloy prices have been extended for second quarter. Ford Motor Co. is preparing an inquiry for iron ore, which may establish the season's prices.

Steelworks operations last week advanced 1 point to 35 per cent at Pittsburgh; and 1 to 2 points to 32 to 33 per cent, eastern Pennsylvania. The Chicago rate was down 1½ points to 48½ per cent; other districts remaining unchanged.

American mills' share of a 40,000-ton steel pipe order anticipated from Russia has been increased from 16,000 to 28,000 tons. Tata Iron & Steel Works, India, has ordered 221 steel mill rolls from Pittsburgh makers, such orders previously going to England. Iron and steel consumption in Great Britian is rising, as shown by Steel's cabled reports. Reduced to a daily average basis, steel ingot output in February rose 7.8 per cent; pig iron, 4 per cent; imports were up 13.9 per cent, while exports declined 3.9 per cent.

Steel's iron and steel price composite holds at $32.40, and the finished steel index, $51.10.

Gains Increase In Dry Goods Distribution

Expectations Called Highest in Past Decade; Trade Becomes Cheerful.

New York, March 19.—At no time in the past decade have conditions in the dry goods trade elicited higher expectations for a year of profitable operations.

Starting less than 12 months ago, the expansion was broad in both production and distribution and continued almost uninterrupted.

High records were established one month only to be superseded in the month that followed, so that despite the poor showing of the first quarter some stores reported profits in 1933 for the first time in three years, while the majority showed losses curtailed sharply or were just emerging from a four years' sojourn in the red.

Cheerfulness Is Growing.

Growing cheerfulness now pervades all branches of the trade, as ever the index points to a more rapid expansion during the spring and summer months.

The important feature of the continued gain in sales this year is that any increases above the general level of 1933 will be magnified greatly in income accounts.

While sales reached their lowest level in the first half of 1933, the recovery in the latter part of that year resulted in a striking improvement in store earnings.

Expenses Under Control.

Expenses finally were brought under control, even allowing for higher operating costs under the NRA, and the halt in the general price decline, which persisted for more than three years, eliminated the greater part of inventory markdown.

The widening employment, the release of impounded funds, and the substitution of another unemployment relief plan to replace the CWA have removed all anxieties regarding the continued broadening of consumer purchasing power, according to a survey of the dry goods trade, which has just been completed by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.

British Plants Speed Up Rise In Industries

Generally increased production throughout British manufacturing industries during 1933 is indicated in Board of Trade indexes just published, according to the Commerce Department's Division of Regional Information.

In contrast to the usual recession of the manufacturing index for the third quarter, there was in 1933 an actual, though slight, rise in production during the period when the summer slack normally occurs. The improvement from the third quarter was accordingly not so pronounced as in the preceding year, though production in the final quarter was recorded at the highest level since the beginning of 1930, it was stated.

It was 5.6 per cent above the composite for third-quarter manufacturing and 10.8 per cent above that for the fourth quarter of 1932; it reflected considerably greater activity than in either of these earlier periods in iron and steel and nonferrous metal working and also more business in other lines.

Foreign Trade Of Panama Is Cut Sharply

That Panama's external trade has been sharply curtailed since the beginning of the present world depression is revealed in a report to the Commerce Department from Acting Commercial Attache A. Cyril Crilley.

The decline in the republic's foreign trade which began in 1930 continued through 1933, with the result that Panama's imports for 1933 were 39.5 per cent below the average for the past five years and exports were 30.4 per cent below the average for the same period.

Imports during 1933 were valued at $9,203,000 compared with $8,853,110 in 1932. Exports amounted to $2,250,614, an increase of $237,851 over the preceding year, but a decrease of $358,000 as compared with 1931.

The United States accounted for 57.6 per cent of Panama's total imports in 1933; the United Kingdom, 8.4 per cent, and Japan, 8 per cent, as compared with 62 per cent, 8.8 per cent and 3.8 per cent, respectively, in 1932.

Muskrat Pelt Sale Gains in Maryland

Chestertown, Md., March 19 (Spl.). With the muskrat season closing in Maryland today, buyers of skins have ten days in which to dispose of their purchases from trappers who have brought hides to this Eastern Shore central market from all parts of the nine-county area as well as from Delaware.

Though not many pelts have been caught in Kent County, more were brought here than for several past years, according to Morgan Bennett, one of the largest buyers on the Delaware Peninsula. He has 4,000 pelts on hand not yet disposed of and it is said as much as $6 is being offered by city markets for black pelts, which go into the making of Hudson seal coats.

However, an average of $1.80 for blacks and $1 for browns has been paid trappers by buyers during the waning season and, altogether, early-season prospects for a bumper crop of muskrats have been verified by the large catches on the lower Eastern Shore, the majority of skins having been brought here for sale.

Norfolk's Shipping Nearing New High

Norfolk, Va., March 19 (Spl.). March may hang up a new shipping record that will be greater than any month since 1929, if the pace set during the first 17 days of the month is maintained to the last day. The record so far shows 60 shipping vessels engaged exclusively in foreign trade, as having entered through customs. This is the greatest for the period mentioned for the month since 1929.

It is almost an increase of 50 per cent over March, 1933, the figures for that month, for the period stated being only 37. In February, which was considered an excellent month in shipping, the number of vessels clearing through customs for the first 17 days were 50, and in January for the same period, 37.

The figures do not include intercoastal or coastwise ships. The coastwise traffic, of course, was four times as great as that of vessels engaged in foreign trade.

U. S. Receipts Now Exceed Total in 1933

New Taxes Swell Income to $2,132,545,000; Expenditures Up.

(Associated Press.)

Government receipts for the 1934 fiscal year, which ends June 30, yesterday reached $2,132,545,000—or more than was collected in the entire fiscal year of 1933 when receipts came to $2,079,696,742.

New taxes, including those on agricultural processing and distilled spirits, were important contributors to the larger revenue.

Income tax collections for the fiscal year to March 16, the latest day available, were $482,212,000 as against $453,007,000 last year.

Actual collections, however, have exceeded $150,000,000 but will not show on the Treasury's daily statement until checks have cleared and the cash is actually on deposit.

Expenditures for the fiscal year to date were $4,589,680,000, as compared with $3,595,878,000 last year. This year's deficit was $2,457,135,000 as compared with $2,234,280,000 in 1933. Emergency expenditures during the fiscal year were $2,652,216,000, or more than the deficit.

New Zealand's Pig Industry Is Improving

Exports of frozen pork from New Zealand to the British market have registered a notable increase during the last two years, according to Vice Consul W. W. Orebaugh, Wellington, in a report made public by the Commerce Department.

Shipments increased from 115,915 hundredweight valued at £246,045 in the 1931-32 export season to 200,288 hundredweight valued at £393,726 in the 1932-33 season. Statistics for the current season, the report states, are not yet available, but they are expected to show as great an increase as the preceding years.

New Zealand, the report declares, undoubtedly has great possibilities for the development of the pig industry. The country is the largest exporter of dairy products in the world, and although it furnishes about 20 per cent of Britain's butter requirements, less than 1 per cent of British pork imports are of New Zealand origin.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Carpet Wools—Demand for carpet purposes is dull, but larger quantities are going into the production of overcoats, topcoats and tweed men's wear, according to trade reports.

Paper—Reports from Middle Western sections indicate an improved demand for fine papers. Business in this grade is comparatively slow in the East. The movement of Kraft wrapping paper is described as fair.

Chemicals—Leading items for industrial use show an upward price trend. Glycerin quotations have been marked up following advances in cream tartar, tartaric acid and the minor mercurial salts.

Studebaker Production Up.

South Bend, Ind., March 19 (AP).—Studebaker Sales Corporation of America today reported more than 8,500 orders for March shipment and the hope that the company's first six months of 1934 will be its best since 1929. Paul G. Hoffman, president, said that the company will have made 34,363 cars of its 1934 line by March 31; it was introduced in October. Production for the same period a year ago totaled 14,957.

Judge Sheriff's Funeral Today At Bladensburg

County Policemen to Act as Pallbearers for Marylander.

Funeral services for Judge J. Chew Sheriff of the Prince Georges County Police Court will be held today at 2:30 p. m. at St. Luke's Protestant Episcopal Church, Bladensburg. The Rev. Dr. Robert Lee Lewis, pastor, will officiate. Interment will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

County policemen will act as pallbearers. Those serving will be Sergt. Ralph Brown, Officers Albert Anderson, Claude Reese, Elon Turner, Oscar Beall and William E. Clifton.

Honorary pallbearers will be Judge Joseph C. Mattingly of the Prince Georges County Circuit Court, Chief of Police J. J. Crowley, J. Enos Ray, State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, County Commissioner George N. Palmer, T. Howard Duckett, Nicholas Orem, superintendent of schools; Brice Bowie, M. Hampton Magruder and Frank B. Smith.

Hundreds have paid tribute to the memory of Judge Sheriff since his death at Sibley Hospital Saturday night, following an attack of pneumonia and an abdominal operation. His remains are at Gasch's funeral parlors, Hyattsville.

Appointed to the bench in 1927, he was the first judge of the police court. Born at Landover, Md., 70 years ago, he made his residence here until his death. He was one of the leading political figures of Prince Georges County.

Virginia Socialist Convention Called

Committee Sets Session for April 21-22.

Norfolk, March 19 (AP).—A State convention of the Socialist party of Virginia was called for April 21-22 in Richmond at a meeting of the State executive committee of the party here yesterday.

Herman R. Ansell, of Richmond, State chairman, presided. Other officers present were J. Luther Kibler, Newport News, secretary, and David George, of Richmond, organizer. Nearly 20 committee members were present.

A resolution was adopted declaring the greatest need of the country today is for passage of a National unemployment insurance act.

Prince Georges Plans Colored Health Week

In accordance with a movement started by the late Dr. Booker T. Washington, the period April 1 through April 8 has been set aside in Prince Georges County, Md., as "Negro Health Week," it was announced yesterday.

Letters are being sent from the office of Dr. A. B. Hooton, county health officer, to all schools, parent-teacher associations and other interested organizations asking that appropriate exercises be held during this week. W. S. Taylor, of the Bowie Normal School, is in charge of the work.

200 Middies Confront Search For Jobs as Navy Cuts Berths

Commissions Are Limited to Half of Class; Vinson Bill Offers Hope.

Annapolis, Md., March 19 (Spl.).—At least 200 midshipmen due to be graduated from the Naval Academy in June are wondering whether Congress will find the money to commission them, or if they will share the fate of some associates in the class of 1933, who were discharged to seek careers in civil life because of insufficient vacancies.

Passage of the Vinson bill for building of more ships apparently offers their only hope. Academy officials said today that they are proceeding under the mandate of last year, when commissions for only 50 per cent of the graduates were authorized. The selections were based on final scholastic standing. The class has a roll of 464, which means that commissions will await 232.

Whatever happens, there is a chance for a few to take the alternative of going into the Marine Corps as second lieutenants, or into the Supply Corps as ensigns, as has been the case for a number of years. Last year 20 went to the Marine Corps and 7 to the Supply Corps.

Those who failed to get commissions were awarded bachelor of science degrees. Many of this group promptly found employment at airports or airplane plants, or entered other industrial lines.

Prince Georges Board to Study Jobless Aid Tax

State Relief Director to Present Program at Hearing Today.

Harry Greenstein, Federal relief administrator for Maryland, will appear today before the Prince Georges County commissioners to urge the levying of an unemployment tax.

Under the provision of a bill passed by the recent State Legislature, he will ask that a tax of 8 cents be placed on every $100 of real estate.

This, Greenstein said, will be the first move in a State-wide campaign to put the unemployment tax in effect. He will appear before the commissioners of every county in Maryland, urging adoption of this program.

The idea behind the visit, it has been pointed out by the relief administrator, is to find a substitute for the rapidly demobilizing CWA forces. In Prince Georges County the number of families on relief rolls is startling, he declared.

Ormond W. Phair, president of the board of commissioners, although not committing himself, has spoken doubtfully about public reaction to such a move.

In view of the meeting held by the County Taxpayers' Association last Tuesday at Upper Marlboro, to convince the commissioners that taxes must be reduced, the new proposal is expected to cause considerable consternation.

At last Tuesday's meeting it was declared that the realty assessment of $1.08 paid during the past year, must be reduced if disastrous results are to be avoided.

121 Jefferson Negroes Attend Adult Classes

Charles Town, W. Va., March 19 (Spl.).—There are 121 colored students in CWA adult education classes in Jefferson County, according to the Federal relief headquarters here.

Matron Pleads Not Guilty to Killing Rival

Charlottesville Woman to Go on Trial March 30 in Triangle Case.

Charlottesville, Va., March 19 (Spl.).—Arraigned today, Mrs. William P. Casey pleaded not guilty to murdering Mrs. Elsie B. Ray, supposed 25-year-old rival for the affections of her husband. Trial was set March 30.

Indications are that the defense will claim Mrs. Casey was temporarily unbalanced when she shot Mrs. Ray, January 9.

Judge Dabney was informed that Charles Henry Smith, Alexandria attorney, will substitute for George Walker, of Albemarle, in the defense.

The accused was accompanied in court today by her mother, Mrs. Gable Munday, of Clarendon, and the Casey's 2-year-old daughter, Polly Ann.

U. S. Selects Site For Cape Henry Memorial Shaft

Norfolk, Va., March 19 (Spl.).—A 100-foot square site on a tall sand dune opposite the old Cape Henry Casino has been set aside by the War Department for a permanent memorial to commemorate the landing of the first settlers.

Ceremonies of the annual Cape Henry pilgrimage on April 26 will be held there. CCC workers at Fort Story have been instructed to clear the site and surround it with a brush-wood fence.

Detailed plans for the memorial shaft, to be erected under sponsorship of the Assembly of Tidewater Virginia Women, must be approved by the War Department.

Burns Kill Woman, 81.

Clarksburg, W. Va., March 19 (Spl.).—Burns suffered when she fell against a stove and her clothing ignited at the home of a daughter, Mrs. Saba Lewis, at Saltwell, have caused the death of Mrs. Mary Bunner, 81, widow of Joseph Bunner.

Red Men to Convene.

Lynchburg, Va., March 19 (Spl.). Red Men from Altavista, South Boston and Danville will come here April 7 to attend a District convention.

Seventeen Others Saved Following Mishap at Timber Lake, Va.

Lynchburg, Va., March 19 (AP).—In the first sailboat tragedy on record here, John McGraw was drowned yesterday afternoon at Timber Lake. Seventeen other persons narrowly escaped.

Taking advantage of a mild afternoon the party went for a ride on the lake in Stanley Wileys' yacht. One hundred feet offshore the boat tipped over but righted iteself and Wiley quited passengers. The boat tipped again and capsized.

Some of the passengers were thrown into the water, others clung to the hull and masts. McGraw and another youth with two girls struck out for shore. McGraw was last seen a short distance from the bank. The others obtained help and were taken to a cabin.

It was not until some time later that McGraw was missed. The body was recovered in about 18 feet of water.

Movies Shown as Evidence In Patent Infringement Suit

Clarksburg, W. Va., March 19 (Spl.).—Motion pictures were exhibited as evidence today in Federal District Court here.

They were introduced by the plaintiff in a patent infringement suit of the Akro-Agate Marble Co. against the Master Marble Co., both of Clarksburg, which started before Judge William E. Baker four days ago. Slow motion pictures depicting Akro-Agate Co. machinery in operation were shown in the court room.

The Master Marble Co. was established by former members of the Akro-Agate concern, and the latter alleges it has infringed on patent rights in manufacturing methods. Both make playing marbles for children.

"I do not wish to deprive the higher court, in the event of appeal, of any testimony which counsel for the plaintiff may offer," Judge Baker said. "I shall watch the pictures out of curiosity, but they will in no way affect my judgment of this case."

Town Drafts Its Officials

Smithburg, Md., Voters Find Blank Ballots Awaiting Them at Polls So They Write In Names and Surprise Their Neighbors.

Smithsburg, Md., March 19 (Spl.). Charles I. Wolfinger, merchant, found himself the new burgess of Smithsburg tonight, much to his surprise, after one of the most unusual elections in Washington County history.

Until the polls opened this morning no one was willing to accept the nomination for burgess, assistant burgess and three commissioners. It became necessary for the voters to write the names of persons they desired for the five posts. Only 48 votes were cast. Wolfinger received 42. Robert Towson was elected assistant burgess. William Detrow, Hoy Newman and Robert E. Smith received the largest number of votes for commissioners.

A delegation waited upon Wolfinger to inform him he is the new burgess at $50 a year. He accepted.

Jacob E. Brenner, retiring burgess, who held the post several years, declined to be a candidate, as did other town officials. They said town finances had nothing to do with their decisions.

The closing of the branch of the Central Trust Co. here in 1931 tied up $30,000 of the town's funds, which are still impounded, and the town borrowed $26,000 on notes and bonds to finish its waterworks.

Election Today Ends Campaign In Cumberland

Koon and Legge Compete for Mayoralty; Pick 4 Councilmen.

Cumberland, Md., March 19 (Spl.). This city will elect a mayor and four councilmen tomorrow. Dr. Thomas W. Koon, who served five terms as mayor and was defeated by George Henderson two years ago, is attempting a comeback with the advantage of leading the vote in the primary, having received 4,071 votes against 2,716 for George W. Legge, attorney, and 1,194 for Jean N. Bourckel, who since has declared for Legge. About half of the registered vote was cast.

Koon and Legge were nominated. The Koon campaign is being managed by William C. Walsh, the Democratic leader in Allegany County, and former State Senator David A. Robb, who for years has been prominent in Republican ccuncils.

Mayor Henderson is backing the Legge fight with a number of prominent Republicans and Democrats helping him, among the latter being City Commissioner Charles F. Heller.

Two Factions Active.

The election is nonpartisan with no party designation on the ticket. Koon is a Democrat and Legge a Republican. Both have made a house-to-house canvass with scores of workers active.

On the Legge slate for council are Water and Light Commissioner Randolph T. Wishmyer and Police and Fire Commissioner Harry W. Matheney, who seek reelection, and Edgar Reynolds.

The Koon faction is backing Martin M. Connelly, former Commissioner Joseph H. Griffin and former Commissioner Harry Irvine for council, the latter having been with the Henderson faction two years ago.

Former Commissioner Harry L. Smith and Michael D. Reinhart, the other nominees for council, label themselves independents. Commissionerships will be designated by the new council.

The Legge organization has held the most meetings. Both sides have been broadcasting extensively.

The ballot contains a referendum on a $235,000 bond issue for interceptor sewers, the bonds to be sold to the Federal Government at 100 per centum of the principal amount, plus accrued interest. In this connection the Federal Government would make a grant of $90,000.

Both factions are pledged to the erection of a municipal lighting plant, should a survey show the project feasible and should the matter be favored in a referendum.

Darden Seat Primary Asked

Norfolk Democrats Plan Meeting to Select Candidate.

Norfolk, Va., March 19 (Spl.) Park P. Deans, Isle of Wight, chairman of the Democratic executive committee of the Second District congressional committee, has called a meeting for Wednesday, March 28, in the Norfolk City Council chamber.

Objective of the session is to fix a method of nominating a candidate for Congress to be elected in November, this year. A majority of the committee is understood to favor a primary in August, if opposition to Representative Colgate W. Darden, jr., appears.

Darden favors a primary, although he has not made a public suggestion to that effect. He is represented as feeling that the nomination should be open to any Democrat.

Lynchburg Graduates To Hear Capital Pastor

Lynchburg, Va., March 19 (Spl.). Dr. R. H. Miller, pastor of the National City Christian Church at Washington, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon June 3 at Lynchburg College.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Clues, or Something — By Harry J. Tuthill

INFORMATION THAT MAY BE CORRECT WAS WELCOMED BY GEORGE TODAY AS AN INQUIRING NEIGHBORLY EYE, TRAINED BY MAIL, WAS FOCUSED ON THE STRANGE WOMAN WHO LEFT A SMALL BOY WITH THE BUNGLES.
YES GEORGE, I GOT ONLY A GLANCE AT THE LADY BUT THAT WAS ENOUGH TO TELL ME SHE IS SPANISH AND HAS BEEN A DANCER.
MY WORD, HOW?
VERY SIMPLY. I KNEW SHE WAS A DANCER BY THE WAY SHE TURNED QUICKLY IN THE HALL AND SNAPPED HER FINGERS AS THOSE SPANISH GALS DO WITH CASTANETS.
THAT SOUNDS VERY REASONABLE.
ALSO I KNOW SHE WAS SENT HERE BY SOME MASTER-MIND WHO ARGUED WITH, AND NO DOUBT, THREATENED HER BEFORE SHE CAME HERE.
YOU MEAN THAT JUST ONE GLANCE TOLD YOU?
CERTAINLY! I OBSERVED THAT SHE WORE ONE TAN AND ONE BROWN SLIPPER. ONLY A BIG ROW AND THREATS, WOULD CAUSE ANY WOMAN TO MAKE SUCH A MISTAKE. SIMPLE, ISN'T IT?
VERY! LET ME THINK. SPANISH! A MASTER-MIND. H-MM!

JOE JINKS, Featuring Dynamite Dunn — Still Optimistic! — By Llanuza

WHEN JOE TRIED TO GET CLIFF LACEY TO AGREE TO LET DYNAMITE FIGHT THE TOUGHEST MAN .... KARL THE BUTCHER ..... FIRST, HE FOUND CLIFF SET ON JUST THE OPPOSITE IDEA
NO, JOE... THERE'S NO USE O' YOU ARGUIN' ...KARL'S GOIN' TO FIGHT DYNAMITE LAST
SO YOU SAY!... I SUPPOSE YOU'RE FIGURIN' ON DYNAMITE'S BEIN' TIRED BY THEN... AN' THAT TRAMP O' YOURS'LL HAVE A BETTER CHANCE
NO... IT'S FOR DYNAMITE'S SAKE... IT GIVES HIM A CHANCE TO MAKE SOME KINDA SHOWIN' BEFORE KARL PUTS HIM AWAY... OTHERWISE,...
PUTS HIM AWAY?... YOU MEAN TO SAY YOU THINK THAT BUM'S GONNA KNOCK DYNAMITE OUT?
THINK?... SAY, I KNOW IT!
LISTEN, YOU!... AFTER HALF A MINUTE AGAINST DYNAMITE, THAT PUNK WON'T BE ABLE TO LIFT A GLOVE
OH, YEAH?... DON'T WORRY ABOUT KARL NOT BEIN' ABLE TO LIFT A GLOVE ... HE WON'T NEED TO... THE REFEREE'LL BE LIFTIN' HIS GLOVE FOR HIM!

DICK TRACY — A Flight for Life

Walt Mason, Himself

Identification.

"His eyes were blue," one witness said, when asked about the skate who swiped the grocer's roll and fled, at an unseemly gait. "His eyes were blue, his whiskers brown, and he was 6 feet high, and I can promptly mark him down, if he ever he goes by." Another said, "He might have been 5 feet 4 inches tall; his eyes were of a brilliant green, his whiskers black, but small." "He had no whiskers," said a third, "his hair was almost white; he was a rather dwarfish bird, not quite 5 feet in height. His eyes were black and he was fat, he had a scent of booze, he wore an old-time stovepipe hat and busted Oxford shoes." "I saw the fellow run away," said one, "his clothes were green, his eyes were of a steely gray, and he was tall and lean. He had no hat upon his head and he was partly bald. I'll swear to everything I've said, if as a witness called." Some fellow pulls unlawful acts, his moral sparkplugs miss; a cop comes up to learn the facts and gets such stuff as this. A score of people saw the game that drew the copper there; but no two stories are the same, no two of them will square. Conflicting stories men impart to John Law every day; what wonder if, with broken heart, he jumps into the bay?

TO THE RESCUE
OF THE OVERPOWERED EDITOR AND DETECTIVE COMES NONE OTHER THAN THE LOWLY SCRUB WOMAN! WHO IS SHE AND WHAT INTEREST HAS SHE IN THE CASE?
GIVE IT TO 'ER!
THIS GUN'S JAMMED!
LET'S BEAT IT OUT OF HERE BEFORE WE'RE KILLED!
TRACY OPENS HIS EYES. THE SCRUB WOMAN GIVES HIM A GLASS OF WATER...
HERE
NOT CARING TO WAIT FOR AN ELEVATOR-OR USE THE STAIRWAY, AND THUS FACE THE POLICE GUARD IN THE BUILDING LOBBY. THE GUNMEN RACE DOWN THE CORRIDOR AND INTO THE COMPOSING ROOM.
THERE MUST BE A BACK STAIRS TO THIS PLACE!
GRAB A COUPLE OF THESE LEAD SLUGS. THEY'RE BETTER N NOTHING!
WINNIE'S PARTNER, DR. NOTTINGHAM, AND "SOUP" MURRAY DANCED CLOSE TO EACH OTHER— THEN "SOUP," TALKING TO HIS PARTNER, SAID, "HAVE Y'NOTICED TH' CONSERVATORY? THEY GOT BEAUTIFUL PALMS THERE. THE THIRD PALM FROM THE DOOR IS A BEAUTIFUL SPECIMEN."
"SOUP" MURRAY SAID THE THIRD PALM IN THE CONSERVATORY WAS A BEAUTIFUL SPECIMEN! IT ALL SOUNDS SO DUMB, OR IS IT A SECRET MESSAGE TO MY FRIEND HERE!
LA-DEE-DA— ISN'T THE MUSIC LOVELY?
I MUST BE DUMB! SURE, IT'S A MESSAGE ABOUT THE THIRD PALM FROM THE DOOR IN THE CONSERVATORY!! AND MY PARTNER SEEMS TO BE TICKLED ABOUT IT!
LA-TA-TA-TUM-
YOU'RE DIVINE! I'M GOING TO GIVE A BIG PARTY SOON IN YOUR HONOR!!
OH, YOU DARLING! I'D JUST LOVE IT!!
I'VE GOT TO BEAT HIM TO THE THIRD PALM IN THE CONSERVATORY— I'VE GOT TO GET THERE FIRST

Denmark Topic Of Travel Talk At Auditorium

Tonight's Lecture to Tell of Copenhagen and Other Cities.

Copenhagen, beautiful capital of Denmark and often termed "the Paris of the North," will be among the many interesting places to be described and pictured at the Masonic Auditorium tonight by Helge Petersen, authority on Danish affairs, who will conduct the eighteenth in a series of 20 illustrated travel talks sponsored by The Washington Post.

The capital of the Danes is situated on the island of Zealand, one of the larger in the group of nearly 500, which, with the peninsula of Jutland, comprise the kingdom of Denmark. Because of possible confusion with the British Dominion of New Zealand, however, the native spelling, Sjaelland, is frequently employed in designating the island. The same circumstance often gives the impression that "the land down under" was named for the older land, although it is more possible that the discoverer of New Zealand, Abel Janszoon Tasman, famous Dutch navigator, sought to honor the province of Zeeland, in the Netherlands, when he first saw the country in 1642.

Mr. Petersen's lecture will be featured by interesting glimpses of the past history of Europe's oldest kingdom as well as by vivid stereopticon views, in color, and by motion pictures of various scenes and activities in modern Denmark.

A nominal charge of 25 cents is made for admission to the lecture and tickets will be available at the Masonic Auditorium box office, New York avenue northwest at Thirteenth street, beginning at 7 o'clock tonight. The travelogue will be given promptly at 8:15.

Tito Schipa to Sing In Capital Today

Two Arias on Program of Metropolitan Tenor.

Tito Schipa, lyric tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, will be heard in a song recital at 4:40 p. m. today in Constitution Hall, under the local management of Mrs. Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey. Julian Huarte will be his assisting artist and accompanist.

Two operatic arias will have place on the program, one from Wolf-Ferrari's "Le Donne Curiose" and "Una Furtive Lagrima" from Donizetti's "L'Elisir d'Amore." Among the songs listed are "Sogno di Marzo" (Luporini), "La Violette" (Scarlatti), "My Lady Sleeps" (Furguele), "Pleading" (Kramer), "In the Luxembourg Gardens" (Manning), "Do Not Go, My Love" (Hageman), "The Nightingale" (Rimski-Korsakov), "Carovananella Notte" (Bellini), "Wsperanza" (Mancini), and "Serenata Matutina" (Schipa).

Julian Huarte will make two appearances as piano soloist, playing his own "Spanish Dance," Albeniz's "Granada," and two Chopin preludes—those in D flat major and A flat major.

Organist Rechlin Recital Tonight

National Church Program to Spur Choir Music.

Edward Rechlin, distinguished American organist, will give a recital at 8 o'clock tonight in the National City Christian Church. A pupil of Guilmant and Widor in Paris, Rechlin is thoroughly schooled in organ technique, and his services have been invaluable in emphasizing the importance of the organ as the instrument of religious and spiritual expression.

He is nationally known as an admirable player of Bach and other classical composers, having presented recitals from coast to coast.

Rechlin's appearance in Washington is sponsored by the Trinity Lutheran Church in the interest of better church music. His program will be as follows:

Allegro in D Major.....Handel
Sonatine.....Ritter
"Blessed Jesus, at Thy Word".....Krebs
"Thee, Lord, I Love With All My Heart"
Improvisation.....Krebs
Adagio.....Bach
"Jesus Suffering Pain and Death"....Bach
Fantasia and Fugue in A Minor.....Bach

B'nai Israel Nominations Due.

The Young People's League, B'nai Israel Synagogue, Fourteenth and Irving streets northwest, at 8 o'clock tonight will nominate officers. President Nathan Volkman will preside. A tennis and Sunday hiking club is being organized by Benjamin Tarshes, 1707 Lanier place northwest, and Morris Weingarten, 1808 Wisconsin avenue.

Auto Parking for customers of The Hecht Co.—E street between 6th and 7th—10c for the first two hours.

Radio Waves and Ripples

HAVING engineered a local coup of some magnitude, the WJSV minds are patting themselves on their collective backs today. They are starting a "Sports Review" series beginning April 1, to be heard every evening from 6:30 to 6:45, with Arch McDonald, popular baseball announcer, in charge.

Out-of-town games of Washington teams will be given a play-by-play account, and bowling, tennis, track and other sports events will be featured in season. McDonald, who was voted the most popular baseball announcer in 1932 during a National contest conducted by Sporting News, recognized organ of that field, was formerly with WDOD at Chattanooga, Tenn. He is now in Biloxi, Miss., where the Washington ball club of the American League is in training.

Sponsored by a local drug store chain, the program has been signed up for 52 weeks.

"HERE'S to dear old Boston,
The home of the bean and the cod;
Where the Cabots speak only to Lowells,
And the Lowells speak only to God."

The wag who thought that one up wasn't thinking of radio programs. But as you sit by your "5-foot bookshelf" tonight you may hear some Harvard culture first hand.

Harvard is scheduled for a forensic field day tonight when various notables will "break" long microphonic silences to speak over a C. B. S. hookup at 10:30 p. m. The Chief Justice of the United States, Charles Evans Hughes, will be the main speaker on the program, which is being held to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the birth of Charles William Eliot, famed former president of the university.

From his dignified position on the bench, Justice Hughes is probably the most revered and respected figure in National legal circles. Other Harvardians facing the microphone will be Charles Francis Adams, former Secretary of the Navy; Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard, and Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell, former president.

Justice Hughes will talk from the Washington studios of WJSV, while the other speakers will speak from the Sanders Theatre on the Harvard campus at Cambridge. The address will deal with the present state of education in America, with particular stress on its indebtedness to President Eliot's work. Eliot was president of Harvard from 1869 to 1909.

It's actually Robert L. Ripley who asks you to believe a lot of things. He is safe when fans can't answer back each Saturday night when he appears with B. A. Rolfe and the Terraplane orchestra at 10 p. m. over an N. B. C. hook-up.

Two new programs are being inaugurated today by N. B. C. Howard Phillips, baritone; Don Allen and his orchestra, and Martha Lee Cole, interior decorating expert, will open the Mohawk Treasure Chest for the first time over WRC at 10:30 a. m. . . . and the "Singing Stranger" goes on the air this afternoon at 4:15 p. m.

The Treasure Chest is to be filled with romantic ballads, gay tunes and helpful hints on house furnishing. The "Singing Stranger" is Wade Booth, baritone, formerly seen and heard with Eddie Cantor . . . in three editions of George White's Sandals . . . with Marilyn Miller in "Sally" . . . and in the Ziegfeld "Follies."

Jim McGrath of the local N. B. C. staff has concocted a new idea for his Morning Mail Bag program, which is heard each morning at 9 o'clock over WMAL.

He is now in the market for "fiddlesticks" . . . which, says Jim, are household hints to the housewife. Fans have already written him about a gravy ladle fastened to a roller, also nailing bottle tops, rough side up, to a board for scraping mud off your boots before entering a spotless kitchen.

Venerable, white-haired David Lloyd George, Liberal leader and war-time Prime Minister of Great Britain, will speak from London over a C. B. S. network today from 3:30 to 4 p. m.

The Welsh statesman will speak on the "Whither Britain?" series. Since 1890, he has been a member of Parliament from Carnarvon. He was a cabinet minister from 1905 to 1922, and was successively president of the board of trade, chancellor of the exchequer, minister of munitions, first lord of the treasury, and Prime Minister.

A comparative newcomer to the air . . . says Broadway's First Lord of the Keyhole . . . is a Washington girl, named Thelma Nevins. She will sing on three major programs tonight . . . with Reisman, Harold Stern's Band and with Vallee from his show in Hollywood.

Another newcomer, Don Douglas, who replaced Arthur Godfrey on WMAL's Breakfast Club, has been on the job only six weks . . . and his popularity is increasing. Business, we are told, has increased 25 per cent during the last week.

Whitecaps.

WRC—Premiere of the Mohawk Treasure Chest, featuring well-known ballads and household hints, 10:30 a. m.; Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, speaking on "Socialism Challenges Christianity," 11:45 a. m.; David Lloyd George, speaking from London, on "Whither Britain?" 3:30 p. m.; Ed Wynn, 9:30 p. m.

WMAL—Babe Ruth at the Yankees' training camp in Florida, 9:15 a. m.; "Fanal," a new opera by Kurt Atterberg, broadcast from Sweden by the Royal Swedish Opera Company, 2:45 p. m.; R. C. Atkinson, director of the Ohio Institute, speaking on "Ohio Forging Ahead," 7:15 p. m.; "Tough Baby," a new mystery on the Crime Club series, 8 p. m.; Edmund Lowe, movie actor, in a dramatic sketch, 10 p. m.

WJSV—Academy of Medicine, Dr. Samuel J. Kopetzky, of the New York Polyclinic Hospital, speaking on "Mastoid Diseases," David Lloyd George, 3:30 p. m.; Phil Cook and orchestra playing "Berceuse," from "Jocelyn," and the "Barcarolle," from Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffman," 7:30 p. m.; Philadelphia Studio Orchestra, playing "Sposalizo" and the Schubert-Liszt "Hungarian March," 9 p. m.; Ruth Etting, Johnny Green and Ted Husing, 9:15 p. m.; Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, "Die Fledermaus," "La Source," by Delibes, the "Meditation," from Massenet's "Thais," violin solo, and the "Rakoczy March" from "The Damnation of Faust," by Berlioz, 9:30 p. m.; Chief Justice Hughes, Charles Francis Adams, Dr. James B. Conant and Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell, on Harvard University program, 10:30 p. m.

SALLY SINGER, blonde Dutch maid from New York, who lives up to her name each Tuesday at 8 p. m. when she warbles with Leo Reisman's orchestra over an N. B. C. network.

Driver Indicted in Crash That Killed 11 Children

Palatka, Fla., March 19 (AP).—D. R. Niles, driver of the school bus in which 11 children were killed when it was struck by a train near Crescent City December 14, was indicted by a grand jury today on a charge of manslaughter.

A coroner's jury held the crash, in which more than a score of other children were injured, was due to Niles' negligence.

Father Coughlin Reported Improved

'Radio Priest' Stricken With Acute Indigestion.

Detroit, March 19 (AP).—The Rev. Father Charles E. Coughlin was much improved today after an attack of acute indigestion, suffered Saturday, and which left him too weak to make his Sunday afternoon broadcast. It was the first scheduled broadcast he had missed in eight years.

Suffering intensely and unable to assist himself, Father Coughlin remained in his study alone all Saturday night. He was found at 9 a. m. Sunday.

He still was in bed today.

Shopping News Denied 'Ad' Distributing Writ

San Francisco, March 19 (AP).—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals today upheld the constitutionality of an ordinance of the City of South San Francisco prohibiting distribution in automobiles, on porches or lawns of handbills and other printed or written advertising matter. Newspapers are exempted.
